THE WORK INCREASES FASTER THAN INCOME.

What the Annual Report of the Hospital Shows.

GREAT NEED FOR FUNDS.

PATIENTS INCREASED 500 PER CENT. BUT FUNDS ONLY 75 PER CENT.

Statistics That Show the Trying Situation at a Glance—Economy Administration During the Last Year—Invested Funds Amounting to $6,510.88, Only Produce $328.35—119 Contributors.

The annual report of the Hospital for 1897-98, issued today, contains details of the work of the year, most of which have appeared in The Press from time to time.

The most striking feature of the report is the comparison made between the work, income and expenses of the Hospital during the year just passed and during 1892-93, five years ago. The report says:

"A very brief review will show that during the last few years the growth of resources of the Hospital has not been commensurate with the growth of its work, and a comparison of the more important items of regular receipts and expenditures for the Hospital years 1892-3 and 1897-8 will strikingly show the disproportion.

The following figures show the numbers of patients and the receipts from the different sources mentioned in the two years referred to, and the ratio of increase or decrease:

Patients—Indoor, 1892-3, 112; 1897-8, 256; increase, 144. Dispensary—1892 3, 68; 1897 8, 428; increase, 360.

Receipts—From donations of money, 1892-3, $1,847.50; 1897-8, $3,818.90; increase, $1,971.40. Paying patients, 1892-3, $1,095.20; 1897-8, $1914.37; increase, $819.17. Hospital Sunday collections, 1892-3, $457.31; 1897-8, $319.31; decrease, $138. Totals—1892-3, $3,400.01; 1897-8, $6,052.58; increase, $2,652.57.

Thus it appears that while during the last five years the number of indoor patients has increased 130 per cent. and the number of dispensary patients has increased 500 per cent., the aggregate regular income of the hospital from the principal sources mentioned has increased only 75 per cent.

The increase in the principal items of ordinary expenditure affected by the number of patients treated are for medicines, provisions, and salaries and wages, and are as follows: Medicines, $456.83; provisions, $425.36; salaries and wages, $1,365.50. Total, $2,247.69.

These figures, which show a ratio of increase of expenditure for the items mentioned less than the ratio of increase in the numbers of patients treated, indicate economy of administration during the last year.

In regard to the immediate needs of the hospital the report says:

The invested funds of the hospital, aggregating $6,510.80, produced during the last year an income of only $328 35, and now, as always, the chief support of the institution must come from regular contributions.

The hospital has friends and the board is pleased to note the number increasing; but all do not realize its pecuniary needs nor manifest their interest in a practical way. Plainfield and North Plainfield have together a population approximating 20,000, including more than 3,500 voters, and in such a community surely more than 119 contributors of money should be found. The number should rather be expressed by thousands, and if during the coming year a general canvass for contributions be deemed best, it is hoped that the representatives of the hospital will meet a kind and considerate reception and generous response.

Ordinary current expenses of administration, however, should not alone receive attention. The number of patients at times reaches the limit of the capacity of the hospital, and the pressure for enlargement and additional facilities is constant. The hospital building now contains one ward for males and one for females, with a very limited number of separate rooms for private patients and special cases requiring isolation. Separate wards for medical and surgical cases, both male and female, are needed, and many will recall the annoyance and dissatisfaction frequently felt by reason of the lack of accommodations for the reception and treatment of cases of contagious disease. Such cases, as will be readily understood, cannot be admitted without peril to the lives or health of other patients, and the admission of any such case is forbidden by the constition of the hospital. The Board of Governers, however, recog-

GO TO SCHOOL TOO EARLY

STRANGE PRACTICE THAT SCHOOL BOARD HAVE TO COPE WITH.

In Some Instances Scholars Are Reported Going to the School House at 7:30 a. m.—Style of Window for New School.

The Borough Board of Education met last evening in regular session, but not a great deal of business was considered. One matter that engaged the attention of the board for sometime was that in reference to certain scholars who make it a point to come to school every morning about 7:30. This practice has become a nuisance and the board decided last evening that hereafter all scholars who persist in doing this will be sent home with a note from their teacher. The practice, aside from being a nuisance, is dangerous, for the scholars cannot get into the school yard, and they spend their time on the sidewalk and in the street. At that point the trolley cars pass on a switch and more than once the children have had narrow escapes from being injured. For these reasons the board has taken a decisive stand in the matter.

Another matter considered was that regarding the use of a certain kind of a window for the new school building now in course of construction. The special style of window was adopted and will be put in the new building. The favorable features of this new window are that it can be swung back and forth and can be easily cleaned on both sides, and at the same time allows of perfect ventilation. The board signed the contract with the firm making this window last evening. Nothing else of any importance was considered by the board.

FIRST OF THE STAR COURSE.

J. Williams Macy Entertained the Audience Very Cleverly.

The Star Y. M. C. A. course of entertainments were opened last evening in an auspicious manner. There was a large attendance of people and in the audience were seen many new faces, while the patrons were on hand as usual. J. Williams Macy, humorist and buffo-basso, entertained the audience, while Miss Carrie Dewey, of this city, assisted on the piano. Mr. Macy is an artist of great ability and his work last evening was of the highest order. He recited a number of poems and selections written especially for himself by well-known writers. Some of his selections were very pathetic and sad, while others abounded with humor. Mr. Macy had complete control of his audience throughout and could easily have entertained for a much longer period. Those in charge of these entertainments deserve great credit for the very excellent list of entertainers secured for 1898-1890.

PRESENTATION OF BOOKS.

A Gift Which Will Prove of Practicable Value to Miss Shinn.

Yesterday afternoon at the regular meeting of the Primary Teachers' Union there was a programme of special interest. After the devotional exercises and the teaching of the lesson, Miss Beeching, on behalf of the members, presented to Miss Julia Shinn, the city missionary from the First Baptist church, four valuable books and an autograph book containing the names of the members, which will assist her in her proposed work in preparing for foreign mission work.

Miss Beeching made a pleasant speech in presenting the books, and Miss Shinn in accepting them thanked the union most heartily for their acceptable gift. Following the presentation the members enjoyed a social time in which all bid Miss Shinn an affectionate adieu. Miss Shinn will leave the city in a few days for Newton, Mass., to prepare for her work in foreign fields.

A Summer in England.

A meeting of the Friends Association will be held tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. Aaron M. Powell will give an illustrated lecture on his recent trip abroad; subject, "A Summer in England," at the Friends meeting house, Watchung avenue. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

Says He Was Peacemaker.

Oliver Holmes, who was implicated in the affair at Marshal Wise's barn on Grandview avenue Sunday morning, called at The Press office this morning and stated that he only acted in the capacity of a peacemaker between his brother and the injured man.

DEMOCRATS READY FOR ORGANIZATION.

Enthusiastic Conference of Leaders Last Night.

PLANS WERE DISCUSSED.

PERMANENT ASSOCIATION TO BE FORMED TOMORROW.

Representatives From All the Wards Were Present—Democratic Association Will Probably be Formed After Constitution and By-laws are Decided—John M. Hillman Was Chairman.

An unexpected and very gratifying interest and attendance of representative Democrats from various sections of the city was shown last night in the meeting held in Councilman Moffet's office on North avenue for the purpose of deciding upon plans for the reorganization of the Democratic party in this city on a thorough, active working basis. The various wards were represented as follows by committees appointed by the chairmen of the last ward primaries:

First ward—Walter L. Hetfield, Joseph C. Blimm, George R. Wyckoff, John L. Force, John Angleman, William Gloak and Michael J. DeCourcy.

Second ward—John H. Hillman, James E Martine, Sylvester Sharkey, W. K. McClure, Leonard Spangenberg, Alfred Cox and James B. Guttridge.

The conference was called to order by Councilman Moffett, of the Fourth ward, and John M. Hillman, of the Second ward, was unanimously chosen as chairman. W. W. St. John was chosen as secretary.

M. R. Flynn, of the Fourth ward, who suggested the reorganization movement in the Fourth ward primary, which took the initiative in the matter, was called upon to explain the purpose of the meeting. Briefly, Mr. Flynn recounted the well-known lethargic condition of the party as it now constituted in the city—merely an empty title, to whose support now and then when primaries were held a few people accorded perfunctory aid. Mr. Flynn said he believed that the time was ripe for a thorough reorganization of the party machinery and that with a little effort a wonderful change could be brought about. Just what line of reorganization should be decided upon he had no decided opinions, but suggested that an association which would enroll every Democratic voter in the city and arouse his personal interest in the welfare of the party would be the proper method.

The secretary, who had in his possession a copy of the old constitution and by-laws of the defunct Democratic Association, read the essential parts of the by-laws to the meeting. They provide for the enrollment of every Democratic voter in the city, dues of 25 cents a year to be exacted from members. Honorary members from out of town, who have no voice in the business of the association, are priviledged to be elected. The officers are president, vice-presidents from each election district, corresponding secretary, financial secretary, treasurer and a number of committees such as executive, finance, printing, public meetings, canvassing and naturalization. It was stated that in a general way the rules and regulations of the old Democratic Association would probably serve, with some slight alterations and improvements to meet the present condition of affairs, the new organization that was to be formed.

Chairman Hillman also presented copies of the by-laws of the Kings County Democracy and the Shepperd Democracy of Brooklyn. Mr. Hillman, who was at one time closely identified with both organizations, and was, in fact, one of the leading organizers of the latter Democracy, gave a brief description of the way they were operated.

F. M. Bacon, of the Third ward, moved that a committee of one from each ward be appointed to draft suitable constitution and by-laws for the organization and report at the next meeting. The following were appointed: Councilman Walter L. Hetfield, Counselor W. K. McClure, F. M. Bacon and M. R. Flynn, the chairman to serve ex-officio.

On the suggestion that a committee be appointed to secure rooms, Councilman Moffett tendered the use of his office to the Democrats till a perman-

NIGHT OF MANY PRANKS.

HALLOW E'EN CELEBRATED BY THE RISING GENERATION.

Many Prosaic Citizens Arose This Morning to Find Their Property Turned Topsy Turvy by Lads of the Town.

There was feelings of fear and consternation among the city and borough last evening, for no one knew what the smaller generation would accomplish during the evening. It was Hallow E'en, and every boy who was old enough to comprehend anything at all, knew what that meant. Scarcely had the shades of night fallen when all over the city and borough could be seen groups of boys in consultation regarding the pranks which they had been planning for several days

All of the jokes cannot be laid to the small boy, for his older brother was much in evidence, and practiced pranks that were for beyond the hopes of the little fellow, and in some cases much trouble was caused.

A majority of the boys used false faces and wigs to conceal their identity while they carried out their plans. Of course, the gates had to come in for a share of trouble and this morning residents could be seen exchanging them in various parts of the city.

On Watchung avenue a trolley car was made to jump the track. This was one of the most serious jokes practiced, and it is said that a warrant is out for the arrest of the boys. The boys placed obstacles on the tracks and without any warning the passengers in the car were given a good shaking up.

Three carriages owned by different persons were wheeled into Tier's pond, and this morning their owners had some difficulty in getting them out. Various signs about the city and borough were exchanged. One sign on Somerset street, advertising California perfumery, was found in front of a beer-bottling establishment. A large wagon was placed on top of Montfort's photograph gallery on Somerset street. In this case the glass in top of the building suffered considerably.

Most everyone suffered the annoyance of having their doorbells pulled and in many cases there was to be found a goodly supply of corn and rice on the front porchers this morning. Tick-tacks were used to good advantage, and all of the one hundred and one jokes known to the boys were played in some way on innocent and unsuspecting people.

Hollow'een Parties.

In connection with Hollow'een there were several parties about town. One was given by Miss Edith Pruden, of East Second street. There were about twenty-five guests present and the evening was passed in playing all sorts of games. Another party was given by Miss Clara Williams, of Madison avenue, and games furnished the chief amusement. So far as the boys and girls were concerned the night was one of great pleasure and everyone indulged freely in all sorts of frivolities. Many people are glad the event is over, but when another Hollow'een rolls around the small boy and girl will be just as much in evidence.

A Soldier Sick

Word was received in this city last week by Mrs. Charles Beggs, of Warren street, that her brother, William Dennis, who before enlisting in the army was a machinist in Scott's, was lying very ill in a Philadelphia hospital. Saturday Mr. and Mrs. Beggs went to see their relative and found him very ill and weak. It is thought that he will pull through, however.

Gashed His Finger.

George Frazee, of Watchung avenue, caught one of his fingers in a piece of machinery yesterday and cut a gash in it to the bone. Frazee was putting a nut in the machinery, and it was started up before he was quite ready. The consequence was that the finger was caught, and rather than have the end taken off he pulled it out gashing it deeply.

Sent to Jail for 10 Days.

Martin Holmes, of this city, for whom a warrant was issued, charging him with stabbing Jules Berrek, of the borough, was arrested yesterday afternoon by Marshal Wise in the borough, and last evening he was tried by Recorder Long. Homes was committed to the county jail for ten days as a penalty for his offence.

Fair Prizes to be Distributed.

GOSPEL OF THE G O.P. HEARD IN BOROUGH.

Republican Mass Meeting Held in Saengerbund Hall.

SENATOR REED A SPEAKER.

HE REHEARSES WHAT GOOD THE REPUBLICANS HAVE DONE.

County Candidates Were Expected, But They Failed to Appear—W. W. Howland Was Made Chairman—Comptroller Gibson, of Newark, Devoted His Remarks to Crane and Senator Smith.

The Republican mass meeting in Saengerbund Hall last night was not the success it was intended to be because the candidates for the various offices who are to be elected this fall did not put in an appearance. It was expected that Howell, Cooper and VanDoren, the nominees for Congressman, Assemblyman and Sheriff, would be there to make addresses, but the only speakers were Senator Reed and Hon. John S. Gibson, comptroller of Newark.

The chairman was W. W. Howland, who opened the meeting in a few words, in which he urged upon the voters the importance of turning out in full numbers at the polls this year and depositing a straight ticket for the Republican party. He said that there was too much apathy existing in the Republican ranks in Somerset county; the voters were lukewarm and not alive to the great issues of the day.

Senator Charles A. Reed was introduced as the first speaker. The Senator's popularity was shown by the applause that greeted him, and the "tall sycamore of Somerset," as Mr. Howland said in introducing him, made a short speech, but one in which he placed before the voters the attitude of the Democrats in this present election.

In opening his speech Senator Reed rehearsed some of the changes that the Republicans have made in the administration of public affairs since their accession to office. Among them he mentioned the changes that have been made in the courts, rearranging the bench in many of the courts, and making an equal number of Democrats and Republicans to preside, as nearly as possible, instead of putting all Republicans in office as the opposite side would have done had they been in power.

Senator Reed spoke of the prison and almshouse reforms, and called attention to the fact that there are no coal combinations now. He admitted that the Republicans had spent money, but pointed out the fact that instead of repainting the Statehouse at Trenton every other week and spending money for Statehouse furniture, which was afterwards found in the politicians' homes, the money had been expended for lasting improvements that would stand as monuments of the party's carefulness and wisdom for years to come.

In closing, Senator Reed paid a glowing tribute to Foster M. Voorhees, whom he knew in school and college. He also mentioned the other nominees and predicted that when the sun rises next Wednesday morning Foster M. Voorhees will be elected Governor, and the entire Republican ticket will go in with him.

Hon. John S. Gibson, the second and last speaker was announced, and met with rounds of applause. He was a rapid talker and an eloquent speaker and presented the facts he desired to make known in a strong, forcible way. He talked for an hour and a half, rehearsed the former administration and showed up the alleged characters of Crane and Senator Smith. The speaker said that he was formerly a Democrat, and was a Republican only because he believed that was the better party.

Hon. Mr. Gibson, too, urged the importance of the campaign. He said that no prominent Democrat could be made to announce which side of the money question he stood on, whether for free silver or for gold, for they don't know which way they are going.

The Comptroller prophesied good times, as soon as this unpleasantness with Spain is over. To be sure, he said, it must be gradual, but it is surely coming. Mr. Gibson urged the election of the Republican ticket on general principles.

THEIR SEVENTH YEAR.

QUEEN CITY LODGE CELEBRATE AN AUSPICIOUS EVENT.

Anniversary Exercises Attended by a Large Number of Members—History of the Lodge—Smoker Followed the Business.

The seventh anniversary of Queen City Lodge, No. 226, I. O. O. F., was appropriately celebrated last evening in the lodge rooms on West Second street. There was a large number of members present and a short history of the lodge was presented for the consideration of all. There is now a membership of about one hundred and fifty, and there is nearly $1,000 in the treasury. The lodge is in a very prosperous condition and new members are constantly being taken in. At the meeting next Monday evening there will be initiation.

After the business of the evening was transacted the members enjoyed a smoker and a phonographic entertainment given by Salmon C. Baker, a member of the lodge. There was also a number of speeches by members of the home lodge and of visiting lodges, after which all adjourned to the banquet room where Messrs. Thaddeus Smith, Charles Randolph and William Barbour, the committee in charge, provided a bountiful collation for all. After the inner man was filled there were more speeches and the happy event was brought to an end after all had congratulated each other on the successful growth of the lodge.

COL. MORRELL TO TALK.

Democratic Mass Meeting for Colored Men on Friday Night.

A Democratic mass meeting will be held in Reform Hall Friday night, when Col. William Morrell, the well-known colored politician, who has received a great deal of attention in this campaign, will deliver a speech. Although it will prove entertaining and instructive to all classes of people it will be especially so to the colored voters. Col. Morrell has the reputation of being a vigorous speaker. It was he that created a sensation in the Democratic State convention by berating the management of the Republican party. Col. Morrell will probably stir up the colored men in Plainfield when they hear him.

A number of the Democratic county candidates are also expected to be present at the meeting. A special feature will be a cinematograph, which will throw Candidate Crane's picture on the canvass.

A HALLOW 'EEN SUPPER

Given by the Ladies' Aid Society of the Monroe Avenue Church.

A pleasant Hallow 'een event of last evening was the supper and entertainment given in Monroe Avenue church under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of which Mrs. LaRue is the president. The affair was arranged and given for the benefit of the church and was largely attended. Supper was served between the hours of 7 and 9 o'clock and nearly everything was disposed of. The menu was an excellent one and the large number of people who partook were loud in their praise of it.

During the evening there was a short and informal programme of music and recitations. Stephen Haff and L. A. Hummer, Jr., favored the audience with several excellent piano selections, while Mrs. Grannatt and Miss Foster gave readings and recitations.

ENTERTAINED AT EUCHRE.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. E. Lowe, of Park avenue, entertained the Monday Evening Euchre Club at their home last evening in a delightful manner. This was the first meeting of the club, which comprises about thirty members, and the affair throughout was one of great pleasure to all. The home was prettily decorated for the occasion and the hospitality of the host and hostess was proverbial.

The first and second prizes for the women were won by Mrs. Howard Fleming and Mrs. O. T. Waring, while H. M. Stockton and E. H. Ladd, Jr., were presented with the first and second honors for the men. Following the games refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed. The club will meet again in two weeks.

Won the Cake.

A Hallow'een party was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Jones in honor of their guest, Miss F. Jones, of Easton. Music was rendered by Miss Jones and Thomas Randall. Music and playing games were the features of the evening. There was a cake walk and the cake was awarded to the most graceful couple, Miss Dollie Bolsterli and Frank Jones. The lucky prize in the cake was won by Frank Schafer.

BUNCO MEN WERE ONCE ESTEEMED RESIDENTS.

How Plainfield Received a Rude Shock Last January.

RESPECTED BIG CRIMINALS.

THEY POSED HERE AS QUITE, SUBSTANTIAL BUSINESS MEN.

Spencer and Ludlum Lived in Quiet Style and by Their Demeanor in This City Made the People Regard Them as Estimable Residents—Story of New Years Eve Supper—His Attempted Escape

When the news that the man known as George Spencer, esteemed resident of Putnam avenue in this city, was arrested last January as he was about to board a steamer for Europe in Philadelphia to escape the minions of the law, Plainfield received a rude shock in its confidence in human nature. Posing here as a quiet, substantial business man, austere in a general way, though a perfect Chesterfield to those with whom he was acquainted, Plainfielders could scarcely believe the charge that he was the king of bunco steerers in this country and was a large dealer in gold bricks, etc., for the purpose of parting confiding agriculturists and their financial hoards of years of hard toil. But such he really proved to be and a few months ago he was sentenced to fourteen years in prison. Plainfield had forgotten all about the great bunco steerer until yesterday they read in The Daily Press of his escape to liberty.

Spencer alias Reed, alias Greenlage lived in elaborate style in a house on Carlton avenue, near Watchung, with spacious bow windows hung with lace curtains, and parlors well filled with bric-a-brac. Not far from the Reed house lived a family known as the Ludlums on Putnam avenue, who likewise seemed to be well-to-do and were the bosom friends of the Reeds. Subsequent events proved that Lou. Ludlum was the particular pal of Reed in his bunco practices.

There was a small party at the Spencer house last New Year's eve. Messrs. Speneer and Ludlum had returned home after a long absence.

Business had been good and the Merry Christmastide had been gaily celebrated. Only guests from out of town were bidden to the jollification.

Next day neighbors saw Spencer and Ludlum going down Putnam avenue for the last time, but they returned quietly and for three days following they were at home.

Then they took a trolley car to Netherwood and a day or two later came a despatch from Philadelphia saying that John Reed, alias George Spencer, alias John Greenhalge, of Plainfield and the United States at large, had been arrested by State Detective Whitney, of Massachusetts, and was awaiting requisition papers, on a charge of swindling farmers by the green goods and three card monte process.

Detective Whitney returned to Massachusetts to get requisition papers. Reed declined to say a word, but declared he must consult counsel.

Meanwhile, Mr. Ludlum disappeared. When Reed was arrested in Philadelphia he appeared to be making plans to go abroad.

MADDEN WAS KILLED.

Plainfield Man Was the Victim of a Railroad Accident.

The police have found a clue to the identity of the unknown man found dead along the Central's tracks at Cranford early Sunday morning. They think he is Wm. Madden, who lived in the Eight Row on West Front street.

Saturday night Madden, who is a machinist, told his wife that he was going to Bayonne to visit over Sunday, and was seen to jump a caboose. When he went away he wore a dark coat and vest and a pair of blue overalls, and although the body found at Cranford is too badly mangled to be identified by the features, the clothes worn answer the description of those worn by Madden exactly. The wife will go to Elizabeth today and view the remains. Madden has six children.

Theodore Stites, brother-in-law of Madden, visited the morgue this morning and identified the remains as those of Madden. They will be brought to this city tomorrow and interred.

—Today is the last opportunity given for registering in the city and borough, and every voter should see that his name is on the list.

ENTIRE GROUP CLAIMED

Our Commissioners Present their Ultimatum to the Spaniards.

REPLY TO BE GIVEN FRIDAY

A Written Statement Presented at Paris by Our Commissioners. The Debt to be Assumed Only Where It Represents Public Improvements.

Paris, Nov. 1.—The American peace commissioners, each of them carrying a portfolio containing records and personal memoranda, left their headquarters in the Continental Hotel for the meeting with the Spanish commissioners, at the foreign office, just before two o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The president of the Spanish commission, Senor Montero Rios, whose health at one time was so precarious as to threaten an indefinite postponement of the sessions of the commission, had so improved that he was able to attend the meeting.

The American commissioners presented a written expression of the purpose of the United States to take the entire group of Philippine islands and to assume such proportion of the Philippine debt as has been spent for the benefit of the islands or their inhabitants, in public works, improvements and permanent betterments.

It was also set forth that the United States would not assume any part of the Philippine debt which had been incurred by Spain for the furtherance of military or naval operations to quell insurrections of the natives.

After the presentation of the statement the session was brief and uneventful, and an adjournment until Friday was taken, to give the Spaniards time to formulate a reply.

Washington, Nov. 1.—The advices from Paris to the effect that the United States peace commissioners have demanded the cession to the United States of the entire Philippine group is in line with the instructions that have been issued to the representatives of the United States. Up to a very recent date the United States commissioners had no precise instruction upon this vital point.

Before they departed from Washington a majority of their number leaned towards a restriction of the demands as to the Philippines. But since then the president has become convinced that there is a great popular demand for the annexation to the United States of the whole Philippine group, and he is disposed to defer to that sentiment.

Besides, there is ground to believe that, in an unofficial manner, the commissioners have satisfied themselves that the difficulties in the way of annexation, so far as they depend upon the will of the natives, have been very much exaggerated.

It cannot be learned definitely what money consideration is to pass with the title to the Philippines. Indeed, there is reason to believe that even the United States peace commissioners have not yet been able to fix the amount exactly.

The Klondike Gold Fields.

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 1.—Ice was making on the Yukon and there was thin ice at Dutch Harbor when the steamer Portland, which has arrived here, sailed on October 11. At least a dozen river steamers are stuck on sand bars in the Yukon, and all will probably be held all winter.

The steamer Dawson City is a total wreck.

The Herman and Tacoma are stuck in the mud and the other boats are in such perilous positions that when the ice breaks up they may be ground to pieces.

All the treasure on the steamer Portland was one box of gold dust and nuggets, consigned to the Alaska Commercial Company.

Its value was not made known, but it is not believed to exceed ten thousand dollars.

Several returning miners were on the vessel, but they carried their treasure in the form of drafts, and were reticent regarding the amount.

New French Cabinet.

M. Dupuy, premier and minister of the interior.
M. Lebret, minister of justice.
M. De Freycinet, minister of war.
M. Lockroy, minister of marine.
M. Delcasse, minister of foreign affairs.
M. Peytral, minister of finance.
M. Leygues, minister of public instruction.
M. Deloncle, minister of commerce.
M. Guillain, minister of the colonies.
M. Viger, minister of agriculture.
M. Krantz, minister of public works.

WORK OF INQUIRY BOARD.

Examination of Camp and Hospital Still Going On

Knoxville, Nov. 1.—The members of the war investigating commission, who reached here Sunday, started early yesterday upon the investigation of Camp Poland near this place.

They visited the general hospital and the Fourth Tennessee regiment together, and then separated for the work in the other commands, General McCook taking the Second Ohio and Third North Carolina, General Wilson and Captain Howell the Sixth Ohio and the First West Virginia, and ex-Governors Beaver and Woodbury the Thirty-first Michigan and Sixth Virginia.

It was evident from the first that there would be comparatively little to do, the camp being new and well located.

More time was spent at the hospital than elsewhere. There are two hundred and fifty patients there, many of them suffering from typhoid fever, but it is claimed that the fever was imported.

The commissioners showed much interest in the report of three deaths last Saturday among the colored patients of the North Carolina regiment. Two of them were unexpected by the surgeons in charge, as the men were not considered seriously ill.

They seemed of the opinion that two had died of fright at seeing their comrades expire.

There were some complaints among the troops of the absence of stoves, and some of the soldiers confessed a desire to get home, but otherwise they seemed well satisfied.

There was a review of the troops here yesterday. The commissioners will visit every camp before hearing any testimony that may be offered concerning it.

WORKING ON ANNUAL MESSAGE.

The President Will Exercise Great Care in Its Preparation.

Washington, Nov. 1.—President McKinley has commenced formal work on his annual message to Congress. The president realizes that he has an exceedingly important state paper to draft and he fully understands that it will be scrutinized more closely, perhaps, than any similar document that has emanated from the White House during the past half century.

He has before him the data from the annual reports of the cabinet and bureau officers, and he will proceed to cull from them such information as will guide him in treating of the business affairs of the government.

In consequence of his work upon the message the number of callers has been greatly reduced. It was stated at the executive mansion that while the president does not intend to deny himself to all visitors while he is engaged in the preparation of the message, he will be obliged to deny himself to the general run of callers who flood the corridor day after day. Cabinet officers, members of Congress and those whose business require a personal interview were received as usual at the convenience of the president.

Federation of Women's Clubs

New York, Nov. 1.—Delegates from all parts of the state to the number of about four hundred met at Mendelssohn hall, No. 119 West Fortieth street, this morning, when the New York state Federation of Women's Clubs convened.

The convention will last four days and the general public will be admitted to the morning and evening sessions.

Many interesting papers will be read, followed by discussions. Reports and routine business will occupy the most of to-day, and an informal reception of delegates will be held at the Hotel Majestic this evening.

The election, around which centers much of the excitement of the convention, will take place on Thursday. The polls will be open until 5 p. m. There will be two sessions, and between them Mrs. Washington A. Roebling will give a luncheon to the delegates at Delmonico's.

The Case of Capt. Carter.

Washington, Nov. 1.—It is expected that the case of Captain Carter of the engineer corps will be disposed of this week.

The papers in the case are now with the president and have received his careful consideration.

The friends of Captain Carter have petitioned the president for a hearing to present some statements as to facts and law in the case.

This request has been granted by the president, and he will hear the case during the week.

Huge Gun-Carriages Completed.

Cleveland, Ohio, Nov. 1.—The Walker Manufacturing Company has just finished the first of the eleven carriages for the Buffington-Crozier disappearing guns, for which it was awarded the contract last April by the government.

A test shows that everything works with the smoothness and accuracy of clock work, the carriage being turned in five seconds. The carriage weighs 107,000 pounds, and the gun 32,000 pounds.

Earthquake at Norfolk.

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 1.—A slight earthquake shock was reported in the western part of this city between four and five o'clock Monday morning.

Residents say that the vibrations were distinctly felt, being from north to south, and lasting for several seconds.

Telephone Stock Increased.

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 1.—The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company certified to the secretary of state yesterday that it had increased its capital stock from $5,000,000 to $8,000,000.

The liabilities of the company are $2,100,521.66.

Death of a Noted Actress.

London, Nov. 1.—Helen Faucit (Lady Martin), the English actress who retired from the stage many years ago, is dead. She was born in 1820, and was married in 1851 to Sir Theodore Martin, K. C. B.

A BUNCO KING ESCAPES

RULED GREEN GOODS TRUST

He Was Serving a Fourteen Years Sentence in the Massachusetts State Prison. He Was Taken to Worcester to Consult Lawyer and Eluded His Keeper. Reed Was a Noted Confidence Man.

Worcester, Mass., Nov. 1.—John Reed, the notorious bunco king, who was serving a sentence of from eleven to fourteen years in the state prison, escaped from a keeper at the Sherwood House in this city early yesterday morning.

Reed was brought to this city by Keeper J. L. Abbott of the state prison for consultation with his counsel, Colonel W. A. Gile of this city.

The keeper took his man to the Sherwood House, where an appointment was made to meet Colonel Gile, and remained with the prisoner all the evening when Reed's wife, who came up from Boston, called.

Shortly before 12.30 o'clock Abbott left the room to go to an adjoining room, and when he returned about ten minutes later, found that his precious prisoner was gone.

A hurried search of the hotel was made, but no trace of Reed was to be found, and Abbott notified local police headquarters.

No trace of the famous prisoner was found after he left the hotel, and the local police and Abbott believe it possible that Reed caught the 12.29 a. m. train for New York and the West.

The local police are scouring the town and the police of all surrounding towns were telephoned a description of the man.

Abbott telegraphed the police of Springfield in time to intercept the man if he was aboard the western bound train.

Reed is thirty-nine years of age, five feet eight inches tall, weighs about 165 pounds, has light hair and light blue eyes, wore a brown derby hat, black overcoat with satin lining, blue suit, colored shirt with a red stripe and a white standing collar.

John Reed, alias George Spencer, alias John Greenhalge, was arrested at Philadelphia last January for swindling several Massachusetts farmers by the three-card monte and green goods games.

He was commonly known as the "prince of confidence men," and was reported to be one of an association of brainy, unscrupulous men who are believed to have formed a green goods trust with a capital of five hundred thousand dollars.

It was supposed that there were at least eight men in this trust. Their field of endeavor extended from Vermont and Massachusetts in the east, to Kentucky in the South and Indiana in the West. Traces of their nefarious progress have been visible in seventeen states.

In Indiana alone the unsophisticated gave up about $60,000 to the "Green Goods Trust."

For the Nicaragu Canal.

New York, Nov. 1.—A dispatch received by William R. Grace & Co. yesterday confirms the report that the Nicaragua Congress has granted to Edward F. Cragin of Chicago, Edward Frye and Frank Washburne a concession for the building of the ship canal.

The concession will take effect in October, 1899, when the Cardinas-Menocal grant, which was obtained in 1889 by the Nicaragua Canal Company, an organization with which Warner Miller is prominently identified, expires.

Mr. Grace said yesterday afternoon that the syndicate had not yet met, and he did not feel at liberty to tell the names of the capitalists forming it. He said, however, that C. P. Huntington was not interested.

Porto Rican Gets a Commission.

Washington, Nov. 1.—The first native Porto Rican to receive a commission in the United States army is Dr. Jose Lugo-Vina, who was recently appointed, after a personal consultation with the surgeon-general of the army and other officers of the war department.

Dr. Lugo-Vina was appointed to be an acting assistant surgeon and has already been ordered to report to Major Nathan S. Jarvis, brigade surgeon at New York, and to sail on the first steamship for Ponce, Porto Rico.

He has been a practicing physician in his native country and was appointed to the military service because of his expert knowledge of treatment for yellow fever and other diseases prevalent in the island.

More Indian Troubles

Washington, Nov. 1.—Word has reached the interior department of trouble threatened by a band of young Sioux on the Pine Ridge agency in North Dakota, who are reported to have started an organized movement for the forcible removal of Indian Agent Clapp from the reservation. There is nothing on file at the department that is averse to Agent Clapp. The agent is an army officer who is executing his duties satisfactorily and the question of removal or transfer is not to be entertained.

In Honor of Surgeon Gibbs.

Washington, Nov. 1.—The president has directed that the general field hospital at Camp Hamilton, Lexington, Ky., be known as the John Blair Gibbs United States Army General Hospital, in honor of Assistant Surgeon John Blair Gibbs, United States navy, who died on June 12, 1898, from wounds received in an engagement with the Spaniards at Guantanamo.

Presented to President Faure.

Paris, Nov. 1.—The United States ambassador, General Horace Porter, yesterday morning presented Mr. Ferdinand W. Peck, the United States commissioner to the Paris exposition of 1900, and the latter's colleagues, to President Faure.

THE CHINESE EXCLUSION LAW.

Washington, Nov. 1.—A new question in connection with the Chinese immigration laws has just been presented to the attorney general for an opinion. This is as to the application of the laws, as construed by the department of justice, in past opinions, to the wives and children of tender years belonging to Chinese now rightfully in this country.

The question was raised by ex-Representative Baker of Rochester, N. Y., who has appealed to the treasury department on behalf of a Chinese merchant living in Rochester, and generally known and respected there, who is now in a position to bring his family over.

One opinion of the attorney general holds that under section six of the laws of 1884, all Chinese persons shall be excluded from entry unless able to present a certificate such as is required by that law, and a later opinion goes further and holds that no Chinese person is entitled to such a certificate unless he belongs to one of the classes expressly exempted from exclusion—namely, merchants, students, or travellers for curiosity or pleasure.

As the Rochester merchant's family would not come under either of these heads, the opinions combined would, unless modified or explained, seem to exclude them.

The treasury authorities feel, however, that the attorney general may rule that the status of wives and minor children should be treated as determined by the status of the head of the family, and that it may be possible to permit the reunion of the Rochester merchant's family by this construction of the law.

The only thing to be guarded against in such a case is imposition for the purpose of evading the law.

Notable Nuptials at Savannah.

Savannah, Ga., Nov. 1.—The marriage of Miss Mabel Gordon and Mr. Rowland Leigh of Stoneleigh Abbey, England, was celebrated at noon yesterday at Christ church in this city.

The bride is the daughter of General W. W. Gordon, Porto Rican commissioner, and the bridegroom is the son of Baron Leigh of Stoneleigh Abbey. His mother is the daughter of the late Duke of Westminster.

He was born in 1859 and was educated at Trinity College, Cambridge, taking his degree of B. A. in 1882.

He was admitted a barrister of the Inner Temple in 1887 and was private secretary to the secretary of war, the Right Hon. Henry Campbell-Bannerman, from 1892 to 1895.

The records of the family date back to Sir Piers Leigh, who bore the standard of the Black Prince at Crecy, and whose son, Sir Peter, was slain at Agincourt.

Miss Gordon is a social favorite in Savannah. The marriage ceremony was performed by the Hon. the Very Rev. James Leigh, the dean of Hereford, assisted by the Rev. Robert White, pastor of Christ church.

Stoneware Trust Formed.

Akron, Nov. 1.—The combination controlling the production of white, black and salt glazed stoneware in the United States is an assured fact.

Three meetings recently held in Chicago, Cleveland and Akron resulted in a trust being formed along the lines of the nail trust. Twenty-six concerns are interested.

The combination, it is stated, was planned by the best legal talent in the country, and it is claimed the trust laws will not be violated.

The combination represents about 65 per cent. of the entire production of common stoneware in the United States.

The trust has advanced the market a half cent a gallon and in some instances one cent.

R. F. Kent of Akron is president, T. C. Robinson of Akron treasurer, and M. H. Linn of Zanesville is its secretary.

A Smokeless Powder Explosion.

South Acton, Mass., Nov. 1.—The powder house of the New York and New England Titanic Smokeless Powder Company was demolished by an explosion just before eleven o'clock yesterday.

Twenty men were employed in the building, all of whom escaped unhurt, except three, who were slightly injured in the rush to get out.

The cause of the explosion has not been determined, but a few moments previous to the trouble, the engineer noticed that something appeared to be wrong with the machinery, and he shut off steam and gave the danger signal in time to prevent loss of life. The loss will be $60,000.

The building in which the explosion occurred was about 150 feet long by 75 feet wide, and one story in height. The structure was almost totally demolished, and the machinery, including the engines and boiler, destroyed.

Hold Umbrella Low.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 1.—Two men were killed by electricity in the streets here yesterday in a peculiar manner. A terrific rain and wind storm was prevailing. Abraham Stummer was passing under an arc light in front of a store. The steel rod of his raised umbrella came in contact with the light, and the current passed down the frame into the hand of the carrier.

Stummer dropped dead and blue flames shot from his hand. The pavements and the soles of the man's shoes were wet.

Wrecked by a Hurricane.

Nassau, N. P., Nov. 1.—The schooner Jennie F. Willey, Captain Bulger, which sailed from Jacksonville on September 21 for Long Island Sound, encountered a hurricane on October 1, during which she was dismantled and her deck load blown off.

She drifted, however, and stranded on October 26 at Walker's Cay.

The vessel and cargo are a total loss. The crew succeeded in reaching the shore and subsequently came to this port.

ENGLAND AND FRANCE

Great Activity in British Naval Circles.

MARCHAND TO BE RETIRED

Reported Orders for Volunteer Mobilization. Artillery Corps Instructions. Reported Change of French Policy Concerning Africa. To Raise the Whole Egyptian Question.

London, Nov. 1.—The British naval preparations are being pushed with great activity. The British emergency squadron is assembling at Devonport with all possible speed.

Seven battleships and one cruiser have been thus far designated to join this squadron.

Officers and sailors have been hurriedly recalled from leaves of absence, several battleships and cruisers at Portsmouth are taking their full crews on board, and other warlike preparations are being made. A number of signal men on duty with the British channel squadron, which arrived at Gibraltar this morning, have been ordered home for service, it is presumed, on board the auxiliary cruisers, if the latter are required for active service.

A supposed Russian spy was arrested at a fort near Harwich yesterday morning. The man was already under surveillance and went to a redoubt, where he tried to obtain some information from a sentry regarding the fortifications.

He was promptly arrested and inquiries are being made regarding his antecedents.

It was asserted yesterday that the commanding officers of the London volunteer regiments have received orders to prepare for immmediate mobilization, and that the different artillery corps have been informed of their allotments to the forts on the southern and eastern coasts.

The Pall Mall Gazette yesterday afternoon said:

"England has been and even now is so near war that the government has carried its preparations to the farthest limit of the preparatory stage. It has been arranged to call out the reserves and militia, and to mobilize the volunteers simultaneously, and to form large camps at various important railroad junctions, where rolling stock and locomotives will be concentrated."

There was an unexpected gloomy feeling yesterday morning on the stock exchange, and the Paris Bourse, both these markets being influenced apparently by the aggressive tone of some of the French papers.

Paris, Nov. 1.—The Eclair says that it learns on reliable authority that the Fashoda question will be settled favorably to Great Britain by the recall of Major Marchand. France, the paper adds, yields all, reserving only the question of the right to the Bahrel-Ghazal district, which she does not consider as belonging to Egypt. The paper also says:

"M. Delcasse, however, has now decided to raise the whole Egyptian question, which should have been done from the first, thus avoiding the humiliation of yielding to the British ultimatum. When the question is thus enlarged, France will not be alone in its discussion with the Marquis of Salisbury. Egypt interests all the powers. Russia has promised M. Delcasse its most effective assistance, and, besides Germany has the biggest interest, in view of her East African possessions and trade in the far East, that the Suez canal should not become exclusively British, and is disposed to support Franco-Russian arguments for a definite settlement of the Egyptian question."

Work at Halifax.

Halifax, N. S., Nov. 1.—Every available shipwright in this city has been engaged by the naval authorities here, and orders have been given to prepare the battleships and other vessels for sea as soon as possible.

Saturday the men worked all day, something unprecedented in the dock yard here. The great activity displayed is the result of messages from the home authorities.

The battleship Renown, the cruisers Pelican and Cordelia, the gunboat Columbine, and two torpedo boats are now here and are being fitted out as soon as possible.

So far they have not been ordered away, but instructions to that effect are hourly expected.

A Yellow Fever Bark Missing.

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 1.—The whereabouts of the bark Maryland, on which, when at Havana, there were five cases of yellow fever and three deaths, is a mystery.

The Maryland sailed from Havana on October 13 for Baltimore against the protest of Dr. Brunner, sanitary inspector of the marine hospital service at Havana, who advised the captain to proceed to Tortugus quarantine.

The Maryland, had she entered the capes of Virginia, would have been held up at quarantine, but the officials yesterday said that nothing had been seen of the vessel, on which it is feared other cases of the disease have developed.

Sioux Threaten Trouble

Washington, Nov. 1.—Word has been received here by the interior department that a band of young Sioux on the Pine Ridge agency in North Dakota, have organized a movement for the forcible removal of Indian Agent Clapp from the reservation.

Secretary Bliss said yesterday there was nothing on file at the department that is adverse to Agent Clapp, and that the question of removal or transfer is not to be entertained.

Rev. Dr. Samuel W. Duncan Dead.

Boston, Nov. 1.—The Rev. Dr. Samuel White Duncan, foreign secretary of the American Baptist Missionary Union, since 1892, who reached his home in Brooklyn on Saturday from a trip to the Orient, died yesterday from heart failure.

He was sixty years old, was a captain in the Fiftieth Massachusetts in the civil war, and had held pastorates in Rochester, N. Y., and Cincinnati.

BLANCO'S ORDER MYSTIFIES.

May be a Clever Scheme to Delay Evacuation Further.

Washington, Nov. 1.—Two constructions are put upon the recent order of General Blanco that the Spanish troops in Cuba shall not be discharged, but shall first go to Spain and receive their pay.

This cancels the previous order of October 4, saying that such Spaniards as desired could remain in Cuba.

Should the troops chose to return under this later order to Spain it would give the Spaniards a pretext for asking a longer time for evacuation, which may be their desire.

On the other hand it is urged by a high war department official that the cause of this order lies in the inability of Blanco to pay them and in the hope, therefore, that they would desert and thereby relieve the Spanish government of further obligation.

The Spanish regular troops in Cuba are now much scattered, and number about 85,775. n the Province of Pinar del Rio there are in all 10,450 men. In the Province of Havana there are 14,100 men. In the Province of Matanzas there are 8,500 men.

In the Province of Santa Clara there are 23,206 men, of whom 12,550 men are in the Spiritu division. In the Trocha Jucaro Moron there are 6,100 men.

In the Province of Puerto Principe there are 5,000 men.

The Province of Santiago originally contained 13,525 in the Manzanillo division, 7,700 in the Holguin division and 21,250 in the Santiago division. Out of the total of 42,425 men in Santiago province about 24,000 men have been transported to Spain, leaving about 18,425 now there.

These are regular Spanish troops, with whose transportation the commissioners will have to reckon.

Besides these there were over 80,000 volunteers and guerillas.

Civil Service Reformers.

Washington, Nov. 1.—The Civil Service Reform League has sent a letter to the president expressing its hope that he will not, as reported in the public press, withdraw a number of places now filled by civil service methods from the scope of the civil service rules. The letter says:

"The League submits for your consideration the certainty that such changes, whatever their motive and however plausibly they may be explained by those by whom they are suggested, will be greeted alike by the friends and enemies of the merit system as a step backward—a step the more significant because it will be the first step backward avowedly taken by the executive branch of the government since the civil service law took effect."

Last Week of the Campaign.

New York, Nov. 1.—The last week of the campaign opened with unusual snap at Republican campaign headquarters. Chairman Odell and Colonel Roosevelt were on hand early making arrangements for the fight in New York county.

Chairman Quigg of the county committee was in conference with the colonel for some time yesterday regarding the local campaign.

The colonel will practically devote the remaining days before election to his canvass in Greater New York. He will spend one day, Wednesday, on Long Island, and will make short runs to Albany and Troy, but otherwise he will confine his work to this locality.

The Tammany speakers' bureau has made arrangements for several meetings in each assembly district every night this week. In a few days the executive committee will meet to receive the usual yearly election predictions of the district leaders. Each leader will submit an estimate of the vote in his district.

Judge Augustus Van Wyck spoke in Utica with ex-Governor Hill last evening. He will return to New York today. He has only three more speaking dates—Poughkeepsie, November 3; Albany, November 4, and Troy, November 5.

Foreign Corporations Must Pay.

Washington, Nov. 1.—The United States supreme court has announced its decision sustaining the constitutionality of that feature of the tax laws of New York, which lays a tax on foreign corporations doing business in the state, according to the capital employed.

The case was instituted against James A. Roberts, controller of the state of New York, to test the law and to vacate an assessment made on the capital of a large western drug house which has a branch in the city of New York.

The lower court sustained the validity of the law, and the supreme court now affirms this decision.

Indiana Strike Leaders Shot

Washington Depot, Ind., Nov. 1.—Richard Reibmeister and Alonzo Ragsdale, coal strike leaders, were shot by Austin Kocher, a non-union miner, yesterday.

Kocher claims that Ragsdale tried to hit him with a brick and that Reibmeister attempted to strike him.

Kocher fired five shots, two of them taking effect in Ragsdale's neck and one in Reibmeister's side. Ragsdale is seriously hurt.

The Celtic at Bahia.

Washington, Nov. 1.—The Celtic, one of the colliers accompanying the battleships Oregon and Iowa on their voyage to Honolulu, put in at Bahia yesterday and cabled notice of her arrival to the department.

As the Celtic left Tompkinsville at the same time as the battleships, it is expected at the department that the latter will also arrive a Bahia in a day or two.

Comptroller Dawes in Town

New ork, Nov. 1.—Charles G. Dawes, comptroller of the currency, is in town. It was understood in Wall street yesterday that he was here to obtain the views of local bankers regarding the banking facilities that should be extended to this country's new colonies.

Guarding Against Plague.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 1.—The Zeitung says that the commission charged with the duty of taking precautionary measures against the bubonic plague has engaged a staff of forty physicians who will proceed immediately to Samarcand.

The Trolley and Voorhees.

Evidently the trolley is not only a local issue peculiarly interesting to this city, but as well has a bearing on the State election. Wherever and whenever the opponents of the county trolley project have had an opportunity they have not hesitated to say that every member of the State government, from Governor Voorhees down, should be ingloriously retired for having aided in the enactment of the law which has allowed the Bergen scheme to become a reality. One of the reasons why the private trolley promoters want Voorhees defeated is contained in the following unique issue raised by Wright Babcock in a newspaper communication inspired by the trolley agitation in Plainfield:

In this connection the people should be reminded that Chancellor McGill's term of office expires in a few days. He is one of the few public officers who has always stood for right and equity. Before his court will come, in the last resort, the cases of those unfortunate owners of improved properties who object to having their property mutilated and part of it confiscated for the benefit of a private corporation. It is said that Mr. Voorhees and Mr. Bergen are very close friends, and that it was Mr. Bergen's influence which induced Mr. Voorhees to sign an act (the county trolley act) which he had both publicly and privately condemned. If Mr. Voorhees is elected Governor and appoints Mr. Bergen Chancellor in the room of McGill, the last rivets will have been put in the armor of the Knights of the County Trolley.

Yours etc.,
Wright Babcock.

John Kean Active.

The latest report is that John Kean is engaged in a plan of campaign which is particularly directed toward the fostering of his own boom for United States Senator, says a Trenton correspondent. He has selected a committee of his friends, it is said, to go through the State and pay special attention to the campaign for the Legislature. This committee is well heeled and is given carte blanche to do everything that is deemed necessary to secure a Republican majority on joint ballot in that body. According to this plan, then, the head of the ticket will not be allowed to monopolize all the attention of the campaign. The Legislative ticket must awaken as much, if not more, interest, and Mr. Kean's committee, which consists of skillful and experienced politicians, will be kept busy from now until election day. If the report is true that the Democrats intend trading their Gubernatorial candidate for the Legislature then it is the intentions of this committee to nip the scheme in the bud.

In their threat not to vote at all unless they are allowed to cast their ballots in their home districts, the members of the Third Regiment would seem to hold a pretty good hand. A thousand or more votes are not favors to slightly pass over by either political party in this campaign and if the threat of the soldiers is actually to be carried out it is not at all unlikely that most of the men will find furloughs conviently awaiting them the day before election.

It has been hinted that perhaps in the present agitation of the curfew bell idea the fair members of the Town Improvement Association are making ready to have that subject made one of the issues of the approaching municipal campaign, which will follow immediately after the State election. What a novel campaign issue the curfew bell would make.

Senator Reed seems always to have the happy faculty of putting his auditors in a humorous mood whenever he undertakes a public speech. This characteristic of the Senator was nicely developed at the Republican mass meeting in the borough last night.

Where oh where are the politicial mass meetings in Phinfield? Have the political managers forgotten that Plainfield is on the map, or don't they care?

There is a well-developed boom among Republicans for the nomination of Marion Ackerman for Mayor at the approaching municipal election.

GERONIMO, CHIEF OF THE APACHES.

Most terror-inspiring of the dreaded Apaches is Geronimo, the chief. Recollection of his record of murder, arson and rapine in Arizona and adjoining states and territories caused a shudder to run across the whole country at the announcement that he had escaped from his guards on his return to Fort Sill from the Omaha exposition.

PASSING COMMENT.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

Yesterday's New York Press has a picture of the Rev. Dr. Everett D. Burr, of the Ruggles Street Baptist church in Boston, Mass., with an account of the "Open and Institutional Church League" which meets at Worcester, Mass., November 2d and 3d. Dr. Burr is prominent as an advocate of this league, the object of which is threefold: (1), to advocate free pews in all churches; (2), to keep the churches open every day of the entire year; (3), to promote interest in institutional work which cares for the body as well as the soul. Dr. Burr's own church in Ruggles street, Boston, forms the center of a great and peculiar mission field where cluster masses of needy men, women and children. Dr. Burr was a Plainfield boy, the son of Stephen H. Burr who resided here for a number of years.

DEMOCRATS ARE READY.

ent organization could be formed.

Mr. Hetfield moved that when the meeting adjourned it to do so to meet Wednesday evening of this week, when the committe on constitution will report and the permanent orgaization formed.

Mr. Hillman, who, as stated above, has had extended and practical experience in political organization, gave a short talk on the essential things required in organization, first and foremost of which was the necessity of every member of the party lending his best efforts personally to the movement. Finance was also an important matter, Mr. Hillman said. A properly conducted organization would need plenty of cash to run it, and every Democrat should feel it his duty to give whatever he felt that he could afford to give. To make the movement effective the organization should flourish the year around, and an important fact in this connection was the headquarters. Rooms should be secured and kept open the year around, virtually forming a club, where meetings could be held when desired, the daily papers kept on file and a place made for all Democrats to meet socially and unreservedly. Mr. Hillman ended by saying that all of his experience in organizing political movements was at the service of the Plainfield Democrats and that he would gladly to do whatever he could to make the movement a success in every particular.

Councilman Hetfield and Counselor McClure also spoke briefly of the need of the thorough organization and the personal efforts of all Democrats to make it a success.

Before the meeting closed a liberal sum of money was collected for the secretary to purchase an enrollment book and a book to keep the minutes in.

The meeting tomorrow night will be open to every Democrat in the city. It is the desire of those who have undertaken the movement to have as many there as is possible.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

Messrs. Warde & Sackett, whose comedians are billed to present the latest Hoyt's Theatre success, "A Bacheleror's Honeymoon," at the Stillman Music Hall tomorrow night, are well known managers and have always been identified with the best class of attractions. Mr. Warde is the eldest son of Frederick Warde, the tragedian, and was identified for many years with the management of his father and the famous Warde-James combination. E. L. Sackett, his associate, also obtained his first experience from the same source, but has lately been connected with other enterprises. These young managers have bought the rights to John Stapleton's farce, "A Bachelor's Honeymoon," which scored a hit at Hoyt's Theatre last season, and are presenting it this year with a splendid company including the merry comedian, Walter Walker. Everywhere they have been they have been they have left a pleasant impression, and are meeting with the artistic and pecuniary success that rewards all managers who cater to the public and provide wholesome, reputable and attractive entertainment.

The management of the Star Theatre, Fourteenth street and Broadway, New York, offers a genuine novelty for this week, when Marie Wainwright will appear in the successful English play, "Shall We Forgive Her," and in her own version of the powerful domestic drama "East Lynne." The leading roles are assumed by Miss Wainwright, who brings to the parts the force, dignity and ability necessary to their interpretations. To present both plays in a perfect manner, Manager Litt has selected an exceptionally strong company, while the accessories and scenic equipments are in keeping with Jacob Litt's well-known prodigality in this direction.

nizes the fact that some provision for cases of contagious disease is desirable, but cannot maintain separate buildings for such cases unless furnished with adequate means.

The construction at the present time of a costly permanent brick or stone building, designed to meet all requirements of hospital service for many years to come, may not be wise, but some enlargement of accommodations is needed. This matter is of common interest to the entire community; and to it the attention and earnest consideration of all is invited and urged. Any suggestions touching the solution of the problems involved will be welcomed by the board of governors, and any aid towards the accomplishment of the ends in view will be gratefully received. All are invited to visit the hospital and investigate its work, and the officers and superintendent will gladly facilitate inquiry and furnish information.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Dunellen, November 1.—A slight wreck occurred on the Jersey Central just south of here early Sunday morning. The air hose on a freight train burst under one of the box cars. This stopped the train so suddenly that two box cars and a gondola crashed together and one car left the track. The wrecking crew were sent for, but the cars were placed on the track again before they arrived. No one was hurt.

Mrs. Sarah Terry, mother of William H. Terry, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. William Dove, of Metuchen, Sunday morning. Mrs. Terry was in her eighty-first year. The remains will be taken to Brooklyn, where the services will be held this evening. Mrs. Terry was one of the oldest residents of Brooklyn, and knew Williamsburgh when it was a village surrounded by farms. Death was due to general debility and old age. She leaves two children, Mrs. Dove and Mr. Terry. The latter came from Brooklyn, but has made his home here for several years.

An ardent wooer, who does not live a hundred miles from the post office, had an experience Sunday night while on his way to call on his sweetheart, who lives in Warrenville, which he won't soon forget. To cut the journey short he sometimes takes a path through the woods. He did this last night, and catching his foot in a vine was thrown headlong, spraining his ankle. Yesterday he was about town, but used a cane.

Two years ago card parties were quite the rage here. It was hoped that a club would be organized this fall, but so far no attempt to do so has been made.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Westfield, Nov. 1—A fire-alarm rang from the box at the corner of Middlesex and Broad streets at 7 o'clock last evening and the three companies responded. When they arrived at the box they found that the alarm was the work of boys who were celebrating Hallow'een. Just as the firemen arrived back at the engine house another alarm was sent in from Clark street, but the firemen did not respond until they had telephoned to a house near there. The officials say they know who sent in the alarms, and that the guilty party will be brought to terms for his joke.

A Democrat arrived in town Saturday who threatens to make it pleasant for Township Clerk Irving I. Ross. This new man didn't have anything to do with the failure of "Irv" to get the nomination for Assemblyman, but since his arrival he has made the genial clerk hustle putting an extra leaf in the family table and doing other things to keep him busy during the day and night. Irving I. Ross, Jr., weighs twelve pounds, and mother and son are doing nicely.

—Owing to the lack of a quorum there was no meeting of the directors of the Plainfield Catholic Club last night.

—G. B. Doty, of Cranford, has opened a tailoring establishment in the store on North avenue formerly occupied by the late E. E. Marshall.

You are making a great mistake in not sending for a 10 cent trial size of Ely's Cream Balm. It is a specific for catarrh and cold in the head. We mail it, or the 50 cent size. Druggists all keep it. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren street, New York.

Catarrh caused difficulty in speaking and to a great extent loss of hearing. By the use of Ely's Cream Balm dropping of mucus has ceased, voice and hearing have greatly improved.—J. W. Davidson, Att'y at Law, Monmouth, Ill.

TOWELING AND BEDSPREADS.

Twenty-five miles of toweling! Ten hundred white bedspreads in one piece! Or even perpetual wash day from Monday morning till Saturday night. These things excite no remark at the Avon mill, Lewiston, where looms are kept busy the year round.

The yarn is sent to the beamer, who, with infinite pains, separates all tangles and starts the 2,700 threads evenly on the great iron beam, and sees that the machinery winds the threads evenly and close on the beam.

If ever any person since the day of Job deserved to be put into a story book to point a moral, it's a beamer. The careful eye, the cool temper, the steady hand and the unfailing patience required make Job a peevish, ill-natured invalid in comparison to the quiet, good-natured beamer.

But it's pretty nearly as hard on the weaver, for when a fresh beam is put on a loom each of the ends must be tied separately before the machinery can be started.

When the product of the looms have been sewed together till five miles of towels, or 500 or so quilts, are in one piece, this piece is run over rollers out into the room where every day is Monday, and is piled up on a platform in one corner. Then the system of rollers and pulleys is reversed and the fabric is drawn over the rollers into the bleaching vat, where it remains for two hours in a solution of chlorine, and is drawn into an empty tank overhead, where the chlorine drains off. Then the cloth is run through rollers, where clear water is forced upon it, then back to the boiling kier. When the kier is filled the soap and water are put in, and the kier kept boiling for eight or ten hours. Then a final rinse is given through the huge rollers, which squeeze the fabric nearly dry.

A part of the towels are so woven as to leave fringed ends, and these are quickly folded by the deft young woman who, from practice at the pile before her, folds as precisely as machinery. Another part is taken to the room where hemstitching is done in the twinkling of an eye.

Each quilt, before it is bleached, passes through the hands of two keen-eyed young women who snip away any knots of the fabric, or pull away any bit of waste that may be clinging to the bleaching, rinsing and boiling process.

When the quilts come from the bluing vat they are run through a more intricate system of beaten rollers on account of their larger size and heavier weight. Two young fellows, with knives sharper than a virago's tongue, then slash into the salvage of the long stretch of quilts with a reckless accuracy born of practice, and cut each quilt free from its fellows.—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

DOCTORING THE CHINESE.

An English Physician's Experience, Hospital of Ten Thousand Virtues.

Dr. Charles Wenyon, the famous medical missionary in China, says that medical science in China is not as advanced as it was in Rome two thousand years ago. The so-called doctors cannot tie an artery, open an abscess or reduce a dislocated limb. Every Chinaman has got something real or imaginary the matter with him, and there was great curiosity to see the methods of the foreigner; therefore, when Dr. Wenyon arrived there was no lack of patients. They came daily by the hundreds from far and near—from an area three or four times that of England. In seventeen years they numbered many thousands, and some of them, as Dr. Wenyon says, became the center of influence more or less favorable to western thought and western men. Dr. Wenyon has many curious stories to tell in connection with the medical work. The literati, who are the great instigators of riot and murder in China, declared that they ought to open a rival hospital, and they did open one. A staff of native "doctors" was found, and the building was called "The Hall of Ten Thousand Virtues." It was a splendid building, but somehow that did not assist the cures. Two afflicted friends came to Fatshan, and they decided one to go to Dr. Wenyon's hospital and the other to the rival place. In three weeks Dr. Wenyon's patient was well, and on going for his friend to the other hospital, found that he was dead. The doctor tried to console him by saying that they had buried him in a splendid coffin. "In fact, coffins were a great necessity at that hospital," says Dr. Wenyon. "When I went there I found that they had laid in a good stock. So the people came to us. It was a question of coming to our hospital for a cure, or going to the 'Hall of Ten Thousand Virtues' for a coffin. One day there came a stately gentleman, a learned man belonging to the upper classes, having a painful disorder needing surgical treatment. He hired a private room and I operated on him and in a fortnight he was well. He had not told me who he was, but before he went away he said: 'You might like to know who I am, and I want to tell you, because I am so grateful for being cured of this terrible disease. I am the head doctor of the Hall of Ten Thousand Virtues.'"—St. James Gazette.

"What's that?"

"They don't come around and wear you out because they've got the blues."—Chicago Record.

Old Gentleman—Weren't you kissing my daughter when I came in?

Young Man—Yes, sir. Have you any apologies to make?—Truth.

Queer Notions of Beauty.

It is curious to note the queer ideas of beauty which characterize different nations. In Fiji, the native women paint their faces with red and white stripes as an ornament. The women of Greenland cover their faces with blue and yellow, while Arabian beauties stain their lips blue and their fingers and toes red.

The pearly teeth of the poet and novelist would not be valued by some of the Eastern and Polynesian nations. In Macassar the women paint their teeth red and yellow, in such a way that a red tooth follows a yellow one, and alternately. The teeth of the Tonquinese are as black as art can make them. The dyeing occupies three or four days, and is done to both boys and girls when they are about twelve years of age.

During the whole operation they never take any nourishment, for fear of being poisoned by the pigment if they swallowed what required mastication. Every person, high and low, rich and poor, is obliged to undergo this somewhat objectionable operation, as it is alleged that it would be a disgrace to human nature to have teeth white like those of dogs or elephants.

In Japan fashion compels married women to blacken their teeth, not, however, as an ornament, but to make them more ugly and save them from temptation.

The Sunda Islanders sometimes blacken all the teeth but two with burned cocoa-nut, covering the two excepted teeth with thin plates of gold or silver. The same tribe are in the habit of employing their old women to dress up the teeth of the youths and maidens at wooing times. The canine teeth are filed to a fine smooth edge, and the body of the tooth made concave, or they will notch the edge of the teeth like a fine saw as an additional means of beautifying.

This mutilation of the teeth is observed by many of the savage or uncivilized races in various parts of the world. In the Malay Archipelago the natives file their teeth into points like those of a saw, or pierce them with holes into which they insert studs. The Macassar people sometimes pull out two front teeth, in order to supply their place with teeth of pure gold or silver. Some African tribes knock out their front teeth, on the ground that they do not wish to look like beasts. On the Upper Nile four front teeth are always knocked out, but farther south only the two upper incisors are dispensed with.

In some parts of the world the shape of the head is of great importance. Many American Indians admire a head so extremely flattened as to appear to us idiotic. The natives of the northpointed cone, while the inhabitants of Arakhan admire a broad, smooth forehead, and in order to produce it they fasten a plate of lead on the head of the new-born children.

In some countries the feminine headgear is carried to singular extravagance. The Chinese lady carries on her head the figure of a bird, which is composed of copper or gold, according to the quality of the owner. The Myantse women carry on their heads a thin board, about a foot long and six inches broad. With this they cover their hair and seal it with wax.

With the Tahitians to be called "long-nose" is considered an insult, and they compress the noses and foreheads of their children for the sake of beauty. The same custom is prevalent among the Malays and the natives of Brazil. In some parts of the world the nose is pierced, rings, sticks, feathers, and other ornaments being inserted in the holes.

The ancient Egyptians and Assyrians used paint to make their eyebrows seem wider; the Arabians of the present day go a step farther in the use of paint. They endeavor to produce the impression that their eyebrows grow down to the middle of the nose and meet there. Persian women paint a black line around their eyes and ornament their faces with a variety of figures. The Indians of Paraguay eradicate their eyebrows and eyelashes, saying that they do not wish to look like horses.

In China and neighboring countries the finger-nails are allowed to grow to a monstrous length as a symbol of nobility, ladies wearing silver cases to protect them. In some parts of Africa yellow or purple nails are considered fashionable, while the Turkish women tinge their nails with a blue color.

Dainty Tea Cosey.

For the woman with a large circle of friends and therefore many little mementos and gifts to make it is none to early to start on the Christmas presents now, and suggestions and new ideas are always welcome.

The accompanying pattern for a tea

cosey is pretty. It is made of cream white satin with an applied design of pink crepe de chine poppies, with light green velvet leaves and buds. The hairy stems of the flowers are worked with silk. Above this design eccentric scrolls are couched, Japanese fashion heavy with gold thread each one ending with a gold pailette. A white and gold silk cording finishing the edges.

Land- und Leute aus der alten Heimath.

Württemberg.

Stuttgart. Dieser Tage wurde auf der sogenannten Planie zwischen dem alten Schloß und dem Waisenhause das Denkmal Kaiser Wilhelms des Ersten in feierlichster Weise enthüllt.—Hier tagte unter großer Betheiligung von Nah und Fern die Konferenz deutscher Sittlichkeitsvereine.

Cannstatt. Dem diesjährigen Volksfeste auf dem Wasen war die Witterung sehr günstig; nur am Nachmittag des letzten Tages beeinträchtigte Regen die allgemeine Festfreude. In herkömmlicher Weise betheiligte sich wieder der gesammte Hof an der Abhaltung des landwirthschaftlichen Hauptfestes. Der allgemeine Besuch auf dem Festplatze war stärker denn je; kolossale Mengen von Speisen und Getränken wurden konsumirt. Das auf dem Festplatz errichtete Postamt expedirte über 85,000 Ansichtspostkarten!

Ehingen. Wegen Brandstiftung sind die Bauern Stephan und Peter Walter von Neudorf verhaftet worden. Nun tritt hartnäckig das Gerücht auf, daß Stephan Walter, welcher auch Ziegelmeister ist, einen einarmigen Schäfer, der Ende der 70er Jahre spurlos aus Neudorf bei Rottenacker verschwand, erschlagen und in seinem Ziegelofen verbrannt habe. Gerichtliche Untersuchung ist deswegen bereits eingeleitet worden.

Hall. Zum Tode verurtheilt wurde vom hiesigen Schwurgericht der 30 Jahre alte ledige Bayer Felix Jakob von Neuenstein wegen Mordes, begangen an dem fürstlich hohenlohe'schen Forstwart Schmander von Rohrklinge. Jakob hatte dem ihm verhaßten Schmander im Walde aufgelauert und ihn durch zwei Schüsse in den Kopf getödtet. Die Geschworenen empfahlen den Verurtheilten der Gnade des Königs.

Langenargen. Hier versuchte ein bei der Bodenseegürtelbahn beschäftigt gewesener Arbeiter (Italiener), einen Materialwaarenzug mitten auf der Argenbrücke durch Anhäufen von Dielen und Steinen zum Entgleisen zu bringen. Maschinist und Heizer bemerkten rechtzeitig die große Gefahr und brachten den Zug zum Stehen. Der alsbald verhaftete Missethäter wurde der Staatsanwaltschaft übergeben.

Ulm. Die Strafkammer verurtheilte den Baumeister Mergner aus Göppingen und dessen Bauführer Pfeifer wegen fahrlässiger Tödtung zu Gefängnißstrafen von 14 Tagen und 2 Monaten. Beide hatten durch leichtfertige Bauführung den Zusammensturz eines im Umbau befindlichen Kellers in Göppingen verursacht, wobei ein Arbeiter getödtet und einer schwer verletzt wurde.

Baden.

Karlsruhe. Der Großindustrielle August Ruh, Theilhaber der bekannten Nähmaschinenfabrik Junker und Ruh, ist jüngst im besten Mannesalter gestorben. Er gehörte früher dem Bürgerausschuß und später dem Stadtrath als Mitglied an, auch war er seit einer Reihe von Jahren Handelsrichter.—Sämmtliche Ministerien haben dem badischen Handwerkerverband auf eine Eingabe ihre Bereitwilligkeit ausgesprochen, vorbehaltlich der Prüfung der einzelnen Fälle, aus Gründen der Billigkeit bei Ausbruch von Strikes oder Geschäftssperren bei den Arbeitern für den Staat Fristverlängerung zu gewähren und von konventionellen Strafen abzusehen.

Elsaß-Lothringen.

Hayingen. In der Nähe von hier wurde dem Fürsten Bismarck im Staatswalde eine Eiche geweiht. Dieselbe hat 3.50 Meter im Umfang und 1.10 Meter im Durchmesser. Sie stammt ungefähr, wie der große Mann, dessen Namen sie jetzt trägt, aus dem Jahre 1815 und ist ein gesunder Stamm. An ihrem Fuße wurde ein Steindenkmal errichtet, das auf eingelegter Gußplatte schwarz auf weißem Grunde nur den Namen „Bismarck" trägt. Die Weihe gestaltete sich zu einem kleinen Festakt, an dem besonders die Kriegervereine der umliegenden Dörfer theilnahmen.

Markirch. Auf sonderbare Weise kam der Lehrjunge eines Schlossermeisters daher um's Leben. Ein anderer Arbeiter holte gerade ein glühendes Eisen aus dem Feuer, um es auf dem Amboß zu schmieden, als der Lehrling rückwärts und gerade auf das glühende Eisen fiel. Dieses drang ihm tief in den Rücken und verletzte noch die Lunge. Der unglückliche Knabe starb bald darauf.

Oesterreich.

Wien. Zwischen der Gemeinde Wien und der englischen Gasgesellschaft wurde ein Uebereinkommen getroffen, nach welchem der Gasgesellschaft die Beleuchtung der Wiener Vororte unter der Bedingung überlassen wird, daß sie auf eine Steigerung der Gaspreise verzichtet.—Bei der Aufführung von Sardous „Pamela" im Volkstheater bat der die Rolle eines Polizisten spielende Schauspieler Weidinger in einem Zwischenakt den Administrator Geiringer um einen Vorschuß, erhielt aber statt dessen eine Ohrfeige. Der Beleidigte zog seinen Theatersäbel und hätte den gewaltthätigen Vorgesetzten übel zugerichtet, wenn ihm nicht andere Mimen in den Arm gefallen wären.

Budapest. In dem Hochverrathsprozesse Muzsik und Genossen wurde das Urtheil verkündet. Muzsik wurde wegen Anstiftung einer Verbindung zum Zwecke eines auf Majestätsbeleidigung gerichteten Verbrechens zu fünf Jahren Zuchthaus, Hartmann und Koras zu zwei Jahren Zuchthaus verurtheilt.

Innsbruck. In der Hinterriß verunglückte bei einer Treibjagd durch Absturz ein junger braver Bursche aus Scharnitz, Namens Sigmund Heiß. Zwei seiner Kollegen hatten die gefährliche Stelle bereits passirt. Auf ihre Frage, ob er nachzukommen sich getraue, erwiderte er lachend: „Ja!" In diesem Augenblick aber stürzte er auch schon in die furchtbare Tiefe. Nach einer anderen Aussage sei er von einem Steine, der durch eine flüchtige Gemse über ihm losgelöst worden war, am Kopfe getroffen worden und in Folge dessen in die Tiefe gestürzt.

Unterradlberg. Ein auf unaufgeklärte Weise entstandener Brand zerstörte den größten Theil der hiesigen Hanfspinnerei und Bindfadenfabrik. Die Schadensziffer beträgt ungefähr 250,000 Gulden. Es werden dadurch circa 150 Arbeiter brodlos.

Schweiz.

Bern. Der Bundesrath hat auf die Einladung der russischen Regierung, an einer Friedenskonferenz theilzunehmen, zustimmend geantwortet.—Die Führer Melchior und Kaspar Kohler, Heinrich Rieder und Albert Huggler haben dieser Tage den Aufstieg auf's Finsteraarhorn direkt vom Studerjoch über den Ostgrat ausgeführt. Der Aufstieg von der Oberaarjochhütte bis zum Gipfel dauerte gerade neun Stunden. An der schwierigsten Aufstiegstelle, etwa 20 Meter unterhalb des Gipfels, befestigten die Führer ein 30 Meter langes Seil, eine Arbeit, welche zwei Stunden in Anspruch nahm.

Zürich. Im Züricher Arbeiterquartier Außersihl wurden Nachts italienische Plakate von äußerst aufrührerischem Inhalt angeschlagen. Sie enthielten eine Drohung gegen den Bundesrath wegen seines Vorgehens gegen die Anarchisten, sowie die Aufforderung, das geheime Komite mit Geld zur Herausgabe eines neuen Anarchistenblattes zu unterstützen. Der Polizei gelang es, fünf Betheiligte zu verhaften.

Uri. Die Leiche des seit November 1895 vermißten Polytechnikers Julius Franellich aus Triest ist von Jägern tief unter dem Engelberger Rothstock gefunden und nach Isenthal gebracht worden. Wahrscheinlich ist er von einer Lawine in die Tiefe gerissen worden.

Wallis. Ein 15jähriges Mädchen aus Biel feierte kürzlich seinen Geburtstag auf dem 4482 Meter hohen Matterhorn, das es mit zwei Führern und anderen Bergsteigern glücklich bezwungen hatte.

Genf. Die Polizei in Basel verhaftete den Italiener Giovanni Gilo, der in dem Verdachte steht, einige Tage vor der Ermordung der Kaiserin Elisabeth zu Luccheni Beziehungen unterhalten zu haben. Gilo wurde sofort von Basel nach Genf übergeführt, hier verhört und in das Untersuchungsgefängniß verbracht.

Read this case:

Mrs. I. L. Holmes, of 442 West Second street, says: "I have used several boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills for backache and have derived more benefit from them than from anything else I ever used. Before I tried this remedy I was bothered almost constantly with a severe pain across the small of my back so bad at times that I thought I must give up. If I sat down and got up, or was lying down and attempted to rise quickly, or retained one position for any length of time, sharp, acute pain always followed. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised for such trouble and went to L. W. Randolph's drug store and got a box. They helped me from the first and I improved right along under the treatment. I recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to others who suffer from kidney complaint."

THE RICHEST MAN.

UNCLE RUSSEL SAGE GIVES ADVICE TO A BOY.

The Sage of Wall Street Thinks There Are As Many Opportunities Today as Ever—Believes Absolute Honesty to Be Necessary to the Accumulation of Wealth.

If there is a man in New York who is competent to give advice on the science of making money it is Russell Sage. He started without worldly advantages and he has piled up a fortune of forty or fifty million dollars.

He made every penny of it himself, and he is making more right along. Russell Sage has devoted his whole life to making money. He has practically no other pleasure. He does not even care for power, as do most men who have accumulated large fortunes. He looks upon display as a waste.

A boy went to Mr. Sage to get his advice. He was very bright, self-reliant youth, and he honestly wished for Mr. Sage's opinion. The rich man talked to him more openly than it is likely that he would have talked to a man.

The youth first met Mr. Sage coming out of his office, and requested an interview. The financier said that he was very busy that day, and he wasn't sure that he could spare time any day.

The boy went back to the office again and persuaded the cashier to admit him to Mr. Sage's room. The millionaire was tipped back in a chair his feet resting against a radiator. He was examining the tape of a stock ticker.

"I have come," said the caller, "to ask you about things that are of deep interest to me and to all young men just starting out on their careers. Will you try to answer them as if you were advising your own sons."

"Why, yes; I'll answer them to the best of my ability," he replied.

"What are the opportunities for boys to get rich nowadays? Are there as many opportunities as there were fifteen or twenty years ago?"

"Of course there are," responded Mr. Sage with energy. "There are chances now to make money in some thing besides real estate. There are more men in the field now, but the field is wider. I think that there is as great a chance for boys to get rich now as there was fifteen or even twenty-five years ago. At any rate there is always room for bright young men. Conditions never change in that respect."

RUSSELL SAGE.

"Do you think that there is any one business or profession that offers more opportunities than the others? There is a complaint met with everywhere about overcrowding."

"I do not think there is any one special avenue which offers chances better than others. It depends largely upon the man."

"What about your business, Mr Sage? Is there an opening in it for a bright young man?"

The financier chuckled in his peculiar way and took his feet down from the radiator. He was becoming interested. He looked at the quotations which may or may not have meant much to him, before he answered.

"Yes," he said, "I believe that my line still offers opportunities for young men to get wealth. But I won't say that it offers better chances than any other business. You must know that it is not every young man who can make it a success."

Again Mr. Sage looked at the ticker and his thoughts flew away. His questioner asked him how he had started in life, particularly about his boyhood, of which almost nothing has ever been printed.

"Well, I started out very young," replied the man who is worth more than $40,000,000. "I was only fifteen years old when I began as a clerk in a store. I slaved in that store for four years. When I was nineteen I started in business for myself.

"And you have never worked for any one but yourself since?"

"No; I have been my own employer ever since."

There was a suggestion of triumph in Mr. Sage's tone. It was plain that the thought gave him great satisfaction.

"Did you have many hard struggles before you reached the top of the ladder?"

"I had many hard knocks. Every young man must expect that when he starts out."

"How long did you go to school? What kind of an education did you have?"

"I educated myself," was the reply, and again that shade of triumph was in his voice. "I used to study at night and got my knowledge at odd times. I belonged to a debating society, too. I used to be one of the best speakers in the club."

This will surprise many people who are familiar only with the later years of Mr. Sage's life. It surprised the boy, who had read a deal about him. He said something about Mr. Sage giving up public speaking.

"No," returned Mr. Sage, "I kept up public speaking for many years, until I became so old that my voice weakened.

"Do you think a boy should have any special training for a business career?"

"No. All knowledge comes in handy when you are in an office. I did a lot of general reading when I was a boy and I have never regretted it."

"Would you advise a young man to go to college if he can?"

"A college education comes in handy in the way that I have mentioned. It adds to the young man's fund of general knowledge. Most young men could spend four years to better advantage, though."

"What would you suggest as a good investment for a young man's savings?" he was asked. "You know that there are thousands of young men who have saved from $50 to $100 who are at a loss to know what to do with it. Is there any way in which so small a sum can be invested?"

"Certainly. There are a number of ways in which a young man can place his money so that it will yield him a good return. He could buy one share in a good railroad stock or the shares of some solid bank would be a good thing. If he hasn't money enough to buy a whole share he can find some companies which sell half and even quarter shares. But he must be very careful. Let him be sure that it is perfectly good stock and that he is in no danger of losing his capital. When he makes a profit on the principal he may be a little more reckless, perhaps. But no young man should ever lose his principal, for if he does, he must start all over again."

"Then you don't believe in the axiom, 'Nothing risk, nothing gain?'"

"That's all very well, but you must never risk your principal."

The caller said that he had been sometimes asked to invest a few dollars in speculating in corn and wheat and stock.

"Don't ever do it," said Mr. Sage vigorously. "You would lose everything."

"If a young man saves his money and invests in one or two good shares at a time, there is no reason why he should not be rich, is there?"

"None in the world, but few youths realize that," declared the financier.

There was a point which troubled the young man seeking advice. He asked Mr. Sage if he thought honesty was necessary in order to succeed in business and if most millionaires were honest.

"Why, of course a man must be honest in his dealings, or he would soon cease to be trusted by those with whom he does business," declared Mr. Sage. "The millionaires of to-day must have been honest or they would not be rich. It is impossible for a dishonest man to stay rich any length of time."

Another thing that bothered the young man was put in the form of a question:

"Do millionaires sometimes feel that their wealth is a burden and that they would rather not have so much money?"

"Do I look as if my money was a burden?" asked Mr. Sage. "Wealth cannot become a burden unless it is foolishly invested. When you have your money in safe hands it cannot help being a comfort. To me, of course, it is a pleasure. I might have been as happy without it, but I would not care to make the experiment."

He laughed heartily at the suggestion and then his face sobered. "I knew once what it was to be without it," he said, "and that is why I am not making a show with it now."

When Mr. Sage dismissed his caller he invited the young man to come again, saying: "I will be glad to talk with you. I take a great interest in boys."

It is interesting to know how this man, about whom so many hard things are said in Wall street, impressed the youth who had gone to him for advice.

"I shall always remember him as a kind and fatherly old gentleman," says the boy, "who took a deep and genuine interest in me and in all boys. He gave me time that I am sure was worth a lot of money and out of pure good will and generosity."

There are no boys in Russell Sage's home, no children at all. The lonely old man has long passed the three score and ten allotted to man. Standing in the shadow of declining years, perhaps the sorrow of his childless life makes him feel a tender interest in other people's boys.

How the Brahmin Cleans His Teeth.

When the Brahmin cleans his teeth he must use a small twig cut from one of a number of certain trees, and before he cuts it he must make his act known to the gods of the woods.

He must not indulge in this cleanly habit every day. He must abstain on the sixth, the eighth, the ninth, the fourteenth, the fifteenth, and the last day of the moon, on the days of new and full moon, on the Tuesday in every week, on the day of the constellation under which he was born, on the day of the week and on the day of the month which correspond with those of his birth, at an eclipse, at the conjunction of the planets, at the equinoxes and other unlucky epochs, and also on the anniversary of the death of his father or mother.

Anyone who cleans his teeth with his bit of stick on any of the above mentioned days will have hell as his portion.

A TELESCOPIC VIEW.

The cub having gone off to Switzerland to look for Mousie (and to propose to her), I informed William that it was my intention to return to town without delay.

So William said,—

"Then I shall come and stay with you."

I let him come. I knew why he wanted to come. He wanted to come because he wanted to pay calls at the Jungle and see Miss Ethel Mainwaring. William, therefore, accompanied me, and it soon became clear to me that his visit was to be one of some duration. However, as he spent most of his time hovering between Lord's and the Jungle—partaking of many meals at the latter address—his stay did not put me to much expense which was gratifying, as my income though quite sufficient for one single gentleman, will not stand being divided between two single gentlemen. I have often remarked to the cashier of the London-German that it is strange how badly off most writers on finance are—the irony of fate, I presume—but his sole reply is, "I zubboze it is beges they bragtiss vot they breach," and pays little regard to my wistful glances in the direction of his strong box.

The foregoing sentences are supposed to represent a period of rather more than three weeks. I was making some humorous remarks about a company which had been started to insure young married men against twins when there came two slow knocks at the door—two lifeless knocks, two abjectly miserable knocks. Mr Charles Johnson, the clerk, knew who it was. He is in love himself with a young lady in a Fleet Street tea shop and sympathizes with the cub. Accordingly, therefore, as a trained nurse did Mr. Johnson open the door, and he was with and air of the deepest condolence that he ushered Master John Mainwaring into my presence.

"Oh, how are you?" I cried cheerfully.

"Ripping; thanks," he replied, in a tone such as 'condemned murderers' would use in reply to Mr. Billington's greeting.

Then he flung himself into a chair and laughed bitterly.

"I wish I were dead—dead!" he then remarked.

This was getting serious. Here was a young gentleman, aged twenty-three possessed of independent means, splendid health and all those other things which make life worth living, don't you know, wishing he were no more—wishing he were a cold corpse.

I knew, of course. Getting up, I marched into Charles Johnson's sculllery office to find that blushing youth deep in a penny booklet, entitled "Wooed, Won and Wed; or, True Love Triumphs O'er All." I gave Mr. Johnson some directions, and presently he came in with two steaks, a mountain of vegetables and a large bottle of Lord Bass.

"Now, Mainwaring," I said, "I'll say grace to save time, and you see to."

He demurred at first, but finally allowed himself to be persuaded. When the cub had finished, I said, as he lit his pipe,—

"So she won't have you?"

To my surprise, he did not do or say anything violent, but went on lighting his pipe. I was inwardly congratulating myself on the success of the measures I had taken in order to disperse the cub's funeral ideas when he suddenly remarked,—

"This is my last pipe."

"Going to train for something then?"

"This is the last pipe I shall ever smoke."

He puffed solemnly for a few moments, and then, pointing with the stem of his brier to the cleared decks he said,—

"I have eaten my last meal."

It now struck me that there was something more than mere training in the cub's self-abnegation. There was that in his cold-blooded speeches which chilled me, which produced a curious sensation in my scalp, which would doubtless have caused my hair to stand on end had the quantity there been sufficient to undergo the process. I gazed at him with a paling face.

For quite three minutes he said nothing, but smoked steadily. Feeling thoroughly uncomfortable, I took up my pen and began to write. I had hardly covered a line, however, when the cub observed in an off-handed tone,—

"In short, I am going to kill myself."

"Nonsense!"

I was determined not to take him seriously, you see.

"Yes," he continued. "Either with this"—drawing a little white bottle labelled poison from his waistcoat pocket—"this"—producing a razor from the depths of the inside breast pocket of his coat—"or this"—whipping, with a dexterity that would have done credit to Mr. Maskelyne, a tiny revolver out of some other part of his apparel.

"You are well provided," I said chaffingly, although I felt nervous at being in such proximity to so deadly an outfit.

"Yes," he said, toying with the revolver. "I am going to make sure of it. I shall first swallow the poison, then cut my throat and then shoot myself through the brain."

I turned cold to my finger tips. Great Heaven! Was it all a dream? I rubbed my eyes and gazed at the cub. No, it was grim reality, every bit of it. The girl had refused him, and so he had concluded that the best way out of his misery was to commit suicide.

The tobacco began to hiss and burn in the bottom of his pipe bowl. His last smoke was drawing to a close. And then——

I threw him my pouch.

"More 'baccy?"

He placed it politely on the edge of the desk.

"No, thanks—finished now." And he rose from his chair and walked to the window. "I should just like to take a last look at the sun shining on the trees."

I suppose I moved, for he wheeled around like lightning.

"If you attempt to interfere with me," he said, with the same unnatural calm in his voice and manner, "I'll shoot you first, Worm, and myself afterward. So pray be careful."

"Put it off for a few minutes," I begged him. "I want to talk to you. Just tell me what has happened."

"I'm not in any particular hurry," he observed, reseating himself, "and I have no objection to telling you what has happened. But nothing you can say will alter my determination. This thing must be—I say must be." And he patted the pocket which contained the poison.

"Well, go ahead," I urged him. "Just tell me what you did after you left us so suddenly in the Doone valley."

"No need to detail the journey," he muttered; "just a sheep walk—every one goes the same way. I made tracks for Southampton, caught the night boat for Havre, went on to Rouen, thence to Paris, Paris to Geneva, and there I was."

"And then, of course, you took Mousie—I beg pardon, Miss Rathbone—by surprise, proposed to her again, heap, and got rejected, as was quite natural. You can't rush a thing like that."

"I did not meet Miss Rathbone," said the cub coldly, "and I did not propose to her. Getting to Geneva was one thing, but finding her was quite another. People go to Geneva and make excursions all round the shops. I found out the hotel at which she was stopping, and tried to get rooms there myself, but it was full up. This was why I constantly missed her—she was always going off somewhere, and whenever I followed her she always caught the train or boat that I just missed. So, although I dodged about for a fortnight, I didn't meet her once. The amount of money I spent chasing about and making inquiries and tipping people was something appalling, but of course I didn't mind that."

"Well," I said, "I don't see why you should kill yourself because you missed her in Switzerland."

"Let me go on," said the cub, sternly, "and then you'll understand why. Just as I was thinking of giving it up and coming home I heard that she and her party had gone to Chamouni, with the intention of ascending Mount Blanc. Of course—just my luck—I was a train and a coach behind, as you go to Cluses by train and then coach on to Chamouni. When I finally got there, I was told that the party I was in search of had started up some hours before. I asked whether it wouldn't be possible to catch them up, but the great fool of a guide I was talking to just laughed and made a face. Then he told me that I could watch them through a telescope, but as for catching them up that was impossible. "Well," continued the cub. "I paid my money and the telescope chap put me on to them at once. He said they were nearly four thousand feet above the valley, but I could see them as plainly as if they were only fifty yards away. There were five or six people. Just as I had got my eyes on Mousie a great fat Johnnie who was walking a few yards behind her actually went up, and—and——"

"Go on," I said. "What did he do?"

"Why"—with heaving chest and glaring eyes—"he put his arm inside hers and began talking and laughing as if he'd known her all her life!"

"And what did she do?"

"Talked and laughed back."

"Well?"

"Well, isn't that enough? She's engaged to him—slap home and here I am. It's all over. In five minutes I shall be dead!"

I started from my chair.

"There must be some mistake," I exclaimed. "The man you saw was evidently a relative."

"I know all the members of her family," said the cub, "and there's no man like that in it. No; she's engaged. I don't care to live any longer."

"Look here, Jack," I said desperately "let me make some inquiries. I give you my solemn word of honor that I won't say anything about your—er—intentions. Let me go to your place and try to find out the truth of the matter. Trust me not to give you away."

The sun shone out gayly just then. Perhaps the cub thought it a pity to leave it so suddenly. At any rate he said,—

"I won't do anything until you come back—I swear it. Now go!"

So off I went post haste to the Jungle, and when I returned with the news that a relative the cub had never heard of had suddenly returned he was willing to live long enough to try his luck, and succeeded.

—Woodhull & Martin's special sale seem to have struck the popular chord among the shopping public of this city. Another one is advertised in today's Press. It will be well for the women to look over the advertisement on the fourth page.

—The sidewalk in front of Woodhull & Martin's looked like that of some large jobbing house today. The firm were opening their holiday goods and from the quantities received we should judge they would be able to supply the two counties with everything in that line.

Claims Bullman Took Her Jewelry.

Summons in tort have been issued by Justice Mosher in the case of Mrs. Annie Clarkson, of New York, against Charles Bullman, of Third place. The case was to have come to trial yesterday morning, but as Bullman seems to have left the State, and taken all his household goods with him, the summons has not been served on him personally. The plaintiff claims that the defendant took a watch and ring belonging to her, and has not returned them. Counsellor W. K. McClure represents Mrs. Clarkson.

George Tobin's Brother is Dead.

George Tobin, of this city, received word this morning telling him of the death of his brother, Joseph Tobin, of New York, which occurred very suddenly during the night. Death was due to acute gastritis. Mr. Tobin had been ill for sometime, but it was thought that he would recover. He was a valued employe of the Custom House in New York, where he had been employed for a long time. Announcement of the funeral services will be made later.

Went to a Party in Stages.

A jolly party of young people, mostly from the Seventh-Day Baptist church, enjoyed a ride to Mt. Pleasant last night in two large stages, and enjoyed a Hallowe'en party at the home of Miss Ida Randolph. The evening was passed with games, music and refreshments. There were about forty young people in the party.

WANTS VERDICT SET ASIDE.

Captain Phillips' Counsel Appears in Court in His Behalf.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Nov. 1.—An argument took place here yesterday morning in the Union County Court before Judge VanSyckel, in the case of Captain George W. Phillips, of Plainfield, who was recently mulcted $250 in a suit for defamation of character brought against him by Miss Sarah O'Brien, a young woman of Plainfield. Frank Bergen, counsel for Captain Phillips, wants the verdict set aside on the ground that it was contrary to the evidence. Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, of Plainfield, who appeared for Miss O'Brien, opposed Mr. Bergen's theory. Judge VanSyckel reserved his decision.

A Dunellen Marriage.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Mrs. Irving Beetham, of Greenbrook, to Alexander Frazee, formerly a resident of the borough. The wedding took place at the home of Rev. E. S. Jamison, pastor of the Dunellen M. E. church. Mr. Jamison performed the ceremony. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Mabel Walker, of Greenbrook. After the marriage Mr. and Mrs. Frazee came to this city, where they took a train for Brooklyn, where they will reside.

Chivalry of the "Slums."

A touching story is told of an Edinburgh street waif. There was a Christmas treat given to poor children at a mission hall, and hundreds of little ones were assembled at the doors in advance of the hour of admittance, many of them barefoot.

Among the number was a sweet-faced little girl, who seemed less hardened than most to the cold, for she shivered in her poor jacket and danced from one foot to the other on the cold, hard stones. A boy not much older watched this performance for a few minutes, and then, with a sudden impulse of protection, took off his cap, put it down before her, and said:

PUSSY IN OUR NAVY.

The Government Makes Regular Appropriations for the Cats.

When Major General Merritt sailed from San Francisco he asked the government authorities for three cats to take to Manila. Probably the trio of American felines are now teaching Yankee habits to their misguided fellows of the islands, for it was Major General Merritt's intention to send them ashore when he landed. The cats came from the commissary depot in San Francisco, and their progenitor may be seen there any day, busied among the barrels and boxes or dozing lazily in some snug corner.

It is not generally known, says the San Francisco Chronicle, that the government spends several thousands of dollars annually for the maintenance of cats, but the accounts of the United States depot commissaries prove it. In every storehouse there are from one to five of the animals, and their rations are provided as carefully and regularly as those of any of the gallant soldiers.

They are not fed on scraps, nor are their individual tastes disregarded, as are those of the enlisted men, but they are allotted so many pounds of choice beef or any other delicacy their palates may desire. Of course they may have as much game as they wish, and the storehouses seldom fail to furnish an unlimited supply of rats and mice. That the cats save many times their cost of support is well known, as such supplies as crackers, cheese, bacon, flour and meal are much sought after by the rodents.

Some time ago a new attache of the warehouse procured a terrier and installed him in the territory of "The Colonel," who is the father of the animals Major General Merritt took with him. The next morning the dog was found beside two dead rats, badly scarred, while "The Colonel" guarded five with a pride that spoke in the severe arch of his back and his loud meows. The terrier was forthwith removed.

All men-of-war carry cats. Their usefulness is never more apparent than on shipboard. The writer was crossing from Antwerp to New York on the steamship Southwark, when he was awakened by the sudden stopping of the ship, an occurrence which, happening in mid-ocean, generally means something serious. The passengers rushed on deck half clad, and were disgusted to learn that a rat having crawled into the cylinder had caused the halt. Such an action on a man-of-war in time of action might be fearfully paid for, and an active cat is the only preventative of such a possibility.

A Veritable Napoleon.

"That shows what you can do in this country," said the man with the loud voice, as he rang up a nickel with a view to stopping the car. "John's one of the most remarkable self-made men we ever had in Wayne county."

"Is that true?"

"I should say so. Wonderful man! Why, that fellow came here twenty years ago with $50 and last week he failed for a round half million. Beats the band what a rustler can do in this country."—Detroit Free Press.

SOUND MONEY DEMOCRATS

PLEASE READ THIS.

You probably voted for McKinley & Hobart or Palmer & Buckner two years ago because you were opposed to the dangerous folly of coining gold and silver at the ratio of 16 to 1. Has anything occurred since to convince you that your vote was a mistake?

The question is a vital issue in this campaign. If the Bryan wing of the Democratic party shall succeed in electing a majority of the next House of Representatives the great advantage gained by the election in 1896 will be lost. Uncertainty, depression in business and ruinous financial conditions are certain to follow.

THE PLATFORMS.

The National Republican Convention at St. Louis on June 17, 1896, declared:

"We are opposed to the free coinage of silver except by international agreement with the leading commercial nations of the world, and until such agreement be obtained the existing gold standard must be preserved."

"We demand the free and unlimited coinage of both gold and silver at the present legal ratio of 16 to 1, without waiting for the aid or consent of any other nation."

THE JEFFERSONIAN DOCTRINE.

On the 7th of May, 1896, a Democratic Convention was held at Trenton for the purpose of electing delegates to the Chicago Convention. On that day the Democrats of New Jersey, by their representatives in convention, declared:

"We are in favor of a firm, unvarying maintenance of the present gold standard. We are opposed to the free coinage of silver at any ratio, and to the compulsory purchase of silver bullion by the government. We believe that the interests of the people demand that the earnings of trade, agriculture, manufacture and commerce, and especially the wages of labor, should be paid in money of the greatest intrinsic value and of the highest standard adopted by the civilized nations of the world. We are, therefore, unalterably opposed to all devices and schemes for the debasement of our currency."

That was adopted two months before the Chicago Convention.

THE POPULIST DOCTRINE.

On the 9th of September, 1896, two months after the Chicago Convention, a Democratic Convention met in Trenton for the purpose of nominating presidential electors. At that convention the following declaration was made:

"The Democratic party of New Jersey, in convention assembled, ratify and endorse the National Democratic platform adopted at Chicago and the candidates named thereon, the Hon. William J. Bryan of Nebraska, and the Hon. Arthur Sewall of Maine, and hereby pledge our honest, earnest and hearty endeavor to secure the election of these, our candidates; we insist that the platform adopted at Chicago is thoroughly Democratic and purely American, and with its enforcement we firmly believe that relief will come to the toiling masses and will advance the general prosperity of our country."

This is the doctrine that was repudiated by the people of New Jersey at the election in 1896 by a plurality of 87,692.

In the present campaign an effort is being made to commit the sound money Democrats of New Jersey to the Chicago platform and the declaration of September 9, 1896. Eight members of Congress are to be elected in November, and a legislature that must elect a United States Senator in January.

The Democratic Convention held in Trenton last September is silent on this great issue involved in the election of members of Congress.

During the past few months Democratic Conventions have been held in 41 States, and each convention adopted a platform. Ten of those platforms declared in favor of free and unlimited coinage of silver; twelve declared in favor of free silver and the Chicago platform; four endorsed the Chicago platform; six, including New Jersey, were silent on the silver question, and dodged the Chicago platform; three declared in favor of free silver and fusion; three favored free silver and partial fusion, and three declared in favor of fusion only.

Not a single Democratic Convention held this year has declared in favor of Sound Money.

FREE SILVER IS THE ISSUE OF 1898.

"The silver question, or more properly the question of bimetalism, upon which the presidential campaign of 1896 was mainly fought, is still the leading and predominant issue in American politics. Nothing has happened to lessen its importance or to shake the arguments of those who believe that the best interests of the country demand that silver shall be restored to its former position by the side of gold in the monetary system of the United States, regardless of what any other country may do or refuse to do. So far from being a 'dead issue,' as is so loudly proclaimed by those who wish it dead, its significance is intensified by the conditions which exist and the attitude which has lately been assumed by the leaders of the Republican party."—Democratic Campaign Book of 1898 Prepared by Democratic Congressional Committee.

FOOTBALL TOPICS OF LOCAL INTEREST.

The Plainfield Eleven Practicing for Election Day Game.

WHERE MEN WILL PLAY.

A GOOD STRONG ALL-AROUND TEAM BEING MADE-UP.

Practice Held on Westervelt Avenue Grounds Last Night—Candidates for Various Positions—Great Hustling for Tickets for the Yale-Princeton Game Saturday, November 12th—Other Notes

The Plainfield eleven will continue its practice for the election day game Thursday and Friday evenings at the Westervelt avenue grounds. Such of the players as can turn out Saturday afternoon, will meet at Martine's field for a little practice punting and catching punts in which they are deficient at present.

The Plainfield team met for practice last evening at the Westervelt avenue grounds and continued its work by electric light. Manager T. U. Smith had a big squad out. Almost all of the team he has selected was out together with nearly a score of others. Good work was done and the lineups were quick and snappy. The backs held the ball better and there was not so much fumbling. The interference was a trifle ragged but good coaching will round that into shape before the game.

There has been considerable discussion on the centre position in the line for the Plainfield team in the election day game. T. A. Cuming has played there but he is not up to the weight of the usual centre. The other principal candidate is Nathan E. Lewis, centre on the Stevens Institute eleven. With two such giant guards as Milne and Brown, it seems that Cuming will be able to more than hold his own at centre despite his light weight and it has been definitely decided to place him there. Lewis is needed at tackle where his weight will greatly strengthen the line. There was some talk of trying Cuming behind the line but there is now plenty of material for the backs.

The ends for the election day game will probably be Fletcher Hallock and Volney F. Green. Hallock is playing a brilliant game there in practice and has done wonderful work breaking up interference. Green is just home from the war and is strong, quick and brings increased weight. Before he left, Green had the reputation of being one of the best ends in this section although very light. He is much heavier now and is as speedy as ever.

There is a great hustling among the local football enthusiasts to secure tickets for the Yale-Princeton game which is to be played at Princeton, November 12th. Some of the Plainfield boys at both colleges have received quantities of requests for tickets. Now each of the college boys is limited to four tickets so it can be seen that none of them will be able to do more than supply their intimate friends. There are plenty of tickets yet, however, for a great stand capable of holding twenty thousand has been put up just for the game.

The first of the great football games among the leading colleges will be played Saturday at Philadelphia when the Pennsylvania-Harvard game will be played. Several Plainfielders are preparing to go over.

Solemn High Mass to Be Said

The funeral services of the late Jos. Tobin, who died in New York day before yesterday, will be held tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock at St. Ann's R. C. church on Twelfth street, between Third and Fourth avenues, New York, where there will be solemn high mass. The body will arrive in Plainfield on the 1 o'clock train tomorrow afternoon and interment will take place immediately afterwards in St. Mary's cemetery. There will be carriages awaiting the arrival of the relatives and friends.

Home From Europe.

Charles E. Brooks, of West Eighth street, returned yesterday from Europe on the Steamship Friesland. He reports having had a pleasant time, but the return trip was quite stormy, there being a very heavy head wind.

The New Fire House.

In another month the new fire engine house in the West End will be completed and possession will be taken. The officials have not yet decided just what apparatus will be stationed in that part of the city.

Registration is Large.

Yesterday was the last day for registry in the city, and in each of the wards several names were added to the list. In each case the number registered is large, and in the main exceeds that of last year.

INTEREST IN DEMOCRATS.

PERMANENT ORGANIZATION TO BE FORMED TONIGHT.

All Democrats Will be Welcomed—A Plan to be Reported That Will Result in Interesting Every Member of Party.

All Democrats who feel an interest in the welfare of the party and especially in the success of the organization efforts that have been inaugurated, as described in The Daily Press last night, will be welcomed at the meeting to be held in Councilman Moffett's office on North avenue this evening when the permanent plans will be decided upon. Without the hearty co-operation of all Democrats, those who have taken the initiative steps in the reorganization plans realize that their purposes will be fruitless. It is the desire to have as many present at the meeting tonight as possible, and judging from the interest evidenced at the informal conference Monday evening there will be plenty of party enthusiasts on hand tonight.

The committee appointed to formulate a suitable constitution and by-laws have performed their duty and will be ready to report this evening. They have formulated a plan that, it is expected, will prove the rejuvenation of party activity in local affairs. After the constitution and by-laws have been adopted the permanent organization will be effected. Officers will be chosen and the machinery set in motion to put the Democrats upon a sounder footing than has been the case in some years past.

The organization plans of the Democrats have aroused a great deal of interest among the Republican leaders. They are anxiously awaiting to see the developments, because with an active Democratic organization they will not have that serene feeling of security that has heretofore characterized their path in Plainfield.

HOME FOR EPILEPTICS.

NEW STATE INSTITUTION LOCATED ON MAPLEWOOD FARM.

Unfortunate Victims of Epilepsy Will Now Have a Place Where Their Peculiar Malady Will Get Attention.

The State village for epileptics will be established soon at Maplewood Farm, situated near Princeton and about two miles from Skillman station. The farm of 187 acres was owned by the family of the late David C. Voorhees up to the date of the purchase by the State Board of New Jersey appointed by Gov. Voorhees under an act of the last Legislature, to establish a State village for epileptics. The proposed village was the outgrowth of an investigation of the State commissioners appointed by Gov. Werts, whose attention was directed to the unfortunate condition of epileptics in the State Insane Asylum as reported by the State Hospital managers.

Adjoining Maplewood Farm is another tract of 213 acres owned by Rev. John F. Mesick, which the Board has agreed to purchase for the same purpose, making 400 acres in the State village.

The mansion house on Maplewood Farm was built nearly a century ago, but is in an excellent state of preservation. Another story will be added to it and it will be the main building in the village. Smaller dwellings will be erected on the farm and these will constitute the village.

Prof. Garrison, the secretary of the Board, gives his opinion that from his experience with the State Farm for Feeble-minded at Vineland, the State village for epileptics will eventually exist without an appropriation and be self-supporting.

Lost His Toes.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Westfield, November 2.—August Orlowsky, who conducts a hotel at Lorraine, had the toes of both his feet taken off in front of the station here at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. He stepped in front of the passenger train which he intended to go home on and was thrown to the side of the track. Before he could regain his balance the engine had run over his feet. He was carried into the station and Dr. F. A. Kinch dressed the wounds and had him removed to his home.

Hopes to Release Champion.

Attorney William G. DeMeza is in Elizabeth today in behalf of Alfred Champion, the colored man who was committed to the county jail a few weeks ago to serve a term of five months for disorderly conduct. Wm. DeMeza is hoping to procure his release on habeas corpus proceedings, and the case will be heard today by Judge Vail. The hearing was adjourned till Saturday.

—Next Friday evening the Borough Council will meet in regular session.

NEW WAY OF TALLYING.

ASSEMBLYMAN MURRAY'S PLAN TO BE PUT IN USE.

An Important Legal Objection Has Been Overcome so That One Tally Will Count for Every Candidate on Straight Ticket.

The new tally sheets as designed by Assembly Roger F. Murray have been prepared and are now ready for examination. It is customary for the city clerk to furnish tally sheets to the election boards. While all that is really necessary is a large sheet of unruled white paper, it has been the custom to furnish them with sheets neatly ruled and arranged after a method prepared by Mr. Murray several years ago. This year, City Clerk MacMurray will furnish each set of election officers with the new Murray sheets which they can use if they want to or else make one of the old fashioned kind for themselves.

It seems quite likely that the new method of tallying will be adopted throughout the city. There is almost universal favor shown the new sheets with the exception of in one or two districts which, it is believed, will see the advantage of the new system before election day.

The new tally sheets have been criticized by several and one prominent lawyer declared them illegal on the ground that it was necessary to tally after the name of every candidate instead of the straight ticket only. This has been overcome by printing the names of the candidates in very small type in black ink under the political title of each ticket printed in red ink so that each tally will be made after the names of all the candidates on the ticket as well as after the name of the ticket or party itself.

A NEW MAP OF MIDDLESEX.

It Will Go Into Details and Will Be of Great Value.

Middlesex people will soon have the privilege of buying a map of the county that is certain to give the greatest satisfaction, as well as the most detailed and accurate information concerning its topography and people. The map has been prepared, after months of hard labor, by F. A. Dunham, the well-known engineer, of this city, assisted by A. W. Vars, of Dunellen, and others. Every road in the county has been traversed and measured. Nothing has been left to chance. Engineer Vars, who directed the surveys and collated the data, took pride in the work, because he is a Middlesex man. This, coupled with Mr. Dunham's long experience as a map publisher, has insured a map which for thoroughness and authentic information could not be excelled.

The map will show rivers, streams, roads, canals, railroads, trolley roads, county roads, townships, cities, boroughs and villages, schools, churches and other public buildings; residences and owners names; cities, boroughs and villages and other points of interest. Also statistics of population and manufactures from the latest official sources, and interesting school statistics.

Young Lad Fractured His Arm.

A young German lad about 12 years of age, in the employ of Mrs. Ulrich, of Sixth street, is now suffering with a fractured arm, the result of a fall last Sunday in a barn owned by John Giles and located on Highland avenue. The lad together with some other boys went into the barn without Mr. Giles' permission and he was injured. He is now being treated at the home of Louis Miller on Lake street, to which place Joseph Blatz, a relative of Mrs. Ulrich had him taken. Mr. Giles does not want to be held responsible for the accident and says that if he had been home it would not have happened.

Death of Harvey B. Eycke.

Miss M. E. Eycke, of 39 Summit avenue, the trained nurse, was called last Saturday to her home at Lamington, N. J., on account of the serious illness of her father, Harvey B. Eycke. Mr. Eycke died Monday evening. He was fifty-six years of age, and for a year past has been in poor health. His death was due to acute Bright's disease. Mr. Ecke was known in Plainfield, where he has visited. The funeral services will be held tomorrow morning from the house at 10:30 o'clock.

Work at the Hospital.

The monthly report of Dr. Endicott, medical director of Muhlenberg Hospital, for the past month, shows that the total number of patients admitted were 24, discharged cured, 16; discharged improved, 3; died, 3; total treated, 39; dispensary cases, 52; total number of visits, 120.

A Romance of the Alps.

The Serviss illustrated lecture will take place at the Casino tomorrow night. The subject will be: "William Tell and the Romance of the Alps." Mr. Serviss will give an entertaining talk.

WILLIAMS IS NOW OFFICIALLY ALIVE

Administrator's Papers Have Been Set Aside.

ACTION IN ORPHANS' COURT.

STATEMENT MADE BY MOTHER OF ALLEGED DEAD MAN.

Testimony Taken Before Judge Vail This Morning—Mrs. Williams Said She Had Received Letters From Her Son—Father's Deposition Also Received—The Alleged Death was Sensational.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Nov. 2—Judge Vail, sitting in the Orphans' Court this morning, decided the application to set aside letters of administration granted last January on the estate of Harry B. Williams on the supposition that he was then dead. The testimony produced was that of the mother of Harry B. Williams, who produced several letters from her son since the date on which he was supposed to have been drowned. Mrs. Williams stated that she did not learn the fact until long after Mr. McDonald had been appointed administrator. The deposition of Walter C. Williams, the father, was also produced. In this, the father stated that he knew of his own knowledge that his son had not been drowned as he had previously believed, but was alive and well. The stipulation of counsel for the father and mother was also produced admitting that the facts set forth in Mr. McDonald's petition were true.

After the taking of testimony, the court heard argument by Craig A. Marsh and immediately rendered an opinion granting his application and making an order that the letters of administration be set aside, and declared null and void.

The Standard Life and Accident Insurance Company, of Detroit, which company had previously paid the administration $1,500 on an insurance policy, now expect to procure the refunding of the money without further trouble.

December 6th, Williams, his brother, Walter Gardon Williams, a young lawyer, and Frank Swackhamer, of this city, sailed for Portland, Me., ostensibly on a hunting trip. While off the Rhode Island shore the next morning it was alleged that he was taken sick and fell into the sea. No trace of him could be secured after that. Just previous to that he had taken out several thousand dollars worth of insurance policies. The Prudential Life Insurance Company, of Newark, paid an industrial policy of $150, and the Standard Life Insurance Company, of Detroit, also paid one for $1,500. The insurance companies became suspicious that Williams was not dead, and put detectives on the case.

Detectives, it was claimed, found Williams working in Pierre, Neb., under an assumed name and secured his photograph. Soon after that a detective concealed himself in the office of Walter Gordon Williams and over heard a conversation between the lawyer and his father. The detective was unable to suppress a sneeze and he was discovered. An exciting scene, it is alleged, took place in the office, and a short time after that all those implicated in the affair left town. The next heard of the Williams, was that they were on their way into the Klondike gold fields.

A NATIONAL PROBLEM.

Important Question to Be Debated by Young People

Just what disposition the United States ought to make of the Phillipine Islands will be decided Friday night at the debate between the Plainfield Law Debating Society and the North Plainfield High School, and representatives from each society will meet and hold a debate, taking that for their subject.

The North Plainfield debaters chosen are Fred Overton, Arthur Smith, Miss Katherine Dwight, Donald McGee, Frank Bach, Miss Emma Line, Miss Laura Osgood, Miss Maud Honeyman, Fred Emmel and Miss Rita Pond.

The other side will be represented by Charles Dolliver, Sanford Robinson, Douglass Drake, Edward Bellis, Harry Linbarger, Fred Van Liew, Harry DeMeza, John VanWinkle, Chas. McCann and Wm. Nash. The judges are Prof. Wightman, Francis J. Blatz and S. St. J. McCutchen.

—Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh has secured the services of Mr. Richardson, of New York, as typewriter and stenographer. Mr. Richardson is a court stenographer and conversant in all legal matters pertaining to court work.

TO STIR UP COLORED MEN

COLONEL MURRELL WILL GIVE A POLITICAL TALK.

Will Tell of the Republican Treatment of the Colored Men—Other Well-Known Speakers Will Also be Present.

Friday night the Democrats will have their first and last mass meeting in the present campaign, but it is calculated to be a rousing one. It will be held in Reform Hall on West Second street.

There will be several speakers, among whom, as announced yesterday, will be Col. Wm. Morrell, the somewhat noted colored politician. He used to be associated with the G.O.P., but now he is fighting them bitterly and some people think effectively. He is a speaker who throws his whole soul into his talks, and those who attend the meeting can expect to hear an address that will be decidedly stirring. He will devote himself particularly to telling how little the Republicans have done for the colored people.

Former Senator Fred Marsh, of Elizabeth, and Hon. John B. Green will also speak on the issues of the campaign. A number of the county candidates are expected to be present and say a few words.

A special feature of the meeting will be a number of moving pictures thrown on the screen by the cinematograph.

LIBRARY BUSINESS.

Suggestions Offered to Directors by School Superintendent.

A regular meeting of the Board of Directors of the Plainfield Public Library was held last evening with Messrs. Tyler, Cox, Tracy, Larrabee and Stillman present. A number of bills were ordered paid from the general fund and the Babcock fund. A letter was received from Superintendent Maxson, of the public schools, making some suggestions as to the use of the library by the public. The letter was read, received and referred to the library committee. Other matters referred to the same committee with power were the application of Albert E. King for teachers' cards, binders for periodicals, perforating stamp for Babcock library books, appropriations for replacing worn out books and buying a few new ones, label holders for new stock and bulletin boards. The report of the librarian was read and ordered filed.

Maddon's Remains Brought Home.

The remains of William Maddon, who was killed Saturday night on the railroad near Cranford, were brought home this morning and removed to the house in the "Eight Row." A service will be held at the house today, and interment will be in this city. Two of Maddon's children attended the Methodist church in Dunellen, and Rev. E. S. Jamison, of that church, will officiate at the services.

Dr. Hedges attended her, and today she was able to return to her home.

Still Alarm of Fire.

A still alarm of fire occurred this afternoon about 2 o'clock, caused by a bonfire built by some small boys near Westphal's grocery on West Fourth street. Chief Doane dispatched No. 2 hose wagon to the scene of the fire, but it was out before the apparatus arrived. There was no damage.

A Busy Scene.

Woodhull & Martin's stores presented a busy scene this morning at the arrival of the Christmas goods which the firm are receiving in large quantities. The goods began to arrive last night, and the clerks are kept busy unpacking and marking the goods.

Mrs. Mulford, of Chicago, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Baker, of West Fifth street.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Matthews, of Grove street, have returned from Philadelphia, where they have been attending the Peace Jubilee.

THROWN FROM TANDEM.

EXCITING EXPERIENCE ON A BICYCLE BUILT FOR TWO.

Perth Amboy Young Couple Encountered a Bad Man Near Netherwood—Butcher Wagon Appeared in Time.

It was a lucky thing for Charles Christian and his lady friend last night that a butcher's clerk drove by the Netherwood station, just about 7 o'clock, for in that way Christian escaped serious injury perhaps, and the loss of everything of value.

Christian lives in Perth Amboy and he and a lady friend rode over here yesterday on a tandem to visit friends. They started for home about 6:45 o'clock and had ridden as far as Netherwood, when they were held up.

Christian sat on the rear seat with his companion on front. When they were wheeling past the Netherwood station a man was seen to step out from a clump of thick trees which are in front of the station and hurl something at the pair.

Christian and his companion both dodged the expected blow, but it was not aimed at them but at the front wheel of the tandem. The club lodged in the spokes and threw both riders, the tandem falling on top. Before Christian could struggle to his feet, the man was on top of him and had his fingers in his throat.

Christian was in such a position that he could do nothing to help himself. Just then he heard the wheels of an approaching wagon, and let out a loud yell. The highwayman heard it too and at the shout left his prey and ran.

All this occurred so rapidly that the lady did not have a chance to extricate herself. Both were badly frightened and the wheel was wrecked, but neither one of the wheelmen was hurt. The wagon proved to be a butcher's wagon, and the driver helped the two carry their wheel to the station where they took a train for home.

VOORHEES IS TO SPEAK.

REPUBLICAN MASS MEETING IN MUSIC HALL TOMORROW NIGHT.

He Will be Accompanied by the Rest of His Campaigners and Former Speaker Cross, Candidate for Senator.

Plainfield Republicans were among the first of New Jersey to push along the boom of Foster Voorhees for Governor, and tomorrow night when that eminent gentleman, together with the rest of his campaigning party, appears in this city to speak in Music Hall the local G. O. P. will probably "hump" itself and give them a rousing reception. Of course, Voorhees is a favorite son in Plainfield in all that term applies in a political way, and his Republican friends will take every means to let him know how good they feel for him and for the battle he is fighting.

Besides the address by Voorhees, Congressman Fowler will also be present and discuss the issues of the campaign. Former Speaker Cross, Republican candidate for Senator, will be here as well to guage the afterthoughts of the local Republicans as to how they regard his candidacy after having their favorite, Mr. Ackerman, defeated.

Hon. Frank Scott, of Paterson, will be among the speakers in the Voorhees party.

The Republicans have decided to reserve seats for the ladies who care to attend the meeting.

The Union County Republican candidates for Senate and Assembly began yesterday a stumping tour of the county which they propose to continue until election day. They drove to New Providence and Summit, and today visit Springfield and Union. All the other townships and cities in the county will be visited on the following days, and personal conferences will be held with the voters.

There will be meetings held by the Republicans at Westfield and Cranford on Saturday night at which Judge Cross and Assemblymen Squire, Houston and Murray will made addresses.

The Republicans in Union will whoop things up in a lively fashion from now until election day.

Funeral of Mrs. Zeisz.

The funeral services of the late Mrs. Andrew Zeisz, of New street, were held yesterday afternoon from the house at 2 o'clock and from the German Lutheran church at 2:30. The services were in charge of Rev. Eyme, pastor of the church, and he spoke comforting words concerning the departed. There were many floral tributes from friends and a large pillow from the Ladies' Aid Society of the church. Interment was in the North Plainfield cemetery and the pall bearers were Augustus Feiring, Christopher Koller, John Becker, Fred Gray, Wm. Cortwright and Frank Scheelein.

METZ GAINED FAVOR WITH THE COURT.

Sneak Thief Received Sentence of Six Months in Jail.

WHY LENIENCY WAS SHOWN

HE EXPOSED A PLOT OF PRISONERS TO BREAK JAIL.

For This Reason Judge Vail Decided to Let Him Off as Easily as Possible—His Wife Was in Court When Sentence Was Pronounced—He Stole $125 From the Home of William Stanbery in Fanwood.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, N. J., November 2.—Paul Metz, the self-confessed sneak thief who entered William Stanbery's house in Fanwood early this fall and ransacked the house of money and valuable jewels, came up before Judge Vail this morning for sentence. It was expected that he would get off lightly, and it was no surprise when he was given only six months in the county jail and ordered to pay the costs of court. As Metz has already spent two months in confinement, the punishment is more severe than it appears at first sight.

Metz appeared at the Stanbery homestead one day two months ago in the guise of a piano tuner. No one was at home at the time except the servant, to whom Metz made his business known. The girl hesitated, but being assured that everything was all right, finally admitted him and went off about her work.

When Mr. and Mrs. Stanbery returned home, the piano tuner was gone and with him all the money and jewelry he could find which amounted to $125. Mr. Stanbery put detectives on the man's track, and a few days afterwards Metz was arrested in Benner's road house in Fanwood where he was trying to sell a piano.

Metz pleaded guilty when arraigned in court, and was remanded for sentence. During his confinement he became aware of a plot to break jail, in which Roesel, the murderer of Farmer Pitts, and Wilson, who was confined for obtaining money under false pretenses, were the principal movers. Metz confided the information to one of the keepers, and the attempt was nipped in the bud.

For this the Court this morning reduced the sentence as much as possible, and now Metz will escape State prison. The complaining witness in the matter and his lawyer, ex Judge W. R. Codington, were present at the passing of sentence, and so was the prisoner's wife.

TALLY-HO PARTY.

Wealthy People Passed Through Plainfield This Morning.

The arrival of a tally-ho and four at the City Hotel this morning attracted considerable attention from local people, and while the party stopped in the city a great crowd gathered and watched proceedings with interest. In the party was H. McK. Twombley and wife, (nee Miss Vanderbilt), and four friends from Madison, where Mr. Twombley has his country seat. They were on their way to Princeton, where they will spend a few days. They expect to return home Friday or Saturday. Previous to the start from here a piece of harness broke while driving through Park avenue, and this delayed the party for a short time. The course taken from here was through Park avenue to Metuchen.

Borough Registration.

Yesterday being the last day for registry there was considerable hustling in the borough. The registration this year is the largest for several years and there is every indication that the vote this year will be very large. In the First district there were fifteen names added to the list and four erasures, making a total registration of 665 as against 631 last year. In the Second district there were thirteen names added to that list, making the total 544. In 1897 there were only a few over 500 names registered in the Second district.

Corner Stone Laying.

The corner stone of the new Calvary Baptist church (colored) will be laid Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Several out-of-town speakers will be present, and the services will last until 10 o'clock at night, being continued in Reform Hall.

Many Amendments to be Considered.

Next Tuesday evening a very important meeting of the local branch of the United Brotherhood Carpenters and Joiners of America, will be held at which time fifty amendments to the by-laws and constitution will be considered.

—Exclusive of barns and out-buildings there are 2,792 buildings in this city.

LOOKS LIKE A FIGHT

Two Companies Propose to Build Nicaragua Canal.

CONGRESS MAY INTERFERE

Former Mayor Grace Alone Stands Sponsor for New Syndicate. Waterway Must be Completed in Three Years. Old Company Claims Latest Grant Infringes on Its Rights.

New York, Nov. 2.—The capitalists behind the new Nicaragua canal syndicate, who, through Edward F. Cragin of Chicago and Edward Eyre of New York, have obtained a sweeping concession from the Republic of Nicaragua, will not disclose their names.

Former Mayor Wm. R. Grace, however, stands sponsor for them in the statement that behind the syndicate there is an ample supply of money.

Mr. Collis P. Huntington, whose name was yesterday mentioned as one of the capitalists in the syndicate, denies that he is in any way interested, and expresses the opinion that if the syndicate stops to count the cost its members will not build.

The concession of the new syndicate is to go into force when that of the Maritime Canal Company shall expire, in October of next year.

The concession provides that the canal shall be built in three years, and the work of construction must begin before April 10, 1900.

The profits of the canal are to go to the new company for one hundred and ninety-nine years, at the end of which period half the net receipts will go to the Republic of Nicaragua.

Should the waterway not be completed in three years the new canal company must connect the uncompleted water route by railroad, so that there will be a continuous system of transportation between the two oceans.

Mr. Hiram Hitchcock, proprietor of the Fifth Avenue Hotel, is president of the Maritime Canal Company, whose concession expires on October 10 of next year. This company is composed of American business men who have a charter from the United States and concessions from Costa Rica and Nicaragua.

They have already spent millions in surveys, soundings, engineering plans, telegraph lines, the building of wharves and the clearing of land, the construction of buildings, the laying out of a railroad and the opening of more than a mile of the canal.

There is a bill now in Congress to give government aid to this enterprise. A commission of experts appointed by the United States has reported on the practicability of the route, and places the cost at $110,000,000.

The concession, while it expires on October 10 of next year, contains a renewal clause providing for indefinite extension should the work at that period be well under way.

Should the bill now before Congress pass at the December session, which is likely, the canal would be well on the way to completion in October of next year, and the Cragin-Eyre concession would fail.

The select committee of the Senate has reported favorably the bill to aid the Maritime Canal and also distinctly recognizes in its report that the men who now hold the concession have certain property rights which should be protected by the United States in the event of any attempt on the part of Nicaragua to deprive them of the privileges they have under the concession granted.

HEART DISEASE.

SOME FACTS REGARDING THE RAPID INCREASE OF HEART TROUBLE.

Do Not be Alarmed, But Look For the Cause.

Heart troubles, at least among Americans, are certainly increasing and while this may be largely due to the excitement and worry of American business life, it is more often the result of weak stomachs, of poor digestion.

Real, organic heart disease is incurable; but not one case in a hundred of heart trouble is organic.

The close relation between heart trouble and poor digestion is because both organs are controlled by branches of the same great nerves, the Sympathetic and Pneumogastric.

In another way, also the heart is affected by that form of poor digestion, which causes gas and fermentation from half digested food; there is a feeling of oppression and heaviness in the chest caused by pressure of the distended stomach on the heart and lungs, interfering with their action; hence arises palpitation and short breath.

Poor digestion also poisons the blood, makes it thin and watery, which irritates and weakens the heart.

The most sensible treatment for heart trouble is to improve the digestion and to insure the prompt assimilation of food.

This can best be done by the regular use after meals, of some safe, pleasant and effective digestive preparation, like Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, which may be found at most drug stores and which contain valuable, harmless digestive elements in a pleasant, convenient form.

It is safe to say that the regular, persistent use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at meal time will cure any form of stomach trouble except cancer of the stomach.

FRANCE WILL BACK DOWN.

Will Quit Fashoda and the Bahr-el-Ghaze Territory

London, Nov. 2.—William Hayes Fisher, one of the junior lords of the treasury, and member of Parliament for Fulham, as well as a ministerial whip, speaking in London last evening said he had seen dispatches which enabled him to assert that the French government had decided to recall the Marchand expedition from Fashoda.

In the course of an interview after the delivery of his speech, Mr. Fisher on being reminded that he had said he had seen the dispatches justifying his assertion of the intention of France to withdraw Marchand, replied that he did not say that he had read them, remarking that he had been misreported.

There is little doubt, however, that either purposely or carelessly Mr. Fisher allowed the news of the actual fact to leak out.

The Daily Graphic says this morning:

"We learn from an official source in Paris that Captain Baratier bears instructions to Major Marchand to return to Fashoda and then to withdraw his expedition in the direction of the Upper Ubangho river, north of the Congo, evacuating Fashoda, and the five posts established by him east of the frontier indicated in the Anglo-German agreement.

"The Egyptian government will be invited to send troops to accompany Major Marchand as he retires from the Bahr-el-Ghazel territory and to reoccupy the posts as they are evacuated by the French officers, thus solving the difficulty concerning Major Marchand's revictualment.

Central American Coalition.

San Francisco, Nov. 2.—The steamer Acapulco, which has arrived here from South America, brings news of the coalition of three Central American states, Salvador, Nicaragua and Honduras, which will be conducted under a common administration, to be known as the United States of Central America.

The inauguration of the new regime was to have been ushered in yesterday according to the Acapulco's passengers, and a grand celebration in honor of the event was to be held at Amapla, which is to be the seat of government. Under the new form of government the administration passes into the control of a representative from each of the republics—Dr. Salvador Callego of Salvador, Miguel Agnelugarte of Honduras and Dr. Manuel Corrolel Matus of Nicaragua.

These three will continue in power until March 4 next, when they will formally elect a president of the United States of Central America, who will hold office for four years.

Heavy Shortage in Taxes.

Holyoke, Mass., Nov. 2.—This city's back tax muddle is slowly but surely being cleared up.

The expert who has been sending out circulars to alleged delinquent taxpayers has received two thousand returns, and nearly every person has exhibited a receipt.

The amount covered by the receipts exceeds $150,000. All these are marked as not paid in the collectors' books.

The aldermen held an excited meeting last night and passed orders instructing the city solicitor to demand of former Collector Keough and the sureties on his bonds for 195, 1896 and 189, the amount of money committed to the collectors and not yet paid to the city treasurer, and in case of their failure to pay the amounts, to immediately institute proceedings against the bondsmen and the former collector.

The city treasurer was ordered to demand of Mr. Keough all taxes and interest on taxes due the city for the last three years, the amount being $260,000.

During the last two months the former collector has turned in only $30,000 of this $260,000.

New Demand for Spirits.

Peoria, Ill., Nov. 2.—The internal revenue collections for October in the Peoria district amount to over $2,200,000, which is far above the average at this season of the year.

The unusual demand is due to the efforts of this and other governments to supply themselves with smokeless powder, of which spirits is an important component.

The Standard Distilling Company has just sent a special train of twenty-three cars of spirits to San Francisco, consigned to the Japanese government, which will use the spirits in the manufacture of smokeless powder.

Two more large shipments for Japan have been ordered for early in November.

Since the war broke out the Peoria distilleries have sold over four thousand borrels of spirits to the United States government for smokeless powder.

Frolic Laid Up at Norfolk.

Norfolk, Nov. 2.—The converted yacht Frolic, formerly the Hanna yacht Comanche, now at the Norfolk navy yard, where she underwent repairs, was recently assigned to the Illinois naval reserve as a practice ship.

On October 2 the authorities of the state of Illinois were notified that the vessel was ready to undertake the long voyage up the coast, the St. Lawrence river, through the Welland canal and the great lakes to Chicago.

The crew was to be sent from Chicago, but for some reason has not yet arrived.

Yesterday orders were received from Washington to take the Frolic's stores out and lay her up for the winter, as the St. Lawrence is closed by ice.

Brought $45,000 in Nuggets.

Bridgeport, Conn., Nov. 2.—J. A. Johnson and his wife, who went to the Klondike in the spring of 1897, arrived in this city yesterday on their way to their home in Northfield.

They bring home with them $45,000, most of which is in gold nuggets. They relate many interesting experiences of the hardships of prospectors.

Mrs. Johnson was instrumental in locating a claim for her husband in the original Bonanza Creek diggings, and it was from this property that their wealth was derived.

WILL PEACE PLAN FAIL?

Paris Papers Think Spain Will Break Off Negotiations.

NOT TO YIELD PHILIPPINES

They Persist Also in the Story that the Cuban Debt Question Was Only Settled for the Time Spain Will Rather Withdraw Than Submit to Humiliating Terms.

Paris, Nov. 2.—The French papers derive their news of the work of the peace negotiations from Spanish sources, and, therefore, the morning papers here are interesting, as indicating the atmosphere in Spanish quarters.

It must be remembered that the Spaniards have unconditionallyac cepted the refusalo ft he United States to assume the Cuban debt, and the Cuban article is ready for the final treaty, providing differences on the question of the Philippines shall not prevent the making of any treaty.

As the whole is composed of all its parts, so must the Philippine question be mutually agreed upon or none of those questions previously agreed on will find a place in the treaty.

This is all the provision or provisional understanding existent.

In view of the facts, then, the Paris press shows ate ndency to confuse the situation.

The Matin says: "It is well understood that the cession of Porto Rico was tantamount to the payment of a war indemnity in cash, and entirely freed Spain from any subsequent repetition on the subject."

Turing to Cuba, the Matin continues: "The Spaniards declined to concur in separating the debt from the pledge, the mortgage from the loan, and as it was impossible to reach an understanding, they asked that at least the order of the protocol be inverted, and that the question of the Philippines be previously discussed, that question possibly offering the Americans an opportunity for tendering some compensation for the enormous sacrifices they have forced upon the conquered.

"The Americans finally acceded to the change, and only asked the Spaniards to accept provisionally the clauses relating to the Cuban debt, with the reservation that the acceptance could be withdrawn if no agreement was reached as to the Philippines."

Referring to Monday's meeting, the Matin says: "The Spaniards said that they would make their answer known on Friday. But it is easy to foresee what it will be—a refusal, precise and formal. The Spanish plenipotentiaries have made up their minds, in the event of the United States adverting to the Philippine proposition, to decline signing the act of peace, to break off the negotiations and to call upon the civilized nations to witness the abuse of and theviol ation of the provisions set forth in the Washington protocol."

The Gaulois remarks: "The Spaniards will never agree to abandon the archipelago without compensation and we believe the Americans intend to suggest that they will assume the Philippine debt. We hope the negotiations will not be broken, but Spain, it is given out as certain, would take such a course rather than submit to humiliating terms."

To Stamp Out Yellow Fever.

Mexico City, Nov. 2.—The government is taking measures for carrying out the sanitation of Mexican gulf ports. It is believed here that when the American government completes the reconstruction of the sewerage system of Havana and cleans out the bay, with moderate care in Mexican gulf ports yellow fever can be stamped out. Heavy northerly gales on the coast are reported, and the health of the coast cities has improved.

The death of Colonel Waring is much lamented here by sanitarians, he being considered the best man to accomplish the work of sanitation.

Laredo, Tex., Nov. 2.—Mexican officials report four deaths from yellow fever in Monterey on Sunday. Entire families are known to be stricken. Reliable information is to the effect that the business in that city is paralyzed.

Honors for War Heroes.

Washington, Nov. 2.—Brigadier General Theodore Schwan, United States volunteers(c olonel, assistant adjutant general United States army); Brigadier General H. V. Boynton, United States volunteers, and Lieutenant Colonel W. H. Carter, assistant adjutant general, have been constituted a board for the purpose of making recommendations for brevet promotions, the award of medals of honor and cedtificates of merit for the officers and enlisted men who participated in the campaigns of Santiago, the Philippines and Porto Rico.

The board is instructed to meet in this city on November 9.

The Whaling Season.

San Francisco, Nov. 2.—The whaling bark Horatio has reached port from the Arctic ocean with eight hundred and forty barrels of sperm oil, three hundred and fifty barrels of whale oil, and 4,300 pounds of bone, the whole being valued at over 35,000.

It is estimated that the whaling fleet will put more than a million and a half dollars in circulation in San Francisco this winter.

Naval Officers Discharged.

Lieutenant W. H. Eliot, Ensign J. F. Tatem, Naval Cadet G. D. Montgomery, Passed Assistant Engineer W. H. Badlam, Assistant Engineers F. W. Roller, W. Goodman, McC. Pate, J. F. Morris, T. Dimon and C. H. Treat.

No Sale of Cherokee Lands.

Washington, Nov. 2.—The interior department has no information regarding a reported project for buying up the lands of the Cherokee Indians in Indian Territory, and the authorities say that the Cherokee nation could not sell its lands save to the United States government.

EMPEROR WILLIAM AT JERUSALEM.

He Promises for Peace and Renews His Vow to Serve the Lord

Jerusalem, Nov. 1, delayed in transmission.—Emperor William went to Mount Zion this morning, where occurred the ceremony of hoisting the German and Turkish flags on a piece of ground upon which, according to tradition, formerly stood the abode of the Virgin Mary, and which the sultan presented to the German emperor.

Jerusalem, Nov. 2.—Emperor William has telegraphed to the pope, saying: "I am happy to be able to inform your holiness that, thanks to the benevolent intervention of his majesty, the sultan, who has not hesitated to give me this proof of his personal friendship, I have been able to acquire at Jerusalem the abode of the Holy Virgin. I decided to place this ground, consecrated by so many pious memories, at the disposal of my Catholic subjects. It rejoices my heart to be able thus to prove how dear to me are the religious interests of the Catholics whom Divine Providence has placed in my care. I beg your holiness to accept the assurance of my sincere attachment."

The pope replied, thanking him and expressing satisfaction at the gift, for which he was sure the German Catholics would be deeply grateful.

The emperor, at the close of the ceremony of consecration of the Church of the Redeemer here, read an address, during which he said:

"From Jerusalem came the light in splendor from which the German nation became great and glorious, and what the Germanic peoples have become they became under the banner of the cross, the emblem of self-sacrificing charity. As nearly two thousand years ago, so to-day shall I ring out the cry, voicing my ardent hope, to all —'Peace on earth!' "

He then renewed the vow of his ancestors, saying: "I and my house will serve the Lord." He then called upon all present to make the same vow, concluding with a prayer—"God grant that confidence in the Almighty, brotherly love, resignation in suffering, and efficient work may remain the German nation's noblest ornament, and that the spirit of peace may more and more permeate and hallow the evangelical church."

The War Inquiry.

Washington, Nov. 2.—The members of the war inquiry commission who did not go to Lexington, Cincinnati and other western cities, reached Washington yesterday and will hold a meeting to-day to arrange for the trip to Camp Meade, near Middletown, Pa., where they expect to procure testimony bearing upon the conduct of Camps Alger and Wikoff.

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 2.—Before the war inquiry commission yesterday, General J. C. Bates testified ast o the camps at Mobile and Chickamauga. He went to see General Brooke regarding the lack of equipments, clothing and other supplies. He said:

"The day before we left Mobile we got pretty well supplied. These were supplies for recruits. At Santiago we had bread and meat always. Montauk Point was not the proper place for a camp of sick soldiers at this time of year. At Montauk Point I learned that the Long Island Railroad had an extensive contract to haul the soldiers to the city. I issued orders to allow other railroads to come in and help take off the sick.

"In Cuba medical supplies were wofully short. The medical officers said they could not get them."

Death of a Centenarian.

Bellefonte, Pa., Nov. 2.—Nancy J. Barger died yesterday morning at the age of one hundred and six years and one month.

Two months ago she fell and received injuries which resulted in her death.

She was born in Cumberland county in 792, and with her husband came to this county in 1814, and had lived in the same house for more than sixty years.

Five children survive, the oldest being Samuel Barger, aged eighty-four years. Mrs. Barger was in possession of all her faculties until her death.

Joseph Leiter's Plan.

Chicago, Nov. 2.—Joseph Leiter, who returned home yesterday, speaking of the purchase of the Providence Locomotive Works, said:

"The deal is going through, but I am not prepared to give out any of the details further than to say that a corporation will take over the plant and continue the manufacture of locomotives and other specialties."

It is said that John W. Gates of the Illinois Steel Company, and several New York people are interested in the Providence deal with Leiter.

Coming on the St. Louis.

Southampton, Nov. 2.—The American line steamer St. Louis, which is scheduled to sail from this port on November 5 for New ork, will have on board as passengers Thomas W. Cridler, the third assistant secretary of state, and special commissioner of the United States to the Paris exposition of 900, and Mrs. Cridler, Justin McCarthy, Mme. Nordica, Ferdinand W. Peck, the commissioner general for the United States to the Paris exposition, and Mrs. Peck and Olga Nethersole.

Highbinders Make Threats.

San Francisco, Nov. 2.—Friendly Chinese have warned Rev. Dr. Garner, interpreter of the Chinese bureau, who is making an aggressive campaign against the trade in slave girls, that Highbinders had decided to take his life if he persists in supplying the government with information detrimental to Highbinders and their chattels.

Rebellion in the Philippines.

Madrid, Nov. 2.—A dispatch from the Visayas group of the Philippine islands says that several companies of native troops there have rebelled.

They were pursued and several of them were killed.

The governor of the Visayas expressed the hope that the rebellion would not spread.

DISPOSITION OF TROOPS

Arrangements for Sending Men to Occupy Cuba.

PLANS ARE UNCHANGED

What the Administration Desires. Gen. Wood to Stay at Santiago. Volunteers who Want to Be Relieved from Garrison Duty. Reorganization of the Army.

Washington, Nov. 2.—There has been no change in the plans of the war department respecting the sending of troops to Cuba.

No date has ever been fixed for the troops to depart. The only thing that has been determined is that the control of the island shall pass to the United States on January .

Attempts to make it appear that the death of Colonel Waring from yellow fever has changed the plans of the department are without basis.

When General Lee was in Washington the earliest date he recommended for sending troops to Cuba was November 15, and he did this with several reservations, suggesting that only a small number be sent, and to places where there was little danger of disease and fever.

With a view to making arrangements for the troops, a board of officers was sent to Cuba to select camp sites and ascertain what was needed for the troops.

The principal officers of this board, Colonels Hecker and Lee, have been ordered to Washington, and their reports will be carefully considered before any troops are sent to Cuba.

The war department, moreover, does not wish to have any conflict with the Spanish troops as to occupation of towns, and therefore desires to send the United States troops into Cuba only a short time before the Spanish troops leave.

Owing to climatic conditions the United States has not been pressing for immediate evacuation, requesting only that reasonable progress should be made by the Spanish authorities.

A few months ago General Wood, in command of the city of Santiago, intimated to the secretary of war that he would like to come home on leave of absence, but in view of the fact that General Lawton has turned over the command of the Department of Santiago to General Wood and has been assigned to a division command in the United States, it will be impossible for General Wood to return to this country at present.

He has made up his mind to remain at Santiago, has taken a house there, and Mrs. Wood, with their children, will sail for Santiago a week from today.

The request of the First Colorado infantry to be returned from Manila to the United States cannot be granted by the war department. It was said by officers of the army yesterday that such requests had been frequent from soldiers of volunteer organizations who enlisted to fight, but did not enlist for garrison duty. The desire of this regiment to return home was simply the desire of other volunteers.

Nothing could be done, an officer said, until Congress met and provided some kind of a force to take the place of the volunteers.

The subject of reorganizing the army with a view to securing an adequate force for the new possessions of the United States has already received the serious consideration of the president, the secretary of war and others of the army, and the president will make recommendations to Congress on this subject.

It is probable that he will recommend an increase of the army to something like one hundred thousand men, or at least seventy-five thousand.

Burglars at Wallingford.

Wallingford, Nov. 2.—The biggest robbery which has taken place in this vicinity for several years occurred here Tuesday morning.

Burglars, whose work showed that they were professional cracksmen, entered the house of F. E. Simpson and stole jewelry valued at about $1,500, $20 in cash, valuable papers, considerable of the family plate and several diamonds.

The burglars evidently knew their ground. The members of the family were all away and the burglars escaped long before the robbery was discovered.

There is no clue to the identity of the thieves.

Postmaster Under Arrest.

Concord, N. H., Nov. 2.—Frank E. Foss, postmaster at Hill, has been arrested upon the charge of embezzling $6,000 belonging to the government.

His failure to make customary monthly remittances led to an investigation, and his arrest followed as a result.

Foss is the owner of a general country store, and, it is charged, issued money orders to himself as an individual trader and remitter, payable to banks in various parts of New England.

Cotton Goods Failure.

Providence, Nov. 2.—John H. H. Mason & Sons, cotton goods manufacturers, filed their voluntary petition in bankruptcy yesterday, with liabilities of $80,000 and assets of $120,000 in real estate and personal property and $180,000 in accounts.

The partners file individual petitions. Eugene W. Mason's liabilities are $330,000, with assets of a little over $100,000, and John H. Mason's liabilities amount to $180,000, with assets of about $110,000.

New Departure in Insurance.

Toronto, Nov. 2.—Insurance companies doing life business in Canada have agreed hereafter not to accept risks on lives of married women unless they are breadwinners of the family.

The object is to lessen the crime of murder for insurance.

Ormond's Not Sold.

San Francisco, Nov. 2.—A telegram from the agent of W. O'B. McDonough, the owner of Ormonde, says that the Duke of Westminster's offer of $50,000 has been declined.

NEW YORK TROOPS VOTING.

The Two Hundred and Second Regiment Balloting for Governor To-day.

Camp Meade, Middletown, Pa., Nov. 2.—An election was held in the Two Hundred and Second New ork regiment yesterday for state and district offices. The Two Hundred and First will vote to-day and the Two Hundred and Third on Thursday.

Polls were opened at eight o'clock in the Two Hundred and Second's camp, and four inspectors chosen by each company to conduct the election.

Major G. W. Hobbs, representing the New York secretary of state, has supplied each company with poll books and ballots. The ballots contain all the headings that any soldier may require, although he must paste or write the names of the candidates.

An official list of all the candidates has been posted by Major Hobbs in a conspicuous place in each regimental camp. After the polls close the ballots will be sealed and sent to the secretary of state at Albany.

He will, in turn, transmit them to the county clerks of the various districts represented by the soldiers.

These clerks will send the ballots to the district inspectors to be included in the return of the several districts.

NATIONAL BANK CIRCULATION.

Washington, Nov. 2.—The monthly circulation statement of the comptroller of the currency shows that the total amount of national bank notes in circulation on October 31 was $238,546,281, an increase for the month of $4,189,331, and an increase for the year of $9,499,916.

The circulation based on United States bonds amounted to $210,045,452, an increase for the month of $4,989,393, and an increase for the year of $6,119,776.

The circulation secured by lawful money aggregated $29,500,825, a decrease for the month of $800,062, and an increase for the year of $3,380,140.

The amount of United States registered bonds on deposit to secure circulation was $235,618,470, and to secure public deposits $70,875,100.

Of these amounts $58,544,220 is in the new three per cent. loan of 1898.

Porto Rican Currency.

Washington, Nov. 2.—An important question which occupied the attention of the cabinet yesterday was that relating to the currency of the island of Porto Rico.

Te fluctuating rate of exchange between the island and the United States and on the island itself between the peso and the dollar, has greatly hindered the transaction of business, and this notwithstanding the fixing of the ratio at the custom house of two pesos to one dollar.

Many complaints have been received, both from Porto Rican business men and from New York houses engaged in the trade.

The treasury department has not yet made any official investigation of the financial situation in Porto Rico, and Assistant Secretary Vanderlip, will go to San Juan on or before November 29 to look into the matter.

No definite action was taken yesterday by the cabinet toward the settlement of the currency question of the island further than to refer the whole question to Secretary Gage for investigation.

To Entertain Soldiers.

Burlington, Vt., Nov. 2.—Dr. W. Seward Webb will give a reception to officers of the Third United States cavalry at the Shelburne house, Shelburne Farms, on the afternoon of November 12.

The governor of Vermont and staff, and state officers, officers of the Twenty-first United States infantry, at Plattsburg, N. Y.; officers of the United States army and navy, residing in Vermont; officers of the First regiment Vermont volunteer infantry of the war with Spain; officers of the Vermont National Guard; representatives of the Vermont Commandery, Military Order of the Loyal Legion; of the Grand Army of the Republic; of the Vermont Societies of Colonial Wars and of the Sons of the American Revolution have been invited.

New York, Nov. 2.—This afternoon at three o'clock there will be unveiled in the chapel of the American Female Guardian Society and Home for the Friendless, No. 29 East Twenty-ninth street, a bronze tablet in memory of the late president of the society, Mrs. Henry C. Houghton.

The work of the society is for homeless and neglected children, and the design of the tablet, which is that of the Good Shepherd, beautifully typifies this.

The drawing was made by Albert Operti, the modelling done by Mr. G. Moretti and casting at the Roman Bronze Works under Mr. R. Bertelli.

The whole design was developed under the oversight of Mr. George G. Rockwood.

Robbed a Bohemian Bank.

Chicago, Nov. 2.—Lambert Wilt, the absconding controller of the Burglau Savings Bank, Bohemia, with his wife and aunt, were brought here yesterday from St. Louis, where they were arrested Monday.

Wilt, through an interpreter, confessed to having embezzled forty-five thousand dollars of the bank's funds, and expressed relief that he was through with being a fugitive.

In Wilt's possession was found $5,521 and he is said to have considerable more of the $45,000 which he stole from the Bohemian Bank on deposit in New York.

Delay in Occupation of Cuba.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 2.—After the meeting of the cabinet yesterday Secretary Alger made the following statement in regard to the military occupation of Cuba:

"It has been decided not to send troops to Cuba until the yellow fever in the island is under control. To send soldiers there now might result in considerable loss of life. The occupation will, however, be formally begun on December 1, and will be completed by January 1."

The Hospital.

There is no institution in Plainfield that attracts more popular interest than the Muhlenberg Hospital, and the synopsis of the annual report of the Board of Governors, published in The Daily Press yesterday, gives a very clear idea of the splendid work that the hospital is performing for the suffering humanity.

The figures showing the great increase of patients at the hospital, as well as the increased cost of operation that accompanies such a condition, were doubtle s surprising to many people, but it was equally astonishing to know that though the work of the hospital has increased 500 per cent during the last five years the income has only increased seventy-five per ernt. It is a striking comparison that shows a trying situation that constantly confronts those who devote their time and energy, without thought of compensation, to its success.

In a place of 20,000 people, there should be more than 119 personal contributors to the support of the hospital, as the report shows. It is evident that the Board of Governors hesitate about making a canvass of the city and borough for private contrbutions in order to raise enough funds for the proper conduct of the institution, but if such a method is undertaken a ready and liberal responce should be accorded to the appeal that is made.

In view of the large number of young lawyers Plainfield has turned out within the last few years and the numbers still in process of incubation, the determination of the lawyers of Newark to secure legislation which will make more stringent the rules for admission to the bar arouse, considerable interest hereabouts. It is proposed that no young man should be registered as a law student until he has passed an examination in the common English branches or is a college graduate or able to give satisfactory evidence of his ability in those branches. It is also proposed that every student should pass an examination at least once a year and a thorough examination just prior to the motion for admission to the bar.

If the nomination of Judge Cross for Senator in Union has left any heartburning among friends of others of the many candidates, they should follow the honorable example set by Mahlon Pitney. The ex-Representative saw that the people wanted to give to Mr. Voorhees a full term, and that while they appreciated him and his services, the public demand for Mr. Voorhees must be heeded to insure a victory. Mr. Pitney bowed to the decree, then jumped into the fray to help elect Mr. Voorhees, and because of this magnanimity the people of Morris nominated him for and will elect him a Senator. The only way to achieve success is to deserve it and earn it, and in the fullness of time Judge Cross' opponents will, if they emulate Pitney, be in line for political preferment.

Senator Smith had interviews with Democratic leaders throughout the State yesterday and cautioned them against having any candidate sacrificed on the Democratic ticket in favor of any other candidate. As for himself the Senator said that he did not want to go back to the United States Senate at the expense of someone else. The Senator, however, believes this is a Democratic year and that it will be unnecessary for any candidates to be traded off with Republicans.

REV. A. B. SIMPSON.

The power there is in suggestion (sometimes called hypnotism) was shown at the recent meeting held in Carnegie Hall, New York, by the Christian Missionary Alliance. An impassioned appeal delivered at this meeting by Rev. A. B. Simpson, head of the Alliance, resulted in the collection of $113,000 for the conversion of heathens.

The following items have been culled from The News and are here reproduced to show the wonderful enterprise and brilliancy of the reporters employed on that paper:

Mrs. Jones while returning yesterday afternoon from Metuchen had a puncture and had to walk almost the whole way in the boiling sun.

A number of new signs are being painted for the street cars. The ones which have been in use had become worn out and the letters were hard to read especially at night.

The people had quite a little time with the electric lights Tuesday night. For some reason nearly all of them went out early in the evening and the town was in darkness.

People may talk about the degeneration of the cartoons that appear in the newspapers of the country, as compared with those of Mast twenty years ago, but there are two caricaturists in this country who are drawing political cartoons every day in the year that combine a world of force and idea in them that columns of pica editorials would not convey. They are Cory of the Evening World and Nelan of the Herald.

As an evidence of what the threatened prosecution of assesors throughout the State has done, the total returns made to the State board of assessors shows an increase of $31,756,108 in the valuation of taxable property throughout the State. Union county is fifth in the list of the counties showing an increase, the increase being $1,047,700. Somerset county has an increase of $528,324.

Whether or not Col. Morrell, the eminent colored politician, makes any votes for the Democrats in Plainfield among his brethren, we venture the prediction that he will make one of the liveliest arguments that the local colored contingent has heard in many a day. The Colonel is enthusiastic if nothing else.

The Democrats seem to have struck the right plan in their reorganization efforts in their intention to interest every Democratic voter in the association they intend to form. With a Democratic Association, the management of the party is constantly in the hands of the rank and file.

The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company have increased their capital stock from $5,000,000 to $-,000,000. Some people may say that talk is cheap, but the above statement proves that in some cases it is costly for some one and very profitable to the telephone company.

Under the distribution of the money received from the equal taxation bill, Union county receives $6,000. Salem county shows up as the smallest beneficary in the State, her share only being $152.15.

Anthony Kiligore is now editor of the Hunterdon County Democrat. He promises to continue the same policy that has marked the course of the paper for the past sixty years—sturdily Democratic.

The Democrats expect to get together tonight and do something that good politics should have taught them to do years ago—form a thorough party organization.

Plainfield won't see real interesting politics till after the State election. Then comes the municipal campaign, and lively times are expected.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

There have been so few arrests this summer and fall that it looks very much as though the total number of arrests this year will fall very much below the total for 1897, which was 800. As things seem to be going now the report January 1st will not show more than 500. There are several good reasons for this, the police say. Last year 100 of the 800 arrests were railroad tramps who were arrested for trespassing on the Central's cars. This year there have been few of these and that is due in a great measure to the war, which has made places for many of these tramps, and thus taken them off the road. Many of the unruly characters of this city have also enlisted and that has taken a few more away, so taking it all together the Plainfield officers have a pretty easy time just now.

NEWS OF THE SUBURBS.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Dunellen, Oct. 2.—There was a chance for the boys to have fun Monday night and they took it. The way the borough rang with shouts and yells and discordant music reminded them of old times. There was no malicious mischief reported, but plenty of gates were missed yesterday morning, when the householders awoke and many a wife hurried to the front door at the ringing of the bell expecting a caller, only to find that some mischievous urchin had pulled the bell and run away. Among the more serious pranks was one played on the New Market people. A number of boys drew C. H. Adams' big stone wagon from his yard to New Market, loaded it with gates, and took it back placing it again in Mr. Adams' yard. On the way over a crowd stopped at R. J. Fisher's house and had a load of his settees piled up all ready for transportation when Mr. Fisher heard them At his appearance all fled. A big heavy farm wagon was found blocking the entrance to the post office this morning when Postmaster Coriell arrived, and Walter G. Runyon discovered a window glass broken.

The fuse in one of the trolley cars which run between here and Bound Brook burned out Monday night just as the car was starting for Bound Brook on its last trip. There was no way of repairing the damage, so the passengers had to take a train for home or walk. The car was towed home in the morning.

The Scotch Plains foot ball team will play the Dunellen eleven Saturday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock on the Lincoln grounds. The Plains team are well trained and a good game is expected, The second team is not yet in shape to play, but may be so by Saturday.

Twenty-six members of the Methodist Episcopal church went to Plainfield Monday night and attended the supper given in the Monroe Avenue church. This was done as a compliment to those who partook of the supper given in the Methodist church here two weeks ago.

Miss Julia Dodwell gave a Hallow'een party Monday night. There were a number present and the evening was spent in playing Hallow'een games, dancing, etc.

There were only a few names to be added to the registry lists yesterday, and so much interest is being shown in the election that it is expected a full vote will be polled.

William H. Terry and family were in Brooklyn last night attending the funeral of Mrs. Terry's mother who died Sunday in Metuchen.

A Hallow'een party was given Monday night to Miss Mabel Jamison, where she was a guest, at 52 Tracy avenue, Newark.

Isaac P. Stites, the blacksmith, who hurt his foot a few days ago, is able to work again.

The household goods of the late Mrs. Lydia Johnson will be sold at auction Friday.

Miss Maud and Miss Lizzie Rand, of Somerville, spent yesterday in town.

Miss Mabel Jamison has returned from a visit with Newark friends.

Miss Josie Dealaman has entered the Plainfield Business College.

Mrs. Mary C. Laing, of Salem, is a visitor in the borough.

The depot hedge is being trimmed and the park raked up.

NEW MARKET.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

New Market, Nov. 2—The Daughters of Liberty gave a Hallowe'en sociable Monday night at the home of Dr. Nelson. A dime was charged for admission and any were invited who chose to come. The proceeds went for the good of the order.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, Nov. 2—Some of the boys of the village are likely to get into serious trouble as the result of carrying their Hallow'een pranks too far. A number of them broke the staple fastening the lock on the cellar door of the public school and after gaining an entrance they began upsetting things right and left. Not satisfied with what damage they could do in the basement, they concluded to have some fun in the classrooms upstairs Here they scattered papers papers around, and broke one of the clocks. When they finally concluded to leave, they left the cellar door and a window open. One of the boys confessed this morning and the names of all were taken.

All was as merry as a marriage feast at the reception tendered by the Christian Endeavor society of the Baptist church last evening to Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Hoppell, who have just returned from their honeymoon, spent in the west. Rev. J. S. Braker opened the reception with a few appropriate remarks, after which the bride and groom were presented with a dozen silver tea spoons, the gift of the society. Mr. Hoppell responded with a short address thanking the society for their pleasant reception to himself and bride and for the handsome present and that the little affair would always remain a pleasant memory to both in their journey through life together.

The Ladies' Circle of the Baptist church will meet in the "Manse" this afternoon. Mrs. Miller, of Roselle, who is interested in the Baptist Training School, of Philadelphia, will address the meeting.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Westfield, N. J., Nov.—Mrs. W. H. Trenchard and her daughter, Miss Maud Trenchard, are both confined to their home on Broad street by scarletina. The house has been quarinteened.

A young couple called at the parsonage of the Methodist church Sunday afternoon, saying that they were from New York, asked the Rev. O. M. Anderson to marry them, but as they could not produce a license he would not do it. It is supposed that the couple were from nearer home but wished to keep their marriage a secret and for that reason gave their address as from New York.

Rev. W. W. Moffett, brother of James Moffett, has been spending a few days in town and Sunday preached in the Methodist church.

—At White's they are doing some great dress goods selling, they have too many of certain lots and have cut prices way below their real value.

—The new Miller oil heater sold by Gavett cannot smoke and has a patent extinguisher that prevents odor when put out. If you want a good heater you should see the Miller.

HOMESICKNESS IN THE ARMY.

The Cause of a Number of Deaths In the Civil War.

One man from the colored troops on the fighting line who came with the first detachment was not wounded, but only stunned by the explosion of a shell which had fallen near him. There was nothing the matter with him but the shock to his nerves and homesickness. He spoke to no one. He would take no food, and he sat huddled together on his cot, looking out from the open flies of the hospital tent with a face full of unspeakable loneliness. Every morning when she came to the hospital Mrs. Marsh would bring him some little thing which she had prepared for him at home; little by little she wakened his interest and finally he was dismissed from the hospital happy and well. One of the doctors and the writer were speaking of this case—Ward his name was—when a physician offered an illustration of homesickness.

"When I was assistant surgeon in the army during the last war," he said, with an amused nod to the young assistant listening, "I had an idea that I knew more than the surgeon major. I suppose all assistants think so at one time or another, but I believe that in this case it was true. Our major was a hard man and there was one case in camp that he had no patience with. It was a poor chap who was simply dying of homesickness. I stopped by him one day where he was sitting with his face in his hands, and I put my hand on his shoulder and spoke a word or two, and he looked up, and I shall never forget his look as he said: 'You're the first one that has spoken a kind word to me since I came.' I told the surgeon about it afterwards and he said it was all nonsense, and that the man was simply too lazy to work. I said, 'He's not lazy; he's sick.' But the major had his mind made up, and he hunted the poor chap out and set him to loading stuff in the commissary department. That afternoon I came across him sitting on a sack of grain with his head down, and I noticed the way he'd slumped forward. I laid hold of him and found that he was dead. Plenty of them died that way—of homesickness."

There was an odd look on the faces of some of the men on the cots when the doctor had told his story, as if the brief service in Santiago had already taught them what that sickness meant. —Frank Leslie's Weekly.

Apropos of the death of Winnie Davis, there is a story told of her by a resident of Philadelphia, which shows why she was held so dear by the veterans of the Confederate army. The man who tells it was a colonel under the stars and bars, and is now a rich man. "But five years ago I wasn't," he says. "I'd lost every penny I had before the war and I had not made many since. A big slump in the West had done for me, and I put up at a New York hotel with just enough to pay my bill and no more. My nerves gave way and I was taken ill. The doctor said I must have a long rest and a complete change of scene. I said I might rest in the grave and change this scene for that of the next world, but that I had no money or friends and would never leave the city any way but feet first. Well, Miss Davis was stopping at that hotel. She knew I wouldn't accept money from her, so she got the doctor to pretend he was lending me his own. I went abroad and came home cured and already on the way to health. It was only then that I found out whom I owed my life to. You know her book, 'The Veiled Doctor?' Well, for me there is an equivocal significance in that name."—Philadelphia Press.

Some Watch Hints.

"It is a bad practice to be continually setting a watch by the stem setter," observed a watch repairer, "for it has a tendency to wear out the band that attaches the hands to the pinion. The hands are tightened to the pinion as firmly as they can be, and every setting loosens them somewhat. There is a class of persons who set their watches every day rather than give a little attention to the matter of regulating them. They find that the watch gains or loses a minute or a few minutes in each twenty-four hours, and instead of curing this by the regulator, which is put in the watch for that express purpose, and no other, they force back or forward the hands by the stem setter or by a key.

"If the hand pinion wears out, which it frequently does, it is considerable of a job to put in a new one or place new hands on it, and the work necessarily costs something, for watch repairers have to charge for their work. If a person knows that a watch gains or loses a certain amount in each day, it is better to calculate back or forward than to be continually setting it. A little study of the regulator will do the work much better, without the rask of wearing out anything." —Washington Star.

Deserved a Credit.

"Tommy," said the teacher to a pupil in the juvenile class, "what is syntax?"

"I guess it must be a tax on whiskey," replied Tommy. And the teacher thought he was entitled to a credit of 100 per cent.—Utica Press.

It has been calculated that ordinary gunpowder, on exploding, expands about nine thousand times, or fills a space this much larger as a gas than when in solid form.

Would Not Marry the Family.

They were in all the blissful transports of a couple who had been engaged three hours and a half. It was verging on to midnight, but he manifested no sign of going, and she trembled lest he should do so. Suddenly he drew a pencil from his pocket, tore a blank leaf from his note-book, and said:—

"Now, my own little lovey dovey, let's make a diagram of the little home we will have."

"Oh, yes, let's do!" she said ecstatically.

"Our home! Don't it sound lovely? It will be genuine love in a cottage, won't it, sweetheart?"

"Oh, yes, indeed! We can get along with a dear little reception-room, double parlors, a library, dining and music rooms downstairs. Then we'll want a large, sunny, beautiful room upstairs for dear mamma."

"Yes, dearest, when she comes to visit us we'll make it as——"

"Visit us? Why, Albert, mamma intends living with us, of course."

"Oh, ah—I—I——"

"I knew I'd surprise you, darling! Won't it be lovely? Then Auntie Harriet will have a room next to mamma's and——"

"Auntie Harriet?"

"Why, yes, precious. She dotes on you, and I've always told her that if I ever had a home it should be hers, too, and you wouldn't want your little girly-girly to break her word?"

"No—ho—I——"

"And then we must calculate for a large, sunny room for my dear old grandmamma and grandpapa, who made your little wife to be so happy when she was a little girl."

"Yes, dear, but I—I——"

"No buts about it, darling. Then sister Nellie will want a pleasant room, and dear old Uncle Horace, and brother Tom won't want to be separated from dear mamma and me, and I've always said that dear old Auntie Miggs should be with me at least half of the time, and if we could spare a room for——"

Their engagement came to an end there on the spot, and dear Albert has a breach of promise suit on hand now.

Suggestion for an Umbrella Stand.

The accompanying sketch represents a variation of the old-fashioned "drain-pipe umbrella stand." Cover an earthen pipe with a thin equally spread layer of putty. Into this stick dried peas, pressing them until they project only very slightly beyond the putty, being put on close together or in patches. When quite dry paint the whole a dull willow green and the interior of the pipe poppy red.

Now take some thin felt and stick it with some very strong glue upon brown paper, while still wet cutting it out into pieces the shape of a poppy's petals and the long branching leaves. Paint them the natural shades and when dry attach them to the pipe first sewing them in the shape of a plant, the centers of the flowers being formed of large black, fancy braid buttons.

About the Foot.

Women are more often too short than too tall, and consequently try to gain height by putting on high-heeled shoes. These will give dignity as long as the wearer stands still, but in motion they are graceless and deform the feet. The better shape a foot is the smaller it will look, but in the disproportionately small foot there is always involved an awkward gait. The foot of a large woman should be larger than the foot of a small woman, or a slenderly-built woman, and to her unnecessary sorrow, it usually is.

The foot should be the same length as that from the elbow to the bone which projects from the outer portion of the wrist. Most people are surprised that the foot should be as long as the forearm, and are inclined to dispute the fact unless proven by experience.

Large women will pinch their feet in tight shoes because they are ashamed to have them in proportion to their bodies, and in time the feet become deformed. The public eye, not being critical of proportion, without their going to the pain of pinching their feet, consider them small, therefore there is no excuse for exchanging this kind of torture and the dignified carriage, two essentials to the greatest beauty. In fact, anything else could be better sacrificed than ease of motion.

A French batter for frying vegetables, eggplant, cold boiled sweet potatoes, etc., is made by moistening a little flour with water, adding a good pinch of salt, two teaspoonfuls of olive oil, and the same of French brandy. When ready to use, beat in the stiffly beaten white of an egg. To fry bananas, apples, and similar fruits, sugar should be used instead of salt.

PORTO RICANS LIKE SAGASTA.

He is a Faithful Friend to the Queen and Boy King.

Porto Ricans have a liking for Sagasta, though they detest the government of which he is the head. All things considered they have got along better under him than under any other Spanish premier. He granted them a large measure of the reforms they asked for and they are grateful, though they admit the granting was by no means voluntary, but was done reluctantly and under protest. Still the aged statesman has met many of the islanders, and all of them agree that personally he is charming. He is jolly and interesting and speaks frankly.

In this he differs from all other Spaniards in Madrid. There is nothing of the rhetorician about him; no flourishes of speech; no elaborate and ornate periods about the honor and dignity of the nation. He knows all about these two Spanish attributes; and he would rejoice to find they existed elsewhere than in the imaginations of the orators in the Cortes. As he does not find anything tangible about this honor and dignity, he accepts the condition and does the best he can. He worships the god of things as they are, and does not attempt to instil practical, hopeful common sense into minds unfitted to receive it. He does not urge the rhetoricians to move forward toward high ideals, but he lets them talk and manage them. That is the Porto Rican view.

Sagasta has done well for himself, but he has done more for Spain than any other minister of recent times. He has lived among pilferers and possibly is a pilferer himself, but his simple life and the commonplace lodgings he occupies on the first floor of an ordinary apartment house on the Plaza Celenque do not indicate that he has amassed great wealth.

He is almost the only Spaniard in official life that uses the word "steal." The others say "interfiltration," or "percolation." He will have none of the elaborate euphonistic vocabulary of the official class. He is as frank as Dean Swift and as keen in wit, but he has a suavity the Dean sorely lacked. He believes in himself and is sure he can do as well by Spain as any other man, consequently, as he loves power, he accepts office. When he is out he does not worry. Indeed, he has stepped out voluntarily several times. He used to see-saw gracefully with Canovas, and apparently was on the best understanding with his political opponent. The "up and down" scheme was carried on with courteous consideration.

Although Sagasta is a Grand Master of the order of Masons, he is the intimate friend of the high functionaries of the Roman Catholic church in Spain. This speaks volumes for his urbanity and tact. He has been a sort of grandpa to the boy king, and has won the confidence of the queen regent so that she trusts him implicitly. He was minister of state under Alfonso XII, under Marshal Serrano during his regency (1868-'70), under Amadeus of Aosta, the second son of Victor Emanuel, who resigned in 1873, and under General Prim, who, in 1868, was president of the council, minister of war and commander-in-chief of the army, with the rank of marshal. Something in this reminds one of Talleyrand, who took care to stand well with whoever was in power, saying, in explanation that by so doing he could best serve France.

Best Time for a Bath.

The best time for taking a bath is just before going to bed. There is no practice, more objectionable than to go to bed closely wrapped up in the dust and dirt that accumulate on the surface of the body during the day; nor is there anything I know of so conducive to sound sleep as a tepid douche just before getting into bed. I have many times known bad sleepers become the best of sleepers from the adoption of this simple rule.

Provinz Brandenburg.

Berlin. Es finden Vorbereitungen statt für eine Reichsvorlage zur Beseitigung der Privatposten gegen Ablösung. Die Beamten sollen entweder von der Postverwaltung übernommen oder entschädigt werden.— Dieser Tage verschied hier die Gattin des Gouverneurs von Deutsch-Ostafrika, Generals Liebert, die wegen Krankheit ihren Gemahl nicht nach Afrika hatte begleiten können.— Das Marktstandgeld für diejenigen Waaren, welche auf dem Bürgersteig aufgestellt werden, und welches circa 8000 Mark einbringt, soll vom nächsten Etatsjahr fortfallen. Die Einziehung, welche verpachtet ist, ist mit vielen Umständen und Aergerlichkeiten verbunden. Meist werden kleine Leute durch das Marktstandsgeld betroffen, auch ist es, seitdem die offenen Wochenmärkte beseitigt sind, mindestens fraglich, ob die Erhebung von Standgeld für Waaren auf dem Bürgersteig, ohne daß ein Marktverkehr daselbst stattfindet, noch berechtigt genannt werden kann.

Spandau. Die hiesigen städtischen Behörden hatten beim Kriegsminister ein Gesuch um Aufhebung der Baubeschränkungen in den Festungsrayons eingereicht. Der darauf erfolgte Bescheid läßt erkennen, daß der Minister im Prinzip einer Milderung der jetzigen, die Entwickelung der Stadt hemmenden fortifikatorischen Bestimmungen nicht abgeneigt ist. Er erklärt, er würde in eine Beseitigung der Stadtumwallung willigen, wenn weiter hinaus dafür durch neue Festungsanlagen Ersatz geschaffen würde.

Osnabrück. Dieser Tage wurde einer der gefährlichsten Schmuggler, der Landwirth Johann Lampen von Neuheede, Kreis Aschendorf, wegen Einschwärzens von Rindvieh in das hiesige Landgerichtsgefängniß eingeliefert. Wegen der Billigkeit des Viehes in Holland wird zur Zeit der Schmuggel an der Grenze sehr flott betrieben.

Papenburg. In dem benachbarten Orte Bunde versuchte der ledige Klempner Schröder im Beisein des Kaufmanns Duit eine Radfahrer-Acetylenlaterne anzuzünden. Ob Unvorsichtigkeit oder mangelhafte Konstruktion der Laterne Schuld war— plötzlich explodirte mit großem Knall der für die Aufnahme des Carbids bestimmte Behälter. Durch die mit furchtbarer Wucht auseinander gerissenen Stücke wurde Schröder am Kopfe dermaßen verletzt, daß er alsbald seinen Geist aufgab, auch der Kaufmann Duit erlitt am Kopfe und am Arme erhebliche Verletzungen, die jedoch nicht tödtlich sind.

Provinz Hessen-Nassau.

Kassel. Nach der in einer der letzten Sitzungen der Stadtverordneten zum Vortrag gekommenen Bilanz des hiesigen städtischen Gaswerks pro 1897—98 berechnet sich der Rohgewinn auf 324,247 Mark, wovon 156,271 Mark als fünfprozentige Rente des Anlagekapitals an die Stadtkasse abzuführen sind, während der Rest mit 167,976 Mark als eigentlicher Reingewinn ebenfalls der Stadtkasse zufließt. Das Kapitalkonto der Gasanstalt beziffert sich nunmehr auf 3,099,020 Mark.

Altdamm. Der hiesige Schneider Werschock hatte sich vor dem Schwurgericht wegen schwerer Körperverletzung seines eigenen Söhnchens zu verantworten. Der Rabenvater hatte das drei Monate alte Kind fortgesetzt derart mißhandelt, daß der Tod erfolgte. Es war fortgesetzt die Ursache von Streitigkeiten zwischen den Eltern, weil, wie Werschock bei seiner Vernehmung erklärte, mit der Aufwartung für dasselbe „zu viel Zeit vertrödelt" wurde. Der Angeklagte wurde zu zwei Jahren Gefängniß verurtheilt, da ihm mit Rücksicht auf seine Jugend (23 Jahre) und bisherige Unbescholtenheit mildernde Umstände bewilligt wurden.

TO ABOLISH ANARCHY

GOVERNMENTS UNITE TO PUT AN END TO THE EVIL.

An International Police System To Be Perfected In the Near Future. The Anarchist Movement Has Assumed Alarming Proportions.

Luccheni, though an Italian, owes his Anarchistic education to the German press and the Paris commune, which, though often suppressed, still breeds its vipers for all of the European capitals. The German anarchist is above all things a thinker. He it is who writes the burning literature which incites the hotheaded Italian and Frenchman to action. There are exceptions, of course, for it is currently understood that it was a German, Schnaubelt, who threw the Haymarket bomb, and for this crime Parsons, Fisher, Engle, Spies, Fielden, Lingg, Neebe and Schwab, all but two of them Germans, suffered death or imprisonment.

True it is that the anarchist prates of Proudhon as the father of the cause, yet in an argument they cast aside the milder logic of the Frenchman and gorge themselves on the economic theories of Carl Marx, who put the problem tersely for these anarchists when he defined the communists of his time, and they have developed into the anarchists of to-day, as "on the one hand, practically, the most advanced and resolute section of the working class parties of every country, that section which pushes forward all others; on the other hand, theoretically, they have over the great mass of the proletariat the advantage of clearly understanding the line of march, the conditions, and the ultimate general results of the proletarian movement. The immediate aim of the Communists is the same as that of all the other proletarian parties; formation of the proletariat into a class, overthrow of the bourgeois supremacy, conquest of political power by the proletariat."

And here again is a typical Marx sentiment: "The Communists disdain to conceal their views and aims. They openly declare that their ends can be attained only by the forcible overthrow of all existing social conditions. Let the ruling classes tremble at a Communistic revolution. The proletarians have nothing to lose but their chains. They have a world to win."

It was Orsini, in 1858, who began the war which militant anarchy has since waged on society. He it was who threw the bomb at Napoleon III, and, with his companion, Fieri, was guillotined. There was a queer blending of the anarchist and the liberator in Orsini, and he has been to thousands a martyr of a still bleeding cause.

Since the night of November 7, 1893, when bombs were thrown into the Liceo theatre at Barcelona, where hundreds were killed, European society, royal and bourgeois, has been in constant dread of attack, although the work of Ravachol in 1892 caused no little consternation in France. With six bombs he on different occasions blew up the house of the Princess de Sagan; the residence of Judge Benoit, who was unusually severe on anarchists; a store at the corner of Rue de Clichy and Rue de Berlin, wherein twenty persons were killed or wounded; the Cafe Very, where two young people dining were hurled to eternity, and finally a portion of the Palais de Justice.

All these exploits were performed in the first months of 1892. Two juries brought Ravachol in "not guilty," frankly admitting that they were afraid of their lives to condemn him, although they clearly recognized he had committed the crimes attributed to him. Mothers in France at this day frighten their restive or unruly children by threatening to hand them over to Ravachol.

The murderous act of the Parisian anarchist Vaillant, who threw a bomb among the French deputies, aroused the whole civilized world to the necessity of concerted measures to check the mad violence of such social outlawry. Vaillant's cowardly attempt to assassinate the legislative representatives of the French people probably marked the turning point in the history of anarchy. Hitherto the war on society had engaged only one army—the army of the aggressors. Now the army of the defence took a hand in the active hostilities.

Within forty-eight hours after the Vaillant incident the governments of the different states of Europe were conferring with one another, either by telegraph or through their accredited representatives, regarding the measures to be taken for their mutual protection against anarchistic foes.

It was settled in short order that no more toleration should be extended to the publication of incitements to the wholesale destruction of life and liberty. Entirely too much consideration had hitherto been shown to what seemed mere noise and bluster. The time had come when society must resist even an academical propagation of the tenets of Anarchy.

But the work of the stiletto went on. Still the deed of Vaillant differed much from that of Santo or of Luccheni.

The chief fact to be borne in mind in the consideration of the Vaillant incident is that the outlaw's murderous design was directed not against a monarch or anyone presuming to enjoy hereditary rights over the people, but rather against the people themselves as represented by their elected officials. The civilized world can readily understand an attack like Vaillant's when directed against a tyrant. When, however, anarchy presumes to attack a republic—the most perfect and equitable form of government as yet devised by the human mind—it is plain that the general system of anarchy means simply indiscriminate warfare on all law and order.

These men are pretty nearly all alike. Of Luccheni little is known beyond his more recent life, but like Vaillant, he was notorious for rank physical cowardice, and nothing could have evidenced this better than his selection of a woman as his victim.

It is pointed out that no anarchist has yet had the courage to attack even one man where the individual had an opportunity to defend himself. To say that popular feeling against the anarchists is extremely bitter is to put it very mildly, and the popular demand for suppressive measures is certain to force the governments to adopt far more stringent precautions than any that have yet marked the counter revolution against lawlessness.

For a long time the individual cowardice of anarchists had one marked and peculiar effect; it led society into the great blunder of vastly underestimating the danger of their presence in the community. A foreign commentator on the subject remarks that it had become the fashion in government regions to think that the danger from anarchists was a mere dream of the police authorities. A French minister of state is quoted as saying: "Of every ten anarchists, there are seven who are in the employ of the police, and three who are arrant cowards." It was this sentiment, however, that has prevented hitherto the adoption of well considered and effective measures of repression of anarchists. It is pointed out that even on the perpetration of the outrages by Ravachol, the people and government of France insisted that the episode really meant nothing; that it was the act of a mad man who had no accomplice, while about all the precaution that the prefecture of police took was to request the Scotland Yard officials to keep them posted as to the comings and goings of certain inhabitants of the French quarter of London.

Santo Caserio, in open day, on June 24, 1894, had no trouble in plunging his stiletto into the heart of President Carnot, although the latter was being feted by the whole city of Lyons, and his carriage was surrounded by officers of the Republican Guard.

It was by the veriest accident that King Humbert of Italy's life was not cut off by an anarchist in April of last year, as he drove to the Cappannelle races. Giovanni Acciarito's foot slipped as he stepped on the king's carriage, and all nerve was thus taken from the blow which he aimed at the monarch's heart.

Angiolillo, another Italian anarchist, was more successful in the attempt which he made on the virtual ruler of another nation. The steel which he held in readiness escaped the eyes of the police and of the special detectives, and on a quiet Sunday afternoon, some thirteen months ago, he let out the life blood of Spain's prime minister, Senor Canovas del Castillo.

The present year has been fertile enough in anarchistical exploits. On the evening of February 26 a murderous attack was made on the life of the King of Greece. Successively attempts were made on Nicholas II of Russia, and on Welhelmina I, the newly crowned queen of Holland. It would seem, however, as if the Luccheni episode had changed all this. The governments of Europe are in negotiation for the adoption of measures for concentrated action and for the unification of their respective laws bearing on the subject of social outlawry. This step is positively necessary in order to meet the anarchists on equal grounds, for it has been proved beyond doubt that there is close and constant connection between the anarchists of different countries. They have a magnificent organization for the prompt and secret interchange of news and for furnishing each other all forms of material assistance. To fight such an elaborately organized system of evil, governments throughout the world must adopt a scheme of mutual aid.

Among the essential details of such a scheme are the establishment of a permanent international police commission against the anarchists, as well as special national commissions. The persons whose names get on the list of suspects will be under police surveillance in all countries.

International legislation will also be adopted in regard to the sale and manufacture of explosives, and an attempt will be made to secure uniform legislation in all countries for the repression of anarchism. It will be difficult to obtain this, but it is hoped that the sense of self-preservation in the presence of the danger which menaces society will prove stronger than all other considerations, and will facilitate the tasks of the governments when they come to propose such legislation to their respective parliaments.

Germany will perhaps begin the great work by the enactment of the Umsturz bill, which caused no little consternation when first proposed several years ago in the ranks of the Socialists.

Husband: "It seems to me that you come to my office a good deal more than there is any necessity for." Wife: "I cannot help it, dear; your manners in the office are so much nicer than they are at home that I like to enjoy the contrast."

"I wish I was a girl," said Bobbie.

"Why do you wish that?" asked his father.

"Oh, then I wouldn't have to bother about thinking what I'll be when I'm a man."

Cora: "Pauline is smarter than you, my dear. She can accompany the new tenor on the piano."

Perdita: "Yes, but I can accompany him on my bicycle."

AT THE ARMY POSTS.

MIMIC WARFARE AT CAMP RILEY IS A GOOD SCHOOL FOR SOLDIERS.

The army posts are filling up again and from one after another come reports that the old routine of soldier life has again begun. But there will be one omission this year which many volunteers will regret, for the manoeuvres at Camp Riley from October to December of each year had become almost an institution, and were annually visited by thousands.

This mimic warfare it was that made possible the brilliant record of the regulars at El Caney and San Juan, for it was real hard fighting and proved the best kind of a school for the soldier.

The surface of the reservation is particularly fitted for the work, having many ravines, timber patches, bluffs and gulches. These make admirable hiding and camping places, while out on the prairies and meadowlands are the hand-to-hand engagements with plenty of room to deploy, march and wheel without conflicting with any natural barriers.

The theory of the school is two-fold, embracing defense and attack. A brigade of troops is designated by the colonel commanding, with cavalry and artillery, known as the "Blues," wearing blue uniforms and forage caps, to remain at the fort and defend it. Another brigade, whose members wear brown canvas, with campaign hats, is known as the "Browns," and, being in camp far down the Kaw valley toward Manhattan, may appear at any time, seeking to reconnoitre the Blues' position and to give them battle.

All troops march fully armed and equipped and carry ten blank carbine cartridges. Topographical and road sketches are made by the engineers with as much care as if entering an enemy's country, and are on a scale of four inches to the mile. A topographical officer is detailed to accompany each command and submit a hasty sketch and report to the commander of the forces to which he is attached.

To guard against accidents all cartridges are inspected before the soldiers go out, and again before actions and by officers. Strict orders are issued that every man must act as much as possible as though actual conditions existed in such shape as it is pretended they do, and umpires, spectators and inspectors see that this rule is carried out. When a part of a force is exposed necessarily, double-quick time is made, and exhaustive reports, criticisms and comments are submitted to the commander of the post after each engagement. It will thus be seen that the work is meant to accomplish something, and it does.

If actual war were in progress more formality could scarcely be observed. Regular orders are issued to the troops with the utmost precision, not exceeded even in the prosecution of a campaign. For instance, here is a typical order issued to the Blues:

"Order No. 121, November 10.—The enemy has appeared in force north of the camp. The brigade will be held in readiness to march to-morrow morning.

"Two troops of the First and two of the Second cavalry, and one battery of artillery, under command of Major W. A. Rafferty, Second cavalry, are hereby detailed as advance guard, and will, at 8.45 a. m. to-morrow, proceed along the Milk Ranch road.

"In case any of the enemy are met, the advance guard will push them back as far as possible. A medical officer and detachments of the hospital and signal corps will accompany the command. By order of Colonel Arnold.

"W. S. SCOTT,
"Acting Adjutant General."

The advance was begun on Fort Riley with due formality. The brigade went into camp as regularly as though a thousand miles away from headquarters. Tents, accouterments, all the paraphernalia of camp life, were used, and videttes, outposts and scouts did their work carefully and well. Then, on November 14, came an order dated "In camp, near Riley Center, November 14," and saying:

"The Blue brigade will, at break of day to-morrow morning, continue the march on Fort Riley. Two troops of cavalry are detailed as rear guards. The rear guards slowly retiring on Fort Riley, will, by stubborn resistance, delay the advance of the enemy as much as possible. Commander of rear guard will, however, take care that troops are withdrawn before they become engaged in any serious conflict. Signal men will be furnished with mounts, and men will be detailed to act as wounded. A medical officer with hospital corps detachment will be detailed to follow the command."

The issuing of such orders means much to the boys on duty. They see in the art of war something more than the mere learning of drills and tactics, and are awakened to a hearty enthusiasm which makes the work a pleasure rather than a duty regretfully performed. Most of the men stationed at the fort as privates are young, and the constant changes to bring in new troops from the surrounding posts all over the West makes the work decidedly interesting, and the rivalry by no means slight. This spirit it was that made the work of the regulars so conspicuous in Cuba, the Philippines and Porto Rico.

The location of umpires on the field to pass upon the accuracy of all movements insures immunity from any horse play, and as the artillery and cavalry alone are engaged, there is a valuable drill in every day's proceedings. Many visitors go out from the surrounding counties of Central Kansas to see the fun, and really they see about as much of warfare as any layman can see, even if a campaign is going on in his own vicinity.

To follow the Blues or Browns for a day is a revelation to anyone. The ground is so rolling that the whole army might well be concealed in a ravine, and it requires shrewd generalship to keep full command of the brigade. As the enemy steadily advances on the fort, throwing out flanking lines and men who represented whole troops in themselves. These are the flag bearers, each flag standing for a troop of men. They are so recognized in the contest, and it is a rule that when two flags flank a single one, the latter is to consider himself captured and retreat or surrender.

The approach of the two lines means a battle, and soon the cavalry is seen coming out from behind a hill on the Milk Ranch road, ready to charge a battery of light artillery on the plain. Cantering forward, they are met by a destructive fire that threatens to wipe them from the earth. One after another of the invaders drops from his horse in mock injury.

Then the batteries rally and make a charge themselves. Up the hill they go, and hurry pell mell to the crest, where, in an instant, they whirl into place and the guns belch forth a warning and a menace. The invading Browns are, however, too numerous, and have other parties of cavalry and flagmen on the flanks, and the umpires declare that the Blues are whipped in the battle.

Sometimes the campaign lasts several days, and anxious councils of war are held by the young lieutenants to make the best possible showing for their sides. They know that it will all be reviewed afterward, and they do not want to be found wanting. The conduct of the campaigns, sham though they be, is a good index of the actual stuff that is in an officer, young or old.

The commanding officer, when a campaign is over, issues an exhaustive comment on the merits of the various troops' work, thus pointing out the strong and weak points in exercise. His criticism covers the entire progress of the troops and outlines the work at each successive step in the battles.

Sometimes there is a different enemy to fight than a human one. A year or two ago when the rare Blues and Browns got nicely ready to begin a lively battle on a pretty piece of prairie, they were attacked by a prairie fire, which came dancing through the long blue steen

A flag of truce was displayed and in a moment both the late combatants were fighting the fire, beating and stamping out the oncoming blaze. When it was all extinguished the warfare was resumed.

Then, again, there was a campaign against the town cow herd of Junction City, four miles away. The herd of town cows was becoming altogether too familiar for Uncle Sam's dignity, and it was ordered by the colonel commanding that they remain off the reservation. But the cows did not understand the order, and made their appearance, as usual, feeding in happiness on the rich grasses.

"The cows are in sight," reported an orderly.

"Clear off the reservation!" ordered the commander, and an officer, with a number of troopers, went forth to wage a new kind of carnage.

But the cows did not like this, and, frightened at the strangely appareled herders, went bellowing in every direction. It was a long chase, but they were finally driven back to town. Then the townspeople took a hand, and a dozen columns of newspaper letters and as many messages to and from the war department were necessary to restore quiet. The cows, however, did not come back.

About the only real amusement the soldiers get is when some guileless spectator forgets his relative position and stands in the line of advance. Then the cavalry or artillery come charging on, as if to crush him, and somebody thunders at the stranger:

"Git!"

With little ado and without stopping for greetings, he "gits."

Anecdote of Frederick VI.

Whoever reads the following must own to a feeling of respect for the honest King. King Frederick VI. of Denmark, while travelling through Jutland, one day entered a village school, and found the children lively and intelligent, and quite ready to answer his questions.

"Well, younsters," he said, "what are the names of the greatest Kings of Denmark?"

Just then a little girl, to whom the schoolmaster had whispered something, stood up and raised her hand. "Do you know another?" asked the King.

"Yes, Frederick VI."

"What great act did he perform?"

"Be comforted, my child," said the King; "I don't know either."

"So you overcame that old antipathy of yours," her husband remarked, "and called on Mrs. Bobbles?"

"Yes."

"Do you think she was glad to see you?"

"I am sure of it."

"Ahem!—you must have some reason for that belief outside her assurances."

"I have. I had on the old dress that was made over twice, and my hat was out of fashion; while she had on her new gown that couldn't have come from anywhere but Paris. Could she help being glad to see me?"

NEW CITY DIRECTORY.

Best Book of the Kind Plainfield Has Ever Had.

The new city directory, issued by the Wand Company, is being delivered to customers. Without doubt it is the most complete and correct city directory that Plainfield has had in many years, and will be appreciated by everyone who has to consult a directory at any time. It is printed in clear, heavy type on good paper and is bound in an excellent manner. It has a red cover, and in several details is a vast improvement over others of former years.

It is filled with advertisements of representative merchants. A special feature, and one very desirable, too, is the New York business address of commuters. The price of the directory is $3, and it is worth every cent of it.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

"A Bachelor's Honeymoon," the latest farce success from Hoyt's Theatre, New York, will be the attraction at the Stillman Music Hall tonight. The play is from the pen of John Stapleton, an experienced author-actor, and is as thoroughly original and clever in theme and construction as its singular title would suggest. It was originally produced last season in New York city and was received with unanimous praise by the critics. This is sufficient endorsement, alone, to warrant a good entertainment, as the New York critics are more prone to condemn than praise. The play hinges on the results of a secret marriage and abounds in laughable complications which commence when the curtain rises and are never unraveled until its final fall. Messrs. Warde and Sackett, the managers, have engaged a cast of more than ordinary merit, headed by the funny comedian, Walter Walker.

"Where is Benson?" a farce comedy by Mr. John Fowler, to be presented at Music Hall Saturday night, is as clever a conception as has ever been seen. A satire on theosophy, it absorbs the attention of the audience from first to last and is one ripple of merriment all through. The company is made up of New York people and every member is an artist of the highest capability. Everybody pronounces the comedy far ahead of "What Happened to Jones" and "My Friend From India," the two popular farces of the day and the organization is highly praised. Look for Benson by all means and don't lose him. Find him, for he is one laughter from start to finish.

One of the few genuine successes of the past two dramatic seasons was Denman Thompson and George W. Ryer's "The Sunshine of Paradise Alley," which first saw the light of day in May, '96, at New York. The new play is not only a treat, but something which produces on the stage scenes and incidents common in every day life of the world. It is excellently staged, its scenery realistic to a great degree, and the vivid portrayals of character and effecting scenes blending together make the play one that every one will want to see. It will be given here during the current season.

Miss Viola Allen as Glory Quayle in Hall Caine's great play "The Christian" continues to pack the Knickerbocker Theatre in New York at every performance. Thus far the new star and her play have broken all records at regular prices at this theatre, which has the best records of any play house in New York. Miss Allen's receipts last week were $12,580, making her gross receipts for the two weeks at the Knickerbocker $35,630. She opened in Albany September 23 for three performances, the receipts being $2,542.75. At Washington she played to $10,521, and in Providence to $7,873. The sums with what she played to in New York make her gross receipts up to last Saturday evening, $46,766.75. This is the strongest endorsement that this attraction could possible receive.

SINGULAR NAVAL ACCIDENTS.

Curious accidents to our warships characterized the early history of our navy. When the government built ten new gunboats to prosecute the war against Tripoli, in 1805, they were sent out as soon as they were finished and before they were named. Each one was given a number and dispatched to the scene of the war. No. 7 sailed from New York June 20, 1805, under command of Lieutenant Ogelvie, and after she cleared Sandy Hook light she was never heard from again. She went down with all on board before she had ever been named.

A most extraordinary accident happened to the corvette Monongahela at Santa Cruz in 1867. While at anchor in the harbor a tremendous tidal wave lifted her upon its crest and carried her clean over the town of Frederichstadt and back again without injuring the town or the boat to any great extent. The receding wave landed her on the beach instead of in the deep waters of the harbor, and it cost our government $100,000 to float her again.

Fully as strange was the fate of the sloop of war Wateree. She was anchored in the harbor of Arica, Peru, in 1868, when a huge tidal wave swept inland and flooded the whole city. The wave carried the sloop several miles inland, and finally landed her in the midst of a tropical forest. It was impossible to release her from such a peculiar position, and the government sold her for a nominal sum. The purchasers turned the vessel into a hotel, and the remains of the once formidable war vessel loom up in the tropical forest to-day as a monument to the power of tidal waves.—Leslie's Weekly.

AT THE ELYSEE.

Its Tragedies and Its Romances of the Past Recalled.

During the last twenty-five years six presidents of the French republic have made the Elysee Palace their temporary home, and of these M. Felix Faure, the son of humble working upholsterers, and in every sense of the word a self-made man, has proved himself to be not only the most suitable for the post, but also the most popular personality of them all.

In theory, if not in fact, M. and Madame Faure are entirely "kept" by the state—that is to say, they are lodged rent free and may consider as their own the produce of the splendid kitchen gardens and conservatories kept up at Versailles and Fontainebleau. The president has the right of shooting and hunting in the state forests and woods, and from them the Elysee is also supplied with wood and charcoal. The lighting of the palace, whether by oil, gas, or electricity, is also provided, and a laundry is kept up and managed quite independently of the president's official income for the use of the Elysee.

But the kitchens, which are in some ways the most important department of the palace, are entirely maintained by Monsieur or rather Madame Faure. There is a chef and under him four head cooks, and when a ball or banquet is about to be given from thirty to forty extra scullions make their appearance. Madame Faure only patronizes the best Paris or rather French firms. Fortunately for the president, however, the Paris season for receptions and general entertaining only lasts some five or six months of each year.

The president finds it impossible to restrict himself to fewer than twelve horses, although the keep of only three is allowed by the state. The Parisian public are very good judges of outward show and state, and on certain occasions, notably the day of the Grand Prix, M. Faure's equipage and horses have to run the gauntlet of thousands of critical sightseers.

There is room and to spare at the Elysee, and each president has, to a certain extent, altered the arrangements made by his predecessor. M. Faure, being a practical man of business, has made his study on the ground floor, close to the splendid reception rooms where Madame la Presidente receives on official occasions. The president's study is a large, pleasant room, furnished with a view to work rather than play, but it has the beautiful ceiling and stately furniture to be found in most old French chateaux. When conferring with his ministers, and those other persons whose business procures them an audience with the president in his study, M. Faure sits at the big writing table at which he does all his official writing.

The official residence of the French president is situated in one of the pleasantest quarters of Paris, and the beautiful old house, for it can only be called a palace by courtesy, fills up a considerable space between the Faubourg St. Honore and the Champs Elysees. History has been made and unmade in the Elysee. It was there that Napoleon I signed his abdication in favor of the King of Rome after Waterloo, and a few weeks later the emperor's study became the business room of the Duke of Wellington.

When the allies left Paris the Elysee Bourbon, as it was then called, was restored to the crown and was occupied by the heir of Louis XVIII. It was occupied first by one and then by another royal personage till the year 1848, when the new government assigned it as the official residence of the then president of the French republic, General Cavaignac, and by a strange irony of fate, in the very room where Napoleon I signed his abdication, Louis Napoleon, then prince president, waited with his feet on the fender to hear the result of the coup d'etat which made him emperor.

During the third empire, the Elysee Napoleon, as it had then become, was lent to the many sovereigns who visited Napoleon III, and the Empress Eugenie. Although filled with works of art and furnished with some of the finest eighteenth century furniture in existence, the Elysee happily escaped the notice of the Communards, and so was neither sacked nor burnt.

When there was a question as to where M. and Madame Thiers should take up their official residence, the Elysee was found to be the only habitable state property in Paris.

GREAT HABIT, THIS!

"Hulloa, old man. Been shrimping?"

"No—no! Been for my ma-ma-tutinal dip. Wouldn't be dip-pip-prived of it for worlds. It's awfully invig-gig-orating. Gi-gives one the con-oush-tit-tution of a li-lion. It would imp-pip-prove you won-on-derfully."

EXPLOITS OF CAMERA FIENDS.

Even weddings and funerals are not safe from the kodak fiend. A wedding which made a stir in Boston took place at the bride's summer home on the coast. It was a charming affair, picturesque in the highest degree, and delightfully informal. The informality had disastrous results, for each of the guests, knowing that the wedding was to be an out-of-door affair, was inspired with the idea of smuggling in his camera and getting some snapshots of the happy couple and the bridesmaids.

When the bride and bridegroom, already in the last stage of nervous embarrassment, received the rector's benediction and turned to face their friends, there was a unanimous and sudden movement in the crowd, and the unfortunate couple were confronted by rows upon rows of cameras, of all shapes and sizes. Each aggressor having flattered himself that his idea was unique, was surprised at the unanimity of intent; but no one relented. The crowd closed in upon the victims. The bride looked hysterical and the bridegroom looked savage. They had thought that the worst was over, but this was adding insult to injury. All avenues of escape were closed to them. They must grin and bear it—and they did.

One of the wedding guests, who was in the front ranks during the onslaught, has a wide reputation along the south shore, and, though he is mild-faced and elderly, his advent will scatter a crowd more effectually than a small pox flag. Every one knows him and realizes that the only safety from being photographed when he appears lies in instant and hasty flight. He can't help taking pictures. He has a most virulent and long standing case of the mania.

Not long ago his wife's mother died and the old gentleman was summoned to the funeral. He was sincerely grieved; even for his mother-in-law his kindly soul had felt no dislike. He hurried to the city, where the funeral was to take place, and conducted himself with becoming and sorrowful dignity. But at the close of the services, when the mourners filed out of the house, he was missed. He had disappeared suddenly, completely, and search for him was unavailing; so the carriages were filled without him and the carriages were moving away, when an unseemly grin irradiated the minister's face, but was quickly suppressed. Concealed behind a convenient hedge, with his camera pointed at the imposing procession, was the missing mourner. The temptation had been too strong for him. Processions were his specialty. He was tempted, and he fell; but, as he afterwards explained, he thought it would be a comfort to have the picture in the family. It was a fine funeral.—New York Sun.

A BURMESE DIVORCE.

People of Civilized Countries Might Learn a Lesson from the Heathen.

It is worth a moment's notice that, while we, of this highly civilized land, are perplexing ourselves in our efforts to find a simple method of obtaining divorce, on grounds of "incompatability of temperament," and are wasting much time and large money in litigation and lawyers' fees, the simple people of Burmah manage to settle this question without the least difficulty and without waste of substance. Recognizing the fact that marriage is often a lottery, and that, in cases of suddenly discovered incompatability, it always is, the Burmese man and wife agree that divorce shall be decreed by lottery also. If a Burmese couple find that they cannot live in peace, and decide that they would best separate, the wife goes out and buys two candles of equal length. These candles are made for this especial purpose, and are the only "legal expenses" that need be incurred in obtaining a Burmese divorce. The wife brings them home. She and her husband then sit upon the floor, and, at a signal, each lights a candle. One candle stands for him and the other for her. The one whose candle burns out first rises and goes out of the house forever, taking nothing. The one whose candle burns longest, even by the fraction of a second, remains and takes everything. Thus the divorce is settled without any fuss or scandal, the general public is not annoyed by the contentions of the separating couple, and each is free to remarry. There are, indeed, some lessons in plain common sense that may be learned even from the ways of the heathen who "in his blindness bows down to wood and stone."—Godey's Magazine.

Field Glass That Shows Distances.

The latest improvements in optical instruments is a gauge attached to a field glass and a prismatic lens in one of the barrels to determine the distance of an object. This is accomplished by producing two images of the object seen, one superimposed upon the other. The prism creates the angle which forms the basis for the mathematical calculation of the distance, and the scale contains the solution in advance of the geometrical problem. On the barrels of the glass are human figures—one of an infantryman and the other of a cavalryman—with a graduated scale. By observing the portion of the body against which the top of the second image is projected and consulting the scale the distance of the object is easily ascertained. Of course the accuracy of the test depends upon accurate focusing of the glasses and careful observation.—Jeweler's Weekly.

TENDER THOUGHTS FOR ONES WHO ARE BEREFT

Impressive Funeral Services Over Remains of Mrs. Hegeman.

TRIBUTE OF FINAL WORDS.

REVS. RICHARDS AND SCHENCK OFFICIATED AT OBSEQUIES.

Services Held at Her Late Home on Sycamore Avenue Yesterday Afternoon—Strong and Beautiful Testimony to the High Worth and Esteem in Which the Departed Was Held—The Interment.

The funeral services of the late Mrs. Catherine E. Hegeman, wife of Benjamin Arrowsmith Hegeman, Sr., were held yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock from the home 37 Sycamore avenue, Washington Park. The large attendance of friends and neighbors, and many people who were personally acquainted with the deceased, gave strong and beautiful testimony to the high worth and esteem in which the departed is held. The services were very simple and impressive, and in complete harmony with the quiet and unostentatious life lived by Mrs. Hegeman. Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, of which she was a member, and Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D., pastor of Trinity Reformed church, at which church the departed was a faithful and regular attendant, had charge of the services, and both divines paid tributes of love and admiration to the life of Mrs. Hegeman, and spoke words of comfort to the bereaved ones.

Dr. Richards was the first speaker, and after he read the Scripture lesson containing comforting words that point the sorrowful to the Heavenly Master, he made a few remarks, which, in part, are as follows, basing his words partially on the text "In My Father's House are Many Mansions,"

"I suppose that to this day all are well acquainted with these words of the Gospel contained in our Lord's prayer, but it is still true that the name of our Lord is not spoken truly until the Spirit comes and touches our hearts so that we can cry "Abba Father." As Jesus Christ taught his disciples about God, he also taught them about Heaven. Heaven is home for the Christian; the real home. That word 'home' is a dear word even for what it means on earth. Those ties that bind us together with husband and wife, children and sisters. Life is almost not worth the living without it, and there is scarcely any character without it.

"Today our memories call to remembrance the household which has been, and of which our friend as a member, was so closely united. The Church of Christ is little more than home. We remember the large place that she filled in the company's to which she belonged. We learn true values when we lose them. So it is in the home when separation comes. The less painful separation, when members of a family are absent for a time, cannot be considered with those irrevocable sunderings, when death takes some precious member of a family. After one has learned of Christ how to love one another, I do not see how one can be saved from despair when a precious one is removed.

"Home here is only a preparation for the Father's House. Many are here today who share the grief of those left in this sorrowing circle, but we cannot forget those gone before, who are in that Home permanently established. Sometimes it seems as though the curtains were drawn aside, and that the real treasures can be seen. Our own dear home is not here, but there. I cannot but think of the beautiful words of our dear friend uttered in the morning of her last day among us, when she was feeling so strongly the pains of her illness. She said: 'I must go home today.' She did go home, where she now rests from all pain and illness."

Dr. Schenck spoke next and his words were very impressive, and in harmony with the words of the first speaker. A portion of his remarks follow:

"How true the words of our Lord correspond to the two-fold nature—the Divine and human nature. One is beyond the infinite mind, while the other is in touch with our own feelings. The two-fold nature is expressed in the Gospel of John, fourteenth chapter, 'I will not leave you comfortless, I will come to you again,' and 'Let not your hearts be troubled.' These words were spoken to Christ's disciples, and He did come again and bring comfort to them as He promised. He also brought peace to them. Today He speaks these same words

TRAVELING IN EUROPE.

AARON M. POWELL TALKED TO YOUNG FRIENDS' ASSOCIATION.

The Lecture Illustrated by Stereopticon Views—Mr. and Mrs. Powell Had Tickets for the Ill-Fated Mohegan.

An instructive and interesting illustrated lecture was given last evening by Aaron M. Powell under the auspices of the Young Friends' Association at the meeting house on Watchung avenue. Mr. Powell's subject had to do with his recent travels in Europe during the past summer. All of the views displayed on the canvas were excellent, while the speaker's words were listened to with a great deal of pleasure by the audience. A great many points of interest in London were shown and explained by Mr. Powell, whose descriptive powers are of a superior character. Mr. Powell stated in the beginning that while he and Mrs. Powell were in London they carried with them for several weeks tickets for a return passage on the ill-fated steamship Mohegan, but at the last minute they changed their minds and decided to return on the Servia.

All of the principal buildings in London were exhibited on the canvas, and about each one Mr. Powell had something of interest to tell. He told entertainingly about his visits to the House of Lords and House of Commons, and told how difficult it is to obtain access to the former. The lecture lasted nearly two hours, and the audience did not seem to tire in the least. Charles E. Vail, of Orchard place, manipulated the slides in an efficient manner, thereby increasing the interest in the lecture.

BAZAAR AT MT. OLIVE.

FAIR BEING CONDUCTED UNDER AUSPICES OF THE WOMEN.

Opened Yesterday Afternoon and Will Continue for Three Days—A Mystery Table a Feature—Those in Charge.

A bazaar and fair opened at the Mt. Olive Baptist church yesterday afternoon, and will be continued every afternoon and evening for three days. The fair is being conducted under the auspices of the women of the church and the proceeds will be devoted to the church fund.

The bazaar opened at 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon with a large display of all kinds of fancy goods, vegetables and groceries, fruit and flowers, ice cream, cake, and other good things to eat. The tables and booths were decorated with an eye to the beautiful, and the different articles for sale were displayed in an advantageous way. Money flowed freely last night, and before the fair closed for the night quite a difference was noticeable in the number of things displayed.

One table called the "mystery" table was a great attraction. Purchasers bought strange looking bundles, and when they opened them sometimes found articles inside which they were not expecting. But every one took the joke in good part, and lots of money was made at that table.

The ladies and gentlemen who had charge of the fair, served at the tables, took tickets and had general supervision of the fair formed the following committee: Mrs. Katie Mayhew, chairman, Mrs. Mary Doyle, Mrs. Joanna Fisher, Mrs. Margaret Atkinson, Mrs. Rebecca Wyckoff, Mrs. Lulu Dempsee, Miss Tillie Ivison, Mrs. Amelia Fields, Mrs. Jane Conway, Mrs. Maria Mann, Mrs. Anna Reed, Mrs. Mary Maynard, Mrs. Margaret Webley, Mrs. Lettie Jones, Mrs. Anna White, Mrs. Anna E. Jackson, Mrs. Georgie Wilson, Mrs. Anna Field, Reuben Jones, Smith Wyckoff, W. Mayhew, Mr. Dempsee, Henry Kingslow, Israel Jones, the Misses Doyle, Mrs. R. Kingslow, Mrs. J. Hill, Mrs. H. Murray, Miss Alice Harris, Mrs. R. Venable, Mrs. Anna Binn, Miss Bella Flanagan, Miss Sarah Taylor, Mrs. Green, Mrs. Laura Connett, Miss Nara Walker, Miss Stella Hill, Miss Mary Walley, Mrs. Susan Washington, Miss Mary Miles, Mrs. Martha Yetman, Miss Alice Maynard, Albert Atkins and Edward Maynard.

DEMOCRATS READY FOR ACTIVE WORK.

Permanent Organization Was Effected Last Night.

J. H. HILLMAN PRESIDENT.

REGULATIONS OF OLD DEMOCRATIC ASSOCIATION ADOPTED.

Large Attendance of Representative Democrats From All Over the City—A Temporary Finance Committee Appointed to Solicit Funds—Resolutions Adopted Endorsing the Candidates.

The Democratic Association of Plainfield is now a genuine factor in the political world, the permanent organization having been formed at the meeting held in Councilman Moffett's office on North avenue, last night. The meeting was attended by a large number of representative party men from all sections of the city.

As chairman of the temporary organization effected by the committees at the previous meeting, John M. Hillman, of the Second ward, called the meeting to order. After the minutes of the previous meeting had been read and approved, Mr. Hillman, as one of the committee appointed to draft a suitable constitution and set of by-laws, presented the result of the work. It was the old constitution and by-laws of the Democratic Association of several years ago with a few alterations. The matter of membership fees was stricken out, and instead of three vice-presidents there will be nine—one for each election district. The committees were also enlarged to conform with the present condition of affairs. After the constitution had been read by the secretary, it was adopted by a unanimous vote.

Then came the question of officers. M. R. Flynn moved that the temporary officers as far as they went be made permanent. This motion was adopted. The rest of the officers were elected by acclamation, and the complete list is as follows: President, John H. Hillman; vice-presidents, to be named for the election districts by the committees participating in the informal conference; treasurer, Elmore D. Moffett; financial and corresponding secretary, W. W. St. John; recording secretary, Michael J. DeCourcy.

President Hillman announced that the committees, which include executive, finance, public meetings, printing, canvassing and naturalization, would be announced at the next meeting of the association as it would be necessary to have considerable consultation about such a matter. As the association would require considerable money to start with, W. W. St. John moved that temporary finance committee of one from each election district be appointed to collect whatever funds they could before the next meeting. The motion was adopted and the following were appointed: Joseph Blimm, William Gloak, Leonard Spangenberg, William K. McClure, Frank Bacon, Patrick Trayer, James Davis, V. L. Frazee and Michael Higgins.

The question of securing a complete list of Democrats in the city was then brought up and Councilman Hetfield suggested that the Democratic members of the election boards in the city be appointed the canvassing committee. This was done.

It was decided that when the meeting adjourn it do so to meet November 16th.

After an informal discussion and an impromptu speech by an enthusiastic Democrat about the record of Foster Voorhees, the following resolution was presented by the corresponding secretary:

"Resolved, That the Democratic Association of Plainfield affirms its loyalty and devotion to the principles of the Democratic party at all times, and that we pledge our constant and honest efforts for the election of all regularly nominated candidates of the Democratic party. We especially endorse the candidacy of Elvin W. Crane, the Democratic nominee for Governor, as well as the admirable nominations made by the Democratic Congressional and county conventions. We urge upon all Democrats the necessity of supporting such candidates with their earnest personal efforts as we, the Democrats of Plainfield, will do for the interests of the people and the proper and deserved rebuke of the Republicans who have prostituted for political and personal purposes the National, State, county and city affairs."

The resolution was adopted.

After a large number of those present had signed the enrollment book the meeting adjourned.

The enrollment book will be kept open for charter members till the next meeting of the Association. The book will be open for signatures at the office of Councilman Moffett at any time.

Want to Recover Clothing.

Summons has been issued in Justice Newcorn's court against J. E. Brown, in tort, for the recovery of some clothing which L. Sternberg & Co. claim belong to them. Brown is said to have purchased some clothing from the company which he has not paid for and it is to secure the return of them that the suit is brought.

Executed Mr. Puppy.

Henry Frisbie, the dog catcher, put a canine to death in his usual painless manner yesterday. The dog was sick and couldn't be driven away from in front of the postoffice, so Hank procured some of his "knockout drops" and gave it a dose which soon sent the animal to the land where all good dogs go.

REPUBLICANS TO STIR UP THINGS TONIGHT

Voorhees' Visit Will Cause a Demonstration.

WILL ARRIVE RATHER LATE.

FILLS AN ENGAGEMENT ALSO IN ELIZABETH TONIGHT.

Congressman Fowler and Candidate Cross Will Arrive Here Early This Afternoon—Will Dine With Leaders—They Will Speak Early—Arrangements for the Meeting in Music Hall.

A meeting of the Republican city executive committee was held last night at which final preparations for the reception of the speakers who are to address the Republican mass meeting in Music Hall tonight, were made.

An enthusiastic reception is to be accorded the nominees, nearly all of whom are to be present. Judge Cross and Congressman Charles N. Fowler, the former a nominee for State Senator, will arrive here this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock from Elizabeth. They will be met at the depot by a delegation from the city executive committee, composed of Chairman William R. Codington, J. B. Coward, W. W. Drayton, William T. Kirk and William Newcorn, and driven in carriages to a hotel where they will sit down to a dinner with the escorting committee.

Where the nominees will be entertained is not to be made public for fear the enthusiastic voters will invade the quiet of the place and insist upon greeting Judge Cross and Mr. Fowler. In the evening the two will be escorted to Music Hall, accompanied by a band of music, where both will address the meeting.

As both gentlemen have engagements to speak in Elizabeth tonight, their addresses will naturally be short. After speaking they will be driven to the station in time to catch the 8:45 train for Elizabeth.

Five minutes before Cross and Fowler leave town Foster M. Voorhees and the three candidates for the Assembly, George A. Squires, Robert G. Houston and Roger Murray, and John M. Randolph, nominee for coroner, will leave Elizabeth for Plainfield. Arriving here soon after 9 o'clock they will all attend the mass meeting and make short addresses.

The meeting tonight is not intended for men only. Ladies are welcome and even urged to attend. A committee composed of W. H. Drayton, Harry H. Coward and William T. Kirk will keep the seats reserved for ladies free and clear. During the interval while the audience is awaiting the arrival of the Elizabeth delegation Hon. Frank Scott, of Paterson, will talk. Martin Roll is also expected to be present and say something.

HAD BLOOD ON HIS COLLAR.

Edward Stevenson Couldn't Tell How it Got There.

Edward Stevenson was arraigned before the City Judge this morning on the charge of being drunk and disorderly, preferred by Patrolman Watson who made the arrest on Park avenue last evening. Stephenson had some blood on his collar which he was unable to explain. He said he didn't know how it got there. Hadn't been fighting that he remembered. The Judge decided to remand the prisoner until 5 o'clock this afternoon for sentence. Stephenson was not particularly pleased with his acquaintanceship with the lock-up and said that he was lonely.

The Wargraph a Success.

The wargraph stereopticon and illustrated song entertainment at the First Church of Christ last night was a great success. There was present a large and appreciative audience. A unanimous call was made to repeat the show tonight. It was granted and the entertainment will be given tonight at the First Church of Christ, with this additional feature. Prof. G. S. Dufford will appear as a negro impersonator in comic and plantation melodies, with banjo accompaniment. Prof. Dufford is one of the best artists in his line. The admission tonight will be 10 cents. Tickets on sale at the church, Grove street, near Front street.

THE WINNERS OF PRIZES.

A PLEASANT EVENT AT CATHOLIC CLUBHOUSE LAST NIGHT.

After the Presentation of Prizes Had Been Made, Refreshments Were Served and Then Dancing was Enjoyed by All.

The fair and bazaar held at the Catholic Club three weeks ago is now a thing of the past, but there was one interesting thing remaining to be done, and that was the distribution of the prizes won in the contests. This took place last night at an informal reception held at the clubhouse. After the presentation of the prizes, refreshments were served and a dance enjoyed, music for which was furnished by Prof O'Reilly.

The lucky winners of the prizes were: Miss B. M. Regan who won the first prize, a brooch set with five diamonds, Morris Owens came second and got a gold hunting-case watch; William Townley secured an open-faced gold watch; Miss Gannon, a silver watch inlaid with gold; Miss Minnie Callahan, a silver watch; Miss Mary Doll, a silver watch, and Miss Mary Hammond, a bicycle complete with cyclometer and lantern.

Rev. Father Symth presented the prizes with a few appropriate remarks in each case, which were very much appreciated. Rev. Father Westman thanked those who had assisted so nobly in the work, then all formality was thrown to the wind and a good social time enjoyed. Those who attended the reception were those who were on the committees in charge of the fair, the prize winners and the workers.

VICIOUS DOG'S ATTACKS.

KNOCKED DOWN LITTLE GIRLS AND BIT THEM.

Both of the Victims Taken to Physicians and the Wounds Cauterized—Chief Wilson Will Kill the Animal.

A large dog owned by Mr. Jackson, of Grandview avenue, caused considerable trouble yesterday afternoon by attacking two girls residing in the borough. The first girl attacked was Adele Taylor, colored, aged 10 years, living on Westervelt avenue. The dog knocked her down, tore her clothes quite badly and nipped her with his teeth. The girl was greatly frightened and was taken to Dr. Jenkins, who cauterized the wounds and gave proper treatment.

A half hour later Carrie VanArsdale, aged nine years, living on Summit avenue, passed Mr. Jackson's house and the dog attacked her. The girl received three bites between the thigh and knee, after the animal had knocked her down. She also suffered greatly from fright. She was taken to Dr. Probasco and proper treatment was given her.

Both cases were reported to Chief Wilson, of the borough, and he called on Mr. Jackson and informed him that he would have to shoot his dog, but up to the present time he still lives. So far as can be learned neither of the children were tantalizing the dog, and, aside from the animal's own desire to do mischief, there does not appear to be any reason for the dog's actions.

G. O. P. Will Pay the Freight.

Arrangements are being made by the Republican city executive committee to place the names of voters who failed to register Tuesday upon the registry lists Saturday. They will pay the expenses of Republicans to go to Elizabeth Saturday to see that their names are placed upon the list. A thorough canvass was made of the city, and very few eligible voters' names were left off. It is thought, though, that three or four more votes can be secured in this way.

No Report Likely.

It is not likely that the finance committee of the Borough Council will be to present a report on some important matters at the regular meeting Friday evening, as the committee has been delayed by an unforseen accident in preparing the same.

Mr. Yates' Condition.

The condition of J. W. Yates, of East Seventh street, is today unchanged, and the family are led to feel encouraged that as he is no worse he may retain a sufficient amount of vitality to recover.

—The members of the Loyal Temperance Legion are asked to be present at the fair which opens in W. C. T. U. rooms Monday evening, Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons, of next week, as they will have special entertainment.

William E. Lowe and family, of Park avenue, have gone to New York to spend the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Rowland Cox, of West Seventh street, are registered at the Holland House, New York.

OLD MAN RUN OVER BY A HEAVY STONE WAGON.

Probably Fatal Runaway Accident In The "Notch."

VICTIM IN THE HOSPITAL.

EDWARD MUNDY TRIED TO STOP A FRIGHTENED TEAM.

Trampled Upon by the Horses and Then Run Over by a Wagon Loaded With Stone—Several Ribs Broken and Serious Internal Injuries—Picked Up in Unconscious Condition—Recovery Doubtful.

A very serious and what is likely to prove a fatal accident occurred this forenoon in the "Notch," on Somerset street, when Edward Mundy, aged 67 years, received injuries from which recovery is doubtful. Mundy is a farmer and lives at Metuchen. He was hauling crushed stone and at the time of the accident his horses became frightened in some way. Mundy endeavored to stop the team, but was thrown down and both horses, as well as the heavy wagon, passed over his body.

Several ribs were broken, his body was terribly bruised and he received serious injuries about the head. Mundy was for a time in an almost unconscious condition, and was brought to Plainfield by friends. Dr. D. C. Adams treated him at first, but he decided that it would be better to have the man taken to the hospital, where he could receive constant care and treatment.

Mundy was taken to the hospital about noon, and is now conscious. He is suffering severely from his injuries and also from the shock of the accident. Owing to the advanced age of Mundy and the extent of his injuries those in charge have grave doubts as to his recovery.

The team of runaway horses was caught some distance away from where the accident occurred and taken in charge. Neither the horses or wagon was damaged to any extent.

HIS TERM IN PRISON A SHORT ONE.

James Hopkins Died There This Afternoon at 1:30 o'Clock.

James Hopkins, of New York, who was arrested and brought to this State on requisition papers issued by Gov. Black to answer to a charge of grand larceny, died in State's prison this afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. The circumstances of the case are in many respects sad. Hopkins was indicted by the Union County Grand Jury, and pleaded guilty to the charge preferred.

Lawyer Craig A. Marsh, of this city, was retained to secure a mitigation of the punishment to be imposed. Yesterday, when Hopkins was sentenced, Mr. Marsh appeared before the Court and made a plea for him. He stated that Hopkins was in a dying condition suffering with asthma, dropsy, etc, and had asked that he might be sent to State Prison, where he could receive proper hospital treatment. The sentence of the Court was that he be confined for one year, which was a very light sentence in view of the seriousness of his crime.

To Brunswick by Trolley.

Superintendent Radel, of the Brunswick Traction Company, announced today that the car leaving this city for Bound Brook once an hour on the half hours, connects at Bound Brook, at the hotel with the trolley for Somerset and Raritan, going south, and for Lincoln, Dunellen and Plainfield going north. The fare to Dunellen from this city is 15 cents, and to Plainfield five cents more. As soon as the viaduct at Bound Brook is built, more cars will be put on the Bound Brook line and connections with Plainfield and Somerville will be more frequent. —New Brunswick Home News.

Colored Republicans Alive.

Since the colored Republicans heard that the Democrats have arranged to hold a mass meeting in Reform Hall tomorrow night, they have hurriedly made arrangements to hold a Republican mass meeting Saturday night in Boehm's Hall, on West Front street. Rev. E. E. Jackson will preside, and the speaker of the evening will be J. H. Hilton, of Newark, a colored lawyer of prominence.

THE TROLLEY IN JAPAN

American Syndicate with Capital of $10,000,000 to Operate.

C. T. YERKES AT THE HEAD

Electric Field in the Land of the Mikado is Boundless. A Proposition to an American Firm to Operate All Electric Lighting and Power Plants in the Empire.

New York, Nov. 3.—Charles T. Yerkes of this city is at the head of a Chicago syndicate which is considering a plan to cover Japan with a trolley car system.

The Japanese government has made a proposition to the Siemens & Halske Electric Company of America to take steps to install and operate all electric lines and incandescent lighting, and electric power plants in the Japanese empire.

The plan as it is now being considered is to capitalize the syndicate at about $10,000,000 and although it is probable the Elkins-Widener corporation of Philadelphia, may be interested in the syndicate, when formed, it will be essentially a Chicago organization, and the company will be incorporated under the laws of Illinois.

An agent of the Emperor of Japan who is now in the East, made the offer to W. T. Block, of the Siemens & Halske Company, who says that although he has not yet accepted the offer, he sees the possibility of immensen profits for the syndicate that will take the matter up.

Japan is at present entirely destitute of street railways, and the proposed corporation would therefore have an absolute monopoly.

The first business of the company, it is said, will be the construction of street railways in Tokio, a city of 1,500,000 inhabitants.

In Tokio there is but one street car line, and that is operated by horses. Japanese companies have been organized for the purpose of carrying on the street car business in Tokio, but franchises have been refused because none of them has given the necessary guarantee of capital and enterprise sufficient to carry the work to a successful issue.

The Chicago street magnate and his system have most favorably struck the subjects of the Mikado, and it is not improbable that Mr. Yerkes will be doing business with Tokio in the near future.

Ilo Mishelna, son of a Japanese judge at Tokio, it is said, is the Japanese representative who is in this country arranging the deal for the Japanese officials. It is said he was in Chicago last Saturday, but is now in Philadelphia.

Politics and the Peanuts.

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 3.—The political disturbance in North Carolina is affecting the picking and shipping of peanuts to this market.

At this season the shipments from North Carolina are the heaviest, but the dealers say that the receipts are only nominal now.

It is learned that the negroes who pick the nuts have left the fields, and are engaged in the bitter political fight now being waged between the whites and blacks.

As a result, the country's peanut supply this winter will very likely be short.

The Iron-Mining Industry.

Milwaukee, Nov. 3.—The iron ore shipments from the Gogebic, Vermilion and Mesaba and other northern ranges will practically close by November 15 for the season. The output and shipments for the season just closed will be considerably greater than those of last year.

Prices were not sufficiently advanced, the mining men claim, to correspond with the increased demand for ore, but the indications are good for a still larger demand next year, and with continued good trade improvement in prices is expected.

Big Storm in the Channel.

London, Nov. 3.—A severe southwesterly gale is raging along the coast and trans-channel traffic has been interrupted.

Owing to the violence of the storm the steamship Teutonicv, from New York, October 26, did not touch at Queenstown yesterday, but proceeded to Liverpool.

A severe rain and wind storm has swept over the south of Scotland, causing serious floods.

Sickness at Manila.

San Francisco, Nov. 3.—When the transport Peru, which has just arrived here, left Manila, there were 1,500 sick among the men, and the physicians were dismayed at the progress the smallpox was making.

According to a member of the Tenth Pennsylvania, in one day there were ten deaths from smallpox.

Captain Finn said that he knew of but five deaths from that disease in a single day.

TRANSPORT PANAMA GOES DOW

Wreckage of the Vessel Seen Near Cuban Coast.

Washington, Nov. 3.—Cable advices received last night from a representative of eneral Wood at Santiago announce the probable loss of the Panama, once a United States transport, off Cape Maysi. The Panama sailed from Santiago on Tuesday, having on board some 320 odd passengers, the greater number of whom were soldiers. There were a few civilians aboard, including Congressman Dalzell.

The vessel should have been off Cape Maysi yesterday, and it was expected that she would reach New York city on Saturday.

The news of the probable loss of the vessel, according to the information received here, was brought to Santiago by a fishing schooner. The schooner left Santiago a week ago, and while cruising along the coast early yesterday morning, the captain sighted wreckage. There were chairs and trunks.

At first it was impossible to make out from what craft the debris had come. After a close inspection several pieces of joiner work and some life preservers were seen, each one bearing the name of the transport Panama.

Believing that possibly all those on the vessel might have been lost, the captain put on all sail and headed back to port. The information which he brought caused a great deal of sorrow in the American camp last evening.

One of the passengers on the Panama was Congressman Dalzell of Pennsylvania. He went to Cuba in the interest of the Pennsylvania Railway Company and had completed his labors and was returning home, in company with George M. Huff, former congressman-at-large from Pennsylvania.

Dalzell and Huff expected to return north on a transport sailing a week ago, but they were unavoidably detained and had to take passage on the Panama.

THE BUBONIC PLAGUE.

Precautions to Prevent Its Being Brought Here by Immigrants.

Washington, Nov. 3.—The Marine Hospital service has received through the state department a dispatch from United States Consul General Hurst at Vienna telling of the three deaths that have occurred there from bubonic plague, and that there are now only six cases in the entire city, and these are all hospital attendants.

Mr. Hurst adds that the infection of immigrants is improbable.

Dr. Wyman, surgeon general of the Marine Hospital Service, says that no unusual delays to the landing at New York of immigrants from Austria-Hungary are contemplated.

The consuls at the ports of departure will examine each immigrant before he is allowed to go aboard ship, and if he comes from the infected districts his baggage will be disinfected, and every other precaution taken to prevent the spread of disease.

In no case will an emigrant be allowed to proceed if there is any reason to believe that he has been in contact with the infection.

Dr. Wyman is of the opinion that there is little or no danger of the plague being brought to this country through immigrants or otherwise.

Dead Cashier a Defaulter.

Hanover, Pa., Nov. 3.—A long hidden deficiency, reaching about $57,000, has been discovered in the accounts of the late JohnH. Alleman, cashier of the First National Bank of this place, who died about three weeks ago.

The books have been in the hands of an expert accountant since Alleman's death, and the shortage was thus revealed.

Mr. Alleman had been cashier of the bank for twenty-eight years, and at no time was he ever suspected of wrong doing.

His defalcations were cleverly covered up by means of "kiting," or the use of drafts on different out of town banks and thus deceived even the bank examiners.

Mr. Alleman was under bonds of $30,000, and the bank will therefore suffer little and it still has a surplus of $44,000 over all liabilities.

Will Occupy Crete on Nov. 4.

Canea, Nov. 3.—The foreign admirals have informed the Turkish governor of Crete that they will proceed with the military occupation of the various administrative offices of the island on November 4, and the Turkish authorities will not thereafter be permitted to re-enter them.

The Turkish troops then in the island will cease to be regarded as garrisoning Crete, and the Turkish military posts and the military services will be abolished.

The admirals also ask the governor to embark all the Turkish troops that the transports now in Suda bay will hold and to request his government to send enough transports speedily to embark the rest.

Gen. Lee's Mother Injured.

Fredericksburg, Va., Nov. 3.—Mrs. Anne Maria Lee, widow of the late Captain Sidney Smith Lee, and mother of eneral Fitzhugh Lee, had a severe fall on Monday at the home of her son, Captain Dan M. Lee, in Stafford county, near this city, which resulted in the breaking of her left hip.

Mrs. Lee is nearly ninety years old, totally blind and is in a precarious condition.

A Murderer Sentenced.

Buffalo, Nov. 3.—Antonio Giuseppe Barone, the murderer of Felippe Forestino, whose mutilated and dismembered body was found floating in a trunk in the canal here, has been refused a new trial, and has been sentenced to be killed by electricity at Auburn state prison during the week of December 19.

The Chicago Beached Port.

Queenstown, Nov. 3.—The British steamer Chicago, Captain Marshall, from Newcastle, for New York, previously reported spoken, with machinery broken down, has arrived here unassisted.

ENGLAND'S WAR MOVE

The Whole Fleet at Wei-Hai-Wei Clears for Action.

DOES SHE FEAR RUSSIA?

London Thinks the St. Petersburg Government Plans to Take Advantage of the Anglo-French Strained Relations. England Fears She Means to Seize the Port of New Chwang.

Wei-Hai-Wei, Nov. 3.—All the British warships here, the first class cruiser Narcissus, the second class cruiser Hermione, the torpedo boat destroyer Whiting, the torpedo boat destroyer Fame, the torpedo boat destroyer Handy, and the first class gunboat Peacock, have cleared for action, and are ready for sea at a moment's notice.

The greatest secrecy is maintained as to the meaning of these warlike preparations, but there is no doubt that important instructions are expected at any moment.

Think Russia Plans a Move.

London, Nov. 3.—The dispatch from Wei-Hai-Wei, announcing the war preparations of the British naval authorities there is regarded here as being of grave importance, coupled with the Anglo-French war preparations.

It is surmised that Russia, profiting by the present strained relations between Great Britain and France, has decided to push forward her aims in the far East by forcibly seizing the valuable treaty port of New-Chwang, which Great Britain cannot permit, it is said.

A dispatch from Shanghai, received in this city October 20, said:

"A Russian regiment occupied the town of New-Chwang and the forts at the mouth of the river Liaou on October 5. The native troops fled without making any opposition, under orders from the empress dowager and Li Hung Chang.

"A British gunboat was in the river at the time. Its non-resistance is regarded as the virtual British abandonment of the whole of Manchuria to the Russians, and gives Russia an invaluable strategic position.

"Great Britain is certain to lose the New-Chwang trade, of which she has had eighty per cent."

Excitement at Esquimault.

Vancouver, B. C., Nov. 3.—Admiral Pallison's secretary, who had left here for an up country point, has been urgently telegraphed to return to Esquimault at once.

All is excitement in naval circles. The Scotsmen of Vancouver, recognizing the gravity of the situation, offer to raise a regiment and place the same at the disposal of the government for service either at home or abroad.

Fashoda Not Settled.

London, Nov. 3.—A semi-official note issued last evening, relative to the reports of a settlement of the Fashoda question, says:

"The matter is substantially in the same position as when the Blue Book and Yellow Book were published.

It is not anticipated that France will take further action until Major Marchand's arrival at Cairo on Thursday, when explanations will be forthcoming as to his reason for leaving Fashoda."

Frenchman Arrested at Dover.

London, Nov. 3.—A Frenchman has been arrested at Dover for attempting to enter the big gun turret on the admiralty pier there.

The November Elections.

New York, Nov. 3.—Elections for representatives in congress will be held next Tuesday, November, in all of the states, with the exception of Maine, Oregon and Vermont, in which three states representatives to the Fifty-sixth Congress have already been chosen.

In thirty-two of the states more or less important state officials will be chosen—twenty-one of the thirty-two electing governors, and in thirty-one states legislatures will be elected, twenty-three of the legislatures then chosen to have the choice of United States senators.

Important constitutional amendments will also be voted upon in several of the states.

Big French Prize to America.

Washington, Nov. 3.—Charles A. Schott of the Coast and Geodetic survey, has been awarded by the French Academy the Wilde prize of forty thousand francs.

This is the first time the prize has been awarded and the committee had the entire scientific world to choose from.

The prize was given to Mr. Schott for his work in territorial magnetism and chiefly for the theoretical investigations for determining the variations of magnetic elements.

Bay Train Robbers Sentenced.

St. Joseph, Mo., Nov. 3.—James Hathaway and Alonzo Maybury, both 18 years old, who belonged to a band of messenger boys who held up and attempted to rob a Burlington express train near here, in August, were sentenced to five years in the penitentiary.

The others of the band received ten year sentences several days ago.

The oldest of the convicts is but 22 years of age.

Soldiers' Votes Arrive.

Albany, Nov. 3.—Secretary of State Palmer has received the first ballots from this state's volunteer soldiers in the United States service. They were in an express package from New York, and although there is nothing on the package to indicate from which regiment they came, it is believed they are from the Twenty-second, doing garrison duty at Fort Slocum, and the first regiment to vote.

MILES DEFENDS THE CUBANS.

His Belief that They Have Been Misrepresented by the Newspapers.

Washington, Nov. 3.—"The Cubans, like our own western Indians, will find a defender in General Miles, if he puts the whole story of the Santiago campaign into his official report," remarked an army officer of high rank yesterday.

"The general considers that the Cuban army, a part of it at least, has been rather unfairly used by newspaper writers as a rule. The records will show that General Miles's experience with General Garcia was very satisfactory. Before the Santiago campaign began, he opened communications with Garcia, who followed instructions to the letter, and with a promptness that ought to take him out of the proverbial 'manana' class.

"The general first sent a quantity of arms, ammunition and supplies into the island to enable the Cuban troops to carry out his orders. On June 2 he sent a message to Garcia, telling him to intercept further reinforcements destined for Santiago; to drive in the Spaniards from the outposts, and harrass the Santiago garrison in every way so as to keep it busy; to capture a commanding position overlooking the city, where we could plant our artillery with advantage when we reached the stage of besieging the city; and to open communication at once with the commanders of our military and naval forces on their arrival.

"This message was received by Garcia on the 6th, and the answer was back in the general's hands on the 10th. Garcia carried out these instructions intelligently and well. He planted his troops in small bodies where they could be used most effectively; and, though he had but ten thousand men, and was facing a force of thirty-one thousand, he handled the work so skillfully that the Spaniards got the impression that an army of one hundred thousand American soldiers was on its way across the island to attack Santiago. General Miles feels that Garcia has never had half the credit he deserved for what he really accomplished, and it would not be surprising if he said so in plain English in his report."

If General Miles does make such a presentation of the case, it will undoubtedly stir up some more controversy, both on the part of officers who have not hesitated to criticise the Cubans with much severity, but on the part of those who have insisted that General Miles did not actually inaugurate and direct the Santiago campaign. The dates of General Miles's correspondence with Garcia, which were stated with absolute assurance by the informant, show how far back he was arranging the plans which General Shafter was afterward deputized to carry out.

Calls Us Hypocrites.

Paris, Nov. 3.—The Soleil yesterday commenting editorially upon the position assumed by the American peace commissioners, said:

"No monarchical government would have dared to conduct itself after the fashion of the Americans, who are forever talking so much of right and liberty. The plan of the Americans is now evident. It is to take all of Spain's colonies and leave Spain the debts of all those colonies.

"This is the result of the holy war undertaken to insure the independence of the Cubans. What base hypocrisy do these liberals, these Democrats, these Republicans show!"

May Review the Troops.

Washington, Nov. 3.—President McKinley may go to Lexington, Ky., and review the twelve regiments now at Camp Hamilton on his way to Canton to vote.

A delegation of prominent citizens of Lexington waited on the president yesterday and extended the invitation.

They were Mayor Simrall, ex-Lieutenant Governor Alford, Leonard G. Cox and W. J. Longbridge.

The president stated that he would be very glad to accept the invitation if possible, and would give the delegation an answer later.

To Muster Out the 22d.

Washington, Nov. 3.—The war department has ordered the muster out of the Twenty-second New York regiment, Colonel Franklin Bartlett, member of Congress, commanding. The regiment is now at Fort Slocum.

BEFORE THE WAR BOARD

Testimony Taken at Washington and Lexington.

SOME SHARP CRITICISMS

Major Henry Romeyn's Observations. The Embarkation at Tampa. Observation on the Transport Concha. Gen. Sanger on the Chickamagua Camp.

Washington, Nov. 3.—The members of the war inquiry commission who are in this city held a session here yesterday for the purpose of hearing the testimony of Major Henry Romeyn, a retired army officer.

His testimony covered the embarkation of the troops at Port Tampa and the campaign in Cuba. He said that when he went to Port Tampa the bank of the canal there was covered with troops.

He had wanted to go over with the Tenth infantry, which was his old regiment, but no one could tell him where the regiment was to be found. He asked a staff officer and several others for this information, but none knew, nor did anyone appear to know on what vessel any of the particular troops were to embark.

There was great confusion, as a consequence of which a part of a command would go on one vessel and a part on another, and the commands were in some cases separated from their stores. He had [illegible] for the systematic embarkation of troops, and he had heard that they were told to go aboard [illegible] quicker.

When asked for an opinion as to the propriety of the embarkation, the witness hesitated, saying that to do so would involve criticism of his superiors.

The commissioners insisted upon a reply, and Major Romeyn replied that hye did not think the preparation was such as it should have been.

"There was," he said, "a lack of surf boats, and also of order and of preparation for landing. When the landing was undertaken the troops left the ships indiscriminately."

He told of the efforts to tow two lighters over to Cuba, but said that one was lost and that it was the general impression that it was lost on purpose, because it retarded the progress of the fleet.

In response to a question from General McCook, Major Romeyn said that while it was difficult to land anything, ambulances and wagons could have been landed as easily as artillery. He had seen only one ambulance at the front at the battle of El Caney and it was not used for conveying the wounded to the rear.

Speaking of other incidents of this battle, he said there was general surprise that an inflated balloon had been carried at the head of the attacking column, thus indicating to the Spaniards the exact location of the troops, but he did not know at whose orders this had been done.

He said that the town of Siboney was without exception the dirtiest place he had ever seen in his life, and that no effort was made to clean it up before the fever broke out.

There was a deficiency of proper food at the fever hospitals, and the cooking was generally poor. Anyone in this hospital was liable to contract yellow fever.

He had been a patient in the hospital and said there had been no neglect of patients by the medical attendants at this hospital or at the hospitals for the wounded. He had known surgeons in the latter hospitals to work sixty hours without cessation.

"Why did they not rave more surgeons?" asked Colonel Denby.

The witness said that he could not answer.

Major Romeyn said that he had come north as a convalescent, with many other convalescents, on the transport Concha, and he criticised the provisioning of the vessel in severe terms. Many of the men were compelled to sleep on board without blankets or pillows, and with no covering at night except the cotton uniform they wore during the day.

"The water was offensive to both sight and smell," he said, "and the food was poor and scant, none being provided especially for convalescents. The meat was canned and inferior, and much of the hard tack moulded."

He said that there was only one physician aboard the vessel, and that he was a convalescent.

General Wilson, ex-Governor Beaver and Captain Howell will go to Camp Meade to-day for the purpose of inspecting that camp.

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 3.—The first witness before the war inquiry commission yesterday was General Joseph P. Sanger, who has had command of the Third division here.

He said the Second division camp at Chickamauga was badly located, being on rocky ground, where sinks could not be deeply dug.

When asked why the quartermaster's department could not furnish supplies necessary for supplying the army, he said:

"The complex system of furnishing supplies to our army is at fault. If there was one department to supply all wants of the army there would be no clash and these complications could not arise. At Chickamauga the control of my division hospital was taken from me, and taken by the chief surgeon of the corps."

The general then went on to tell about the complex system of our war regulations, the taking away of regimental surgeons, and the mismanagement which led up to the overcrowding of the division hospital, and the great spread of typhoid.

He said he considered the weak point in Camp Thomas was its bad sanitary condition.

General Sanger was followed by Colonel E. A. Godwin of the Seventh Immunes, who declared he had no trouble in securing what was needed.

Only one other witness will be examined here, Major Cruze, quartermaster at Camp Hamilton.

THE HOOLEY SCANDALS AGAIN.

The Ex-Promoter Creates More Sensation by Stories of Payments.

London, Nov. 3. The examination of Mr. Ernest Terah Hooley in bankruptcy proceedings was resumed yesterday.

Mr. Hooley created a sensation by asserting that he paid Sir William Marriott one thousand pounds for introducing him to the Carlton Club, and asserting later that he paid ten thousand pounds to the Marquis of Abergavenny, a prominent conservative, for party funds.

The witness did not know whether the money reached the party fund or not.

Subsequently Mr. Hooley explained that he paid the Marquis of Abergavenny five thousand pounds first, and then paid him a second five thousand because he was told that he had promised ten thousand.

"But," the witness interjected, "that was a lie!"

Continuing, Mr. Hooley testified that he paid one thousand pounds to Mr. Frank Harris, editor of the Saturday Review, "to square a man named Blake, who threatened to publish something antagonistic to the companies."

The witness said that Mr. Harry Marks, editor of the Financial News, and a member of Parliament, induced him to invest 22,000 pounds in purchasing the London Sun.

Mr. Hooley asserted that he never received a penny from this investment.

Mr. Hooley also testified that he paid 200 pounds to C. D. Rose of the Daily Mail.

The witness explained that he could not allot Rose the shares that he wanted, and so he gave him the money instead.

London, Nov. 3.—Martin Rucker, a former promoter of bicycle companies, who was charged with contempt of court in endeavoring to induce Mr. Ernest Torah Hooley, the bankrupt company promoter, to alter evidence that reflected upon the Humber Company directors, has been fined two hundred pounds and costs and ordered to pay the money or go to prison.

Mr. Hooley declared that Rucker, in behalf of four directors of the Humber Company, offered him five thousand pounds to change some of the evidence presented in the bankruptcy proceedings.

The Woman's Missionary Board.

Springfield, Mass., Nov. 3.—The regular session of the woman's board of foreign missions opened in the First Congregational church yesterday with devotional exercises, conducted by Miss Emily S. Gilman of Norwich, Conn.

Mrs. Judson Smith of Boston, president of the board, presided.

Nearly two hundred and fifty delegates were present, representing a district extending as far west as Ohio, and as far south as Washington, D. C.

It is expected that there will be three thousand visitors here to-day, when the sessions of the board are to be opened to the public.

The delegates were welcomed by Mrs. P. H. Derby of Springfield.

Mrs. Judson Smith responded, thanking the local branch for its courtesy and hospitality.

Lost in Quicksands.

Victoria B. C., Nov. 3.—Frank J. Walker of Atlin City, who came down by the Farrallon en route to Chicago, brings news of the loss of seven Californians, headed by A. F. Englehardt of Passadena, from which place all hailed.

The casualty occurred in a swamp, between the new gold fields and the terminus of steam navigation from Bennett lake.

The party lost the trail and, wandering into quicksand, forming the bed of a dry river, were engulfed.

A searching party was sent from Atlin City, but nothing had been heard from them when Walker left.

Will Protect Subjects.

Jerusalem, Nov. 3.—Emperor William of Germany, in thanking the colony of Templars for their hearty reception, said:

"I hope that in the future, as in the past, my friendly relations with Turkey, and especially the friendship existing between the Sultan and myself, will facilitate your work. Wherever one of you needs my protection I am here. Let him come to me no matter what his creed may be. Happily the German empire is in a position to afford its subjects abroad effective protection."

Gen. Chaffee's New Command.

Huntsville, Ala., Nov. 3.—Major Gen. Chaffee has assumed command of the First division, Fourth Corps, with headquarters east of Huntsville.

A squadron of the Fifth cavalry will go to Savannah to-day and embark for Porto Rico.

Lieutenant Colonel Whitside of the Fifth cavalry has been promoted to a colonelcy and is now in command of the Tenth cavalry.

Last of the Cable Cars.

New York, Nov. 3.—The Third Avenue Railroad Company has begun the work of substituting electricity for cables as motive power on its lines running from One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street to the postoffice.

When the work is completed there will not be a cable line in the city.

President Elias of the Third Avenue road hopes to have the new system in full operation in six months.

English Companies in Russia.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 3.—The Novoe Vremya expresses jealousy of the facilities granted to English companies now working in the oil fields of the Caucasus.

It suggests that the American Standard Oil Company may be buping up Russian competitors at Baku behind an English mask.

43 Deaths at Camp Hamilton.

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 3.—A hospital train left Camp Hamilton yesterday for Fort Thomas, Ky., with 117 convalescent patients.

There are 279 patients still in the hospital here. There have been forty-three deaths out of two hundred and sixty patients.

Trolley Financering.

Mr. Riker, of the Plainfield Street Railway Company, when he appeared before the Common Council hearing ten days ago, stated that every bit of stock and bonds of that corporation represented hard money. Perhaps the Plainfield Street Railway Company may be an exception to the general run of corporate greed in this particular.

It is a common practice of promoters to capitalize and bond an enterprise for an amount about double of what the contractors get for building it ready for operation. Then with this inflated capital to pay dividends on the enterprise is expected to earn double what it should. If it does not do this the promoters go before the public crying out about the "white elephant" they have undertaken to maintain, when in reality they are getting a fair return for the actual amount they have invested.

There is a certain electric street railway not far from Plainfield that is capitalized and bonded to the amount of $600,000. The city that granted its franchise is expected to furnish business enough to pay at least five per cent. on that amount of money, and if the business does not do this it is claimed by the capitalists that the road is a losing venture. As a matter of fact, and we have had the pleasure of seeing the contract under which the road was constructed, the enterprise cost exacting $230,000, or $370,000 less than what the owners claim it did and are able to apparently prove by showing their deceptive books.

This road has double the number of miles of tracks, operates double the number of cars and in all its details is double the size of the Plainfield Street Railway Company. And besides this it has its own power house and electrical machinery, something that the Plainfield company has not. Every bit of this equipment cost $230 000, not a cent more.

Now Mr. Riker comes to us and says that the Plainfield Street Railway's road, which is only half as large in every detail as this one we have referred to, and which does not have its own power house and machinery, cost $180,000 in hard money, or only $50,000 less than this road that entailed double the amount of work to build it.

Either Mr. Riker and his partners were very reckless in their expenditures or else there "is a nigger in the woodpile" somewhere.

FIGHTING FORCES OF ENGLAND AND FRANCE.

England surpasses France in naval strength, but is greatly her inferior in available land forces. The comparative strength of the two is shown in the illustration. Should war result from present complications much will depend upon whether the principal fighting is upon land or sea.

The Murray Tally Sheets.

Any method, that covers all the legal requirements and expediates the counting of the ballots after an election, deserves the prompt endorsement of the election officers all over the State as well as in Plainfield. The system of tallying the votes, as proposed by Assemblyman Roger F. Murray, accomplishes all this and does so in a manner as simple or more so than the old method.

The election officers are paid $5 for the day's work whether they complete their work at 11 o'clock by using the new method or drag the count on to 3 or 4 o'clock in the morning by sticking to the old way. They certainly should give their hearty support to the new scheme. Once let it be practically shown how the system works and the whole county, perhaps the State, will look with favor on it and finally adopt it for general use.

In the event of the result of election hinging on a few votes either one way or the other it is barely possible that the actual result will not be known before December 20th. Under the law providing for the voting of soldiers and sailors who are away from their home districts, they have until that date in which to deposit their ballots with the Secretary of the State.

The county board of election will be in session at the court house in Elizabeth today from 8 a. m. until 5 p. m., for the purpose of adding to the registry lists and erasing names incorrectly registered. Any voter who has failed to register can go before the board on this occasion, or on Saturday, and get a certificate to have his name placed on the registry.

Considering the disrupted condition of the Democratic party in Plainfield for the last few years, the interest manifested in the reorganization plans has been quite remarkable.

These are the days when the Republicans are sure and the Democrats are certain. A week hence one or the other will have suffered a rude shock to their confidence.

When thieves succeed in carrying away a school house in a night, as they did in New Brunswick the other night, its time the town was chained to the clouds.

It has been truly said that when money talks a man seldom takes the trouble to investigate the truth of its remarks.

It is hinted that some of the Republicans are playing "button, button, who'se got the buttons?"

Tonight the local Republicans will pay tribute to their favorite son, Foster Voorhees.

Unless all indications fail the next municipal campaign will be a fierce one.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

In writing "Where is Benson?" which will be the attraction at Music Hall Saturday night, John Fowler, the author, was more than inspired with a sense of the perfect composition of human nature as illustrated in the proneness to laugh, and in striking a happy medium between the sublime and the ridiculous, he succeeded in evolving the farce comedy which appeals strongly to the favor of all amusement seekers. The company almost without exception is good, and the situations are particularly pleasing. In the cast are Frank Blair, George W. Larsen, D. J. White, H. G Carleton, F. Gemp, Gus Franckel, Helen Huyck, Idaline Cotton, Helen Young and Monte Donico As much of the success of the rendition depends upon the good work of the ladies, it is with satisfaction that it is said that nothing is lacking in this direction. It is a strong combination in all of its bearings.

An interesting event of the present local season will be the first presentation of Denman Thompson and Geo. W. Ryer's latest success, "The Sunshine of Paradise Alley" at Music Hall next Monday night. A play of its sentiment and character should be seen by all lovers of good theatricals, and all reports indicate that its naturalistic authors have another winner and worthy successor to their "Old Homestead." In this presentation all the original scenery and mechanical and electrical effects will be utilized, while the company will in every way be in keeping, consisting of twenty selected players, the Boston Verdi Ladies' Quartette and the Acme Male Quartette.

NEW MARKET.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

New Market, Nov. 3—One of the largest and most successful church sociables ever held here was the auction sociable which was held Tuesday night at the residence of Arthur Tappan, at Randolphville. The sociable was given under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Baptist church and was attended by fully 150 people, young and old, for the invitations included those of all ages. The articles which were auctioned off were human beings—young girls and women, the married ones being "mortgaged," as the auctioneer said. They were auctioned off by number, but it was noticed that those with the mortgage on them were soon claimed by the mortgagee. After the fun refreshments were served and a pleasant time was enjoyed by all.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, Nov. 3.—Wm. Foster, a former old resident of this town, but now an inmate of the Madison poor house, wandered into town during the month of August and took up his abode in the old slaughter house. William did the same last year and when the cold weather began the township was obliged to send him back to Madison or let him freeze to death. They concluded to pay for his carriage hire, so he was deported back. But the township official were not to be caught at the same game again, so William was notified several days ago to walk back while walking was good, or to be committed as a vagrant. It had the desired effect, for William was missing the next morning.

The Board of Education will hold a special meeting in the school parlor this evening to take action upon the Hallow'een pranks of the boys who broke into the school building Monday evening. Warrants will probably be sworn out for the arrest of the ringleaders tomorrow. While everyone in town sympathizes with the parents of the boys who are implicated, still the general opinion is that it is time to call a halt to such fun and make an example of the guilty ones.

The contract case of Clark against Efros, for damages sustained by dogs, has been taken out of Judge Clark's court. The Judge finding, as the father of the plaintiff, he had no right to try the case. The matter will probably be settled.

MAKING IT PLAIN.

Values crowd each other as the season advances; they clamor for a place in print; perhaps one in twenty gets it. Last month we broke a record, and the next 'twill be the same. We own the goods to do it with; we have the nerve to cut prices right through every department, not on half-a-dozen articles for baits, but every dollar's worth of goods in the store. It means much to you from a money-saving standpoint.

PRICE BREAKS

In Silks among the manufacturers means Price Breaks here; you get the full benefit of it, and it means much. Over one thousand yards of Handsome Silks that were $1 to $1.75 the yard will go for 79c yd.

DRESS GOODS

We have too many of certain lots, a backward season is to blame for it, and when the values remain the same the prices are badly twisted. About 100 pieces of Skirt and Waist Lengths, were 40, 50 and 75c yd, now 25c yd. Fifty pieces of Fancies, were 50 and 75c yd, now 29c yd Twenty-five pieces of Imported Novelties, were 75c yd, now 49c.

WHITE QUILTS.

About one hundred of them manufacturers samples, full size, handsome quilts, staple as wheat, but they go to you at half value—were $1.25 to $3, now 69c to $1.75.

BLANKETS

and Comfortables—many who read this will feel bound to buy blankets and comfortables. We sell for $2.49 a ten-quarter all-wool blanket; no one can match it under $3.50. 98c buys a full-size white cotton filled Comfortable.

Blouse Waists.

There is certainly a very great deal of difference in the ideas about blouse waists for the seasons before us among French and English people. From Paris ateliers, and from the various importers or buyers who go over from this side each season for the latest styles, in the interests of large city dry-goods firms, also from avant courreurs in the form of pictured models brought to America from celebrated French establishments, we learn that the blouse—i. e., the fitted, graceful round waist—is no more like the lopping blouse waist of other days than the enormous family umbrella of cotton is like a dainty French carriage sun-shade of silk and chiffon. This new modernized, idealized waist again takes first rank among the many picturesque bodices for the two seasons before us. There is no mistake about the fact that in guises innumerable, novel, and most attractive, this almost seamless, beautifully fitted round waist appears on at least two-thirds of the toilets and costumes designed for coming wear in the autumn promenade of fashion and for demi-dress and elaborate evening toilets. This waist may not always be called a blouse, but it has its familiar features and characteristics in a modernized version. A blouse by any other name may fit and look as well, but whatever changes and charming variations may have been wrought in its contour, ensemble, special or general effect, it is first cousin to the blouse waist that has been worn and admired since the day when the original, shapeless, scarlet Garibaldi first burst upon the world of fashion. Since that day it has appeared in some one form or other. Last autumn and winter it was the "Russian blouse," in cloth or velvet en suite, with walking and visiting costumes of every description. The year before it was the Breton model, with military braids and straps running across the front in horizontal lines.

Ten Things a Baby Can Do.

It can beat any alarm clock ever invented for waking a family up in the morning. Give it fair show, and it can smash more dishes than the most industrious servant girl in the country. It can fall down oftener and with less provocation than the most expert tumbler in the circus ring. It can make more genuine fuss over a simple brass pin than its mother would over a broken back. It can choke itself black in the face with greater ease than the most accomplished wretch that was ever executed. It can keep a family in constant turmoil from morning till night, and night till morning, without once varying its tunes.

It can be relied upon to sleep peacefully all day when its father is down town, and cry all night when he is particularly sleepy. It may be the naughtiest, dirtiest, ugliest, most fretful baby in all the world, but you can never make its mother believe it, and you had better not try it. It can be a charming and model infant when no one is around; but when visitors are present it can exhibit more bad temper than both of its parents together. It can brighten up a house better than all the furniture ever made, make sweeter music than the finest orchestra organized, fill a larger space in its parents' breasts than they knew they had, and when it goes away it can cause a greater vacancy and leave a greater blank than all the rest of the world put together.

The Cheerful Woman.

There are emergencies in every household which call for the display of a stateman's skill. The cheerful woman is pre-eminent on such occasions. She conquers the grim uncle or the dyspeptic cousin with her infective cheerfulness, and her servants recognize her as their friend and ally in all matters that are essential to their welfare. The length of time she keeps her servants is a source of wonderment to her less fortunate friends, but the secret of it is in her own winsome disposition. She soothes the tired worker with a word of kind commendation, where another might make a querulous complaint. When direction is needed she delivers it in such a gentle, albeit firm manner that it has no sting of reproof. This gentle, tactful woman is not afflicted with work that is from "sun to sun" or that is "never done." She does not moralize much, perhaps, but by some means she manages to accomplish a great deal of work and have plenty of time at her command. It is by means of that same cheerfulness of disposition. There is less delay in executing her commands, and she possesses the gift of "timing her turns" so that sometimes it seems as if the "fairies did help her." And the fairies of gentle breeding and of kind heart do help her. Heaven bless the cheerful woman!

A Well Dressed Woman.

There is an exquisite charm about a neatly-dressed woman. She does not wear her hair twisted up carelessly, as if just about to fall over her shoulders. Her gloves are not ripped at the seams, nor any buttons missing from her boots. Her veil does not reveal a hole over her chin, nor does the binding of her skirt show ragged in places. Not many women show their tidiness in all these little details, but it is a pleasure to meet the girl or woman who is, to use a slang term, "well groomed." The cloth gown of such a woman fits her without a crease, and there is neither speck nor spot on it. Her linen collar and cuffs are snowy white, and remain properly fixed in their places. Her gloves do not wrinkle, but button smoothly over her wrists. Her shoes are kept clean and polished. Her bonnet or hat is pinned on straight, and her hair is neatness itself. She is the picture of delicate finish and wholesome order. Would that we could come across her somewhat oftener.

Care of Canaries.

Breeders and others who took a keen interest in their caged pets in the spring and summer, hoping for a profitable increase, now pay them but scanty attention; and others, anxious to treat them kindly, often err through ignorance.

During the moulting season both old and young birds amply repay careful attention.

Avoid hanging them in a draught; see that the seed-vessel, drinking-water, and bath are replenished each morning.

Put plenty of sand on the floor of the cage (this will last a long time if shaken through a gravy strainer) once a week. Wash the perches with a cloth dipped in hot water; clean perches prevent sore feet, a trial many poor little birds suffer continually from.

It is sometimes necessary to cut the claws of old birds, but this requires care and sharp scissors. On no account cut them too short, or they will bleed and cause lameness.

A few inches of string tied inside the cage gives birds great amusement to pull at, and prevents them eating off paint from the wires of ornamental cages.

Good sound canary-seed is the best staple diet, with hemp and rape thrown in occasionally—if put together in the same vessel the birds scatter and waste the seed. Some packets of mixed bird-seeds are well adapted for daily use, but others contain many seeds a canary cannot thrive on, and cause sickness and weakness.

Green food of some kind should be supplied all the year round. Choice can be made from many varieties, such as lettuce, watercress, mignonette, groundsel, shepherd's-purse, dandelion, plantain.

The latter weed is found in great abundance at this season, and if gathered when ripe can be stored for winter use in paper bags.

Bits of cuttle-fish, lump sugar, biscuit or a bit of bread are gratefully attacked. Hard-boiled egg never comes amiss at any season, and birds freely supplied with it quickly accomplish the needful change of feathers, or rear broods of sturdy young ones as the case may be.

Those who are anxious to improve the color of their birds by artificial means can easily do so by supplying them with reliable "color-food" during the moulting season. Carefully given according to directions it does the birds no harm; and many an insignificant bird can be transformed into a brilliant yellow or deep orange; but, of course, it is far more satisfactory to secure birds whose plumage owes nothing to "color-feeding."

Shabby Clothes.

A woman of wonderful resource has discovered a new and very sure way of renovating and restoring to their former appearance spotted, soiled, or faded cloth or serge gowns. Pick about twenty ivy leaves—young green ones for choice, wash them carefully and place them in a jug or basin; add about one pint of boiling water, cover up the basin or jug, and leave to soak for two or three hours, when it will be ready for use. Meanwhile the garment must be thoroughly brushed inside and out, and all untidy braiding or lining removed from the bottom. When ready, spread it on the table and carefully sponge with the ivy water. It must then be hung out to dry, when it will be found to have recovered its former color and to look quite like new. Black silk may be cleaned in the same manner, but it needs more care. If the silk is in breadths it must be lightly sponged and then lightly rolled over a cloth wound round a roller and left to dry. Black lace may also be renovated when soiled or brown with age by sponging with ivy water and then rolling over a cloth wound round a roller. It should not be ironed.

A PARISIAN SUGGESTION.

Handsome Traveling Gown.

One of the nattiest suits seen is of checked cheviot of a mixed green shade. It is made with the popular flaring skirt, and the corsage is perfectly tight fitting, trimmed with braid and a light shade of plain cloth. Corded satin forms the vest and collar, the latter being made very high and outlined with a narrow band of velvet.

The latest definition of a jury is "a body of men organized for the purpose of deciding which side has the smartest lawyer."

QUEEN WILHELMINA'S FATHER.

The Eccentricities of the Old King Rendered Him Unbearable.

It is to be hoped that the young Queen of Holland has inherited the character of her sensible mother rather than that of her erratic old father. His impatience and discontent in the latter part of his life made the existence of those about him something of a burden.

One summer at Carlsbad, when the king was taking the cure, he became angry at one of the gentlemen in attendance and ordered the unfortunate young man to leave the town in six hours. As to whether there was a convenient train within the prescribed time it mattered not, the disgraced individual was forced to depart. Another time one of the King's valets was a moment late in responding to his call, and for his punishment His Majesty kept the man standing an hour before giving him the order, adding if the offence was repeated he would throw the man over the banisters.

At that time Mme F.— of the hotel where the king stayed, owned a landau and two horses, which he rented for the month. She had also a pair of ponies and a light victoria that an American woman had engaged. One day the king noticed the ponies and admired them. Madame was summoned.

"His Majesty wishes to have the ponies this afternoon."

Madame was independent, and had likewise found that American citizens paid quite as well as Dutch royalties and were not so troublesome; so she informed the Comte de M— that the ponies were engaged and that His Majesty could not have them. There followed a small tempest, but Madame remained firm and trotted off in triumph to inform the American woman of the incident. As the latter was not intending to use the ponies that afternoon, she told Mme. F— the king might have them. Somewhat reluctantly the plump little landlady returned to the count.

At 3 o'clock the American family hung out of the windows to watch the king start on his drive. Up came the victoria, the fat ponies and the wenzel, gay in his livery of blue and gold. His Majesty, looking like a thundercloud, came out on the steps, and was assisted into the carriage by the sad-eyed Comte de M—. A quaking lackey started to put a heavy rug across the king's knees. Here was an outlet for the royal wrath. Seizing the wrap, the king hurled it at the servant's head with such force that the man staggered back and sat down suddenly upon the stone steps, and His Majesty drove away with a pleasanter expression.

While the king was at Carlsbad, his only son, the Prince of Orange, died, but the strange old man would not allow this bereavement to interrupt his "cure" and ordered the funeral to be postponed for ten days. Though it was reported that one of the scores of boxes brought by the king contained two hundred hats, he never would wear any but an ancient, soft, snuff-colored one. At first this bore no sign of mourning until the Americans and English at Carlsbad sent him resolutions of sympathy. The following day he appeared with a narrow black ribbon tied carelessly around the same old brown hat. A week later he departed at 4 o'clock in the morning, an hour he always chose to begin his journeys.—New York Tribune.

The Spanish Duchess.

If a duchess enters a shop do you imagine she will be more courteously received than a little milliner? Not at all. For both are instantly made at home, and treated to the hidalgo's finest manner. * * * But she will never be the less a duchess because she and the shopkeeper are on the best of terms. Her unconsciousness of her rank in everyday relations, which would stupefy an English duchess, comes from the fact that she belongs to a prouder race. Had she a mind to sport her coronet in a shop the owner and his attendants would speedily make short work of her decorative dignity. To them it would simply mean an underbred and foolish exhibition, for impertinence and vulgar haughtiness are not defects the Spaniards will tolerate. This explains their inherent and incorrigible dislike of the Anglo-Saxon.—Blackwood's Magazine.

The Culture of the Zebra.

On several South African farms experiments have been tried with Burchell's zebra. The zebras become as tame as ponies, and are readily broken in for draft work. The object of their tamers has been to breed a mule which, like the zebra, is proof against the tsetse fly. The zebras themselves run well enough in a mule team, though they cannot stand overdriving.

"I must confess," exclaimed a young woman, "that I grow weary of hearing those people talk about their family tree." "I have observed," replied Miss Cayenne, "that family trees are very much like ordinary trees. The old, substantial stock is not shaken by any breezes. The more recent and unimportant twigs are what do all the rustling."—Washington Star.

"A woman," said the Cornfed Philosopher, "gets mad at a man if he be awkward in making love and gets madder if he makes love as if he had had lots of experience."—Indianapolis Journal.

Little Andrew—Pa, what's a genius? Pa—He is generally a fellow that the neighbors had a very poor opinion of when he was a boy.—Chicago News.

Lokal-Nachrichten aus der alten Heimath.

Provinz Ostpreußen.

Saalfeld. Das Amtsgerichtsgebäude mit sämmtlichen Akten, Dokumenten u. s. w. ist neulich Morgens niedergebrannt.

Provinz Westpreußen.

Danzig. In den Kreisen der Danziger Schankwirthe wird eine Petition um Aufhebung oder Milderung der Verfügung des Polizeipräsidenten, welche den Schluß aller Schankstellen um acht Uhr Abends festsetzt, vorbereitet.

Klobschin. Auf dem Grundstücke des Gastwirths Schafferus brach Feuer aus, welches in kurzer Zeit nicht nur sämmtliche Gebäude, Wohnhaus mit Gasthaus und den Gaststall, sondern auch das angrenzende Schulhaus in Asche legte.

Rheinprovinz.

Elberfeld. Der Inspektor des Polizeigefängnisses, Witzki, der kürzlich von Wartenburg (Ostpreußen) hierher versetzt wurde, ist auf Anordnung der Staatsanwaltschaft Wartenburg wegen Verbrechen im Amt verhaftet worden.

Königswinter. Die Weingärten der Gemarkung Königswinter sind in diesem Jahre nicht durch polizeiliche Verordnung geschlossen worden. Seit Menschengedenken ist dies noch nicht dagewesen, weil auch in schlechten Weinjahren einzelne bevorzugte Distrikte einen Ertrag aufzuweisen hatten. Dies ist in diesem Jahre nicht der Fall. Der Schimmelpilz und der Sauerwurm haben die diesjährige Ernte ganz vernichtet, und zwar sowohl die rothen, wie auch die weißen Trauben.

Provinz Sachsen.

Delitzsch. Eine seltsame Gefangene hat die hiesige Strafanstalt für weibliche Personen erhalten. Es ist die vom Schwurgericht zu Stendal zum Tode verurtheilte Raubmörderin Matthes, die zu lebenslänglichem Zuchthaus begnadigt wurde. Die Verurtheilte aber will von keiner Begnadigung etwas wissen, sondern verlangt, hingerichtet zu werden.

Mühlhausen. Am Morgen des 1. Mai wehte auf dem Thurme der Untermarktkirche eine mächtige rothe Fahne. Vier Sozialdemokraten standen im Verdacht, diese halsbrecherische That ausgeführt zu haben, und standen deshalb wegen Hausfriedensbruches und groben Unfugs vor dem Schöffengericht. Drei Angeklagte wurden wegen mangelnden Beweises freigesprochen, der Vierte wurde für überführt erachtet und zu zehn Monaten Gefängniß verurtheilt.

Provinz Schlesien.

Grünberg. Eine Volksbibliothek mit Lesehalle wurde in unserer Stadt eröffnet. Die Stadtverwaltung leistet zur Unterhaltung derselben einen jährlichen Zuschuß von 1000 Mark.

Provinz Schleswig-Holstein.

Altona. Allgemeines Aufsehen hat hier der Zusammenbruch des Weinhauses C. H. Heuer, das länger als 50 Jahre bestand, hervorgerufen. Die Passiva sollen nahezu 500,000 Mark, der Werth des Weinlagers noch etwa 200,000 Mark betragen.

Kiel. Das Segelschiff „Adeline" aus Neuhaus ist Nachts von dem Torpedoboot „S. 37" bei Stollergrund treibend aufgefunden und hier eingebracht worden. Der Steuermann der „Adeline," welcher behauptete, der Schiffer Dogege sei beim Segelsetzen ertrunken, ist plötzlich flüchtig geworden. Er wird von der Staatsanwaltschaft verfolgt wegen Verdachts, den Schiffer überwältigt und über Bord geworfen zu haben.

Provinz Westfalen.

Münster. Die Meldung, daß der Kanal Dortmund-Emshäfen am 1. April 1899 eröffnet werden solle, kann nur dahin ausgelegt werden, daß an diesem Tage die Eröffnungsfeier stattfindet, wahrscheinlich in Gegenwart des Kaisers. Auf ausgedehnten Theilstrecken wird der Kanal schon heute befahren. Leider hapert es noch immer mit der wichtigen Theilstrecke Henrichenburg-Dortmund, da die Dichtung der durchlässig gewordenen 14 Meter hohen Dämme am Schiffshebewerk bei Henrichenburg nicht gelingen will. Neuerdings ist dort die Einbauung von zwei eisernen Sicherheitsthoren angeordnet worden.

Plainfield Endorsement Is What Counts With Plainfield People.

They will find you out at last.
Every time a man is fooled,
Another skeptic is made.

It fails to keep its promises.
Doan's Kidney Pills bring renewed faith.
They cure the skeptic.
Plenty of proof of this at home.
Plainfield proof for Plainfield people.
Our citizens say they cure backache.
Cure sick kidneys.
Experience has taught them this is so.
Conviction for every sufferer.
In the testimony of friends and neighbors.
Read this case:

Mrs. I. L. Holmes, of 442 West Second street, says: "I have used several boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills for backache and have derived more benefit from them than from anything else I ever used. Before I tried this remedy I was bothered almost constantly with a severe pain across the small of my back so bad at times that I thought I must give up. If I sat down and got up, or was lying down and attempted to rise quickly, or retained one position for any length of time, sharp, acute pain always followed. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised for such trouble and went to L. W. Randolph's drug store and got a box. They helped me from the first and I improved right along under the treatment. I recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to others who suffer from kidney complaint."

A NEW MONASTERY.

FRANCISCANS' FINE HOME NOW BEING BUILT AT WASHINGTON.

Here Will Be Established the Order's Headquarters In America. The Monastery Built Like Those In Italy—Features of the Church.

The powerful order of Franciscan monks will soon establish its headquarters for the United States near Washington. The monastery, which has been in course of erection for eight months near the Catholic university of America, is rapidly nearing completion, and will be ready for occupancy in January. The Commissariat of the Holy Land, now located in New York, will have quarters in the monastery, and the affairs of the order will be directed from there. It will be the only Franciscan monastery in the United States, and is a new departure in Catholic educational institutions in the United States. Friar Godfrey Schilling, a native of Prussia, will be the prior. The superior will be the custodian of the Holy Sepulcher at Jerusalem. Novices will be drawn from Belgium, Austria, Italy and Spain. They will be educated as missionaries for South America, Africa and the Holy Land. In connection with the monastery there is the Church of the Holy Land, in which are reproduced the Holy Sepulcher, the birthplace of Christ, Mount Calvary, the catacombs and the home of the holy family at Nazareth.

The immense buildings occupy a commanding eminence one mile north of University station, on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, and about three miles from Washington. From the height there is a magnificent view of hills, valleys and hamlets far beneath. Ample grounds surround the monastery, and the site is an ideal one for such an institution. The church faces the long winding road which straggles up the hill from the little railway station in the valley below.

The architecture of the entire structure is of a style hitherto unseen in the United States and is oriental in character. The facade, while plain, cannot be said to be severe. Little attempt is made at ornamentation beyond the terra cotta trimmings. On either side of the main entrance there are niches for statues of the patron saints of the order, and just over the door is the coat of arms of the Holy Land, surmounted by a cross. The church is built in the shape of this coat of arms, which is a cross surrounded by four smaller crosses. The main body of the church forms the large cross and four chapels represent the smaller ones. A corridor leads from the entrance past two chapels to the body of the church, which has a vaulted roof arching 75 feet above the floor. The floors are of Italian mossic, equal to the best work of the kind in the Congressional Library building. Directly opposite the corridor and across the church is the Holy Sepulcher, every detail of the original in Jerusalem being accurately reproduced. Above this is Mount Calvary, with its trees and every feature faithfully portrayed. Rising still higher and slightly to the rear is the choir loft overlooking the mount and body of the church. To the right of the church entrance a carved stairway, ample in proportions, leads to the grotto of Nazareth, 20 feet below the floor. Here is reproduced the rocky cave where the holy family lived after leaving Bethlehem with the infant Christ. This grotto extends below the walls of the church 20 or 30 feet. Following a subterranean passage of arched brickwork, the chapel of the dead is reached. This is below and just in front of the Holy Sepulcher and is designed for holding the funeral ceremonies of those who may die in the monastery. Adjoining it is a miniature reproduction of the catacombs of Rome, with niches in the walls for the reception of bodies. These niches will not be used and were built solely to carry out the general plan of the reproduction.

From the catacombs a dark winding passage extends beneath the church floor to the grotto of Bethlehem or holy cave. Like the grotto of Nazareth, it is 20 feet beneath the floor and is a representation of the birthplace of Christ, over which the Church of the Nativity in Bethlehem is built. It was in that grotto that St. Jerome spent the last 31 years of his life, 14 of which were devoted to the translation of the Old Testament into Latin. A small stairway leads from the grotto to the church above. Altars are placed over both grottoes at either side of the church. Light is admitted to the church from many rose and oriel windows, and their interior will be richly ornamented.

The monastery is just in the rear of and adjoining the church. The two buildings are connected by the sacristy, which is immediately back of the Holy Sepulcher and Mount Calvary. Built in the form of a hollow square of 200 feet, the monastery is as nearly like similar institutions in Italy as it is possible to make it. The cloister surrounds a courtyard 100 feet square, with trees scattered here and there and a well in the center, after the manner of the monasteries of the old world. The west side is devoted to quarters for the students and novices. The lower floor will be occupied by newcomers and the upper by those who will soon be admitted to the order or have nearly completed their course of study. There are also rooms for those who are not under the monastic rule, but may be domiciled in the building, attached for the time being to the institution.

The entire lower floor of the eastern wing is given over to the commissariat of the Holy Land. Here will be the executive offices of the order for the jurisdiction of the United States. Above are the quarters for the monks, small rooms with cement floors and a single window. These rooms do not differ materially from the cells of the monks in European monasteries. In the north corridor the library occupies most of the space on the upper floor. There are also rooms for the sick, larger and more comfortable than the little cells, and apartments for the superior and his executive staff. The basement is set apart for shops, where all sorts of trades will be taught to students and novices. The south corridor adjoins the sacristy and forms part of it. Extending along the roof of the north corridor there is a platform or terrace where the monks may stroll and meditate. The building is of fireproof construction.

The interior will be entirely devoid of decoration of any kind, and will be severely plain. The architect, Aristides Leonori of Rome, came to the United States expressly to supervise the construction. He has recently returned from Palestine, where he visited all the places reproduced in the church. He took accurate measurements and photographs to aid him in his work in Washington. Both church and monastery are constructed of buff brick and terra cotta of the same color with tiled roofs. There are now a number of individual members of the Order of St. Francis located in many of the cities of the United States, but there has never been a house of the order in this country before the one now nearing completion in Washington.—New York Sun.

NEW APOSTOLIC DELEGATE.

Archbishop Chapelle's Eminent Fitness For That Post In Cuba.

The archbishops of the Roman Catholic church of America convened in annual session the other day at the Catholic university in Washington. Archbishops Chapelle of New Orleans, Gross of Oregon, Riordan of California and Ireland of St. Paul were absent. Archbishop Kain of St. Louis served as secretary and announced at the end of the session that the prelates had spent the day in considering the international affairs of the church and had no information to give to the press.

A cablegram was received from Archbishop Chapelle in Paris saying that he had been appointed apostolic delegate to Cuba. Mgr. Conaty commented on the appointment in the following terms: "No one could be more eminently fitted for the post at Cuba than Archbishop Chapelle. He is a thorough American and perfectly familiar with all the details of the American government. His headquarters will, I suspect, be at Santiago, where the archbishop now incumbent is stationed. But his district will not extend to Porto Rico, being confined to the island of Cuba itself."

Archbishop Chapelle was at one time rector of St. Matthew's parish of Washington, being appointed to the bishopric of New Mexico from Washington. On the death of Archbishop Janssens of New Orleans Bishop Chapelle was named to succeed him, notwithstanding the determined opposition of the bishops and clergy of the diocese. That opposition has since altogether disappeared.—New York Sun.

THE POPE'S CRITICAL DATE.

He Has Escaped One Determined by a Cabalistic Calculation.

The pope appears to have recovered from the serious indisposition which gave rise to the recent alarming reports. His holiness has never had a strong constitution.

About his twentieth year he believed that he was wasting with phthisis and wrote an eloquent piece of Latin verse on his approaching end, "Why Flatter Thyself?" Ten years later, when he was apostolic delegate at Benevento, he came near dying of a pernicious fever. It was thought that he was lost. He was saved by the act, then thought foolhardy, of Dr. Volpis, physician to the king of Naples, in plunging him into a bath of cold water at the moment of the most violent attack of the fever.

Leo XIII has not gone out of the vast inclosure which surrounds the Vatican in 20 years, and yet has surpassed the years of life of Pius IX, who alone of all the popes had exceeded the years of Peter. In the eyes of superstitious Romans Leo XIII has performed another miracle of longevity. He has escaped a critical date, one determined by a cabalistic calculation, which set the end of his life for the year 1892.

It is said all his predecessors in this century, Pius IX, Gregory XVI, Pius VIII, Leo XVI and Pius VII, have obeyed the law of figures. Leo XIII alone has escaped it, and the same calculation, if it were exact in his case, would assign him ten years more of existence, which would make the pontiff surpass even the age of Doge Dandolo.—London Mail.

MIXED MARRIAGES.

Without the Necessary Promises They Are Condemned by the Pope.

The Osservatore Romano, the official Vatican organ, states that the pope was exceedingly displeased at the parish priest of St. Stephen's in Vienna, who officiated at the wedding of Princess Dorothea of Coburg, a Catholic, and Duke Ernest of Sleswick-Holstein, a Protestant, for the reason that he did not require the usual promises before the wedding ceremony. The priest will be subject to punishment.

The Catholic church requires on the occasion of a mixed marriage that the two parties sign an agreement that no obstacle will be placed in the way of the Catholic party's practicing his or her religion and that all the children will be raised Catholics, whether the Catholic party be living or not.

New Catholic Hospital.

Archbishop Feehan dedicated the new St. Anthony's hospital, Chicago, Sept. 18. There was an attendance of 20,000 present. The archbishop was assisted by a large number of the clergy. Representatives of the supreme pontiff, of the national and state governments, were there, and the city of Chicago sent its acting mayor to give official approval to the new charity of the Franciscan Sisters of the Sacred Heart. The hospital is one of the finest in the world.

A NEW BATTLESHIP.

THE GREATEST TRIUMPH IN NAVAL CONSTRUCTION.

The Illinois, Which In the Opinion of Experts Will Be the Most Powerful Fighting-Machine Ever Constructed by a Nation.

The navy department, in designing the plans for the Illinois, showed as great an advance over former designs as previous plans had shown over the types of fighting ships which were supposed to be satisfactory in 1890. The Illinois belongs to the class of designs known as those of 1896, while the Kentucky and Kearsarge belong to the class of 1895. As if the designers had foreseen the conclusion of naval experts after the close of our war with Spain upon the efficacy of guns, in the Illinois the 8-inch gun is eliminated and the weight and power of the secondary battery tremendously increased. To add to the value of the seagoing qualities of the battleship, a spar deck has been added to the first three-quarters of the ship's length, and the freeboard increased from thirteen feet in the Kentucky to twenty feet in the Illinois.

The four terrible 13-inch guns will fire an 1,100-pound shell, with a muzzle energy of 33,627 foot tons, equal to the perforation of thirty-four and a half inches of wrought iron. The two 13-inch guns forward are twenty-six and a half feet above the water line, which enables them to be used in battle even when a heavy sea is on and the battle ship is headed at it. The after turret stands above the main deck and is eight feet lower than the forward turret. The turrets are of the elliptical type. They are lighter than on the other battle ships and provide more room for the handling of the guns and their loading.

The fourteen 6-inch guns of the secondary battery will fire a 100-pound shell. Each of these guns is to have a muzzle energy of 3,204 tons, with a power of penetrating 15.6 inches of iron. The guns are widely separated, and greater protection is afforded the gunners than on any other of the battle ships. Eight of the guns will be in the central battery on the main deck, protected by a wall of five and one-half inches of steel. Two 6-inch guns on the same deck, but forward, will be protected the same way. Four 6-inch guns on the spar deck will have a protection of six inches of steel, and can be fired dead ahead and dead astern, as well as on the broadside. The two smokestacks have been placed abreast of each other.

In calling attention to the superb quality of the Illinois, Alabama and Wisconsin type of battle ships, the Scientific American makes a comparison with the Majestic of the British navy, which officials of the navy stationed here regard as eminently fair. The Majestic has a displacement loaded of about 15,000 tons to 11,525 tons for the Illinois.

Nevertheless, against this seeming disparity the Illinois carries four 13-inch guns, as against four 12-inch for the Majestic; she has fourteen 6-inch rapid-fire, as against twelve; she is protected with sixteen inches of side armor, as against fifteen inches; she has seventeen-inch turret armor, as against six inches, and her speed is only one and one-half knots less. Further, being a smaller ship she presents less target to the enemy, and drawing four feet less water she can navigate harbors and rivers and channels into which the Majestic dare not enter.

The technical description of the Illinois is: A double-turret battle ship, length 368 feet, and over all 373 feet and 9 inches. Extreme breadth, 27 feet 2½ inches. Mean draught, with 800 tons of coal on, two-thirds of stores and two-thirds of ammunition, is 23 feet and 6 inches. There is twenty feet of freeboard at the bow and thirteen feet three inches at the stern.

The armor belt is Harveyized. The central portion of the ship is completely inclosed by armor, extending from four feet below the load water line to the level of the upper deck, or a height of twenty-three feet. The principle on which the ship was designed is to obtain greater rigidity and strength over other battle ships with use of less material.

She carries a pair of propelling engines with an estimated collective horse power of 10,000 indicated and a corresponding legend speed of sixteen knots. The area of the mid-ship section is 1,613 square feet and of the load water plate 19,900 feet. The propelling machinery weighs 1,128 tons, and the armor and bolts in her 2,719 tons.

What will the Illinois be able to do when in action?

Naval authorities say that she can stand fourteen miles out from any coast city in the world and hurl destructive shells into the center of it. In a fair, open sea fight, with her steering apparatus uninjured and American gunners on board her, she is considered to be more than a match for any battle ship afloat to-day. If pitted against an armored cruiser of the type of the New York, one of her broadsides, it is said, would entirely destroy all of the upper works of that magnificent vessel and render her gun shelters untenable by any human being. Matched against vessels of the type of the Oquendo or the Vizcaya at a range of 2,000 yards, she would hurl against either one of them 1,150 pounds more of chilled steel projectiles than their combined broadsides could discharge against her. If fighting alone all the vessels of Admiral Cervera's fleet, as it was when afloat at Santiago, the Illinois would discharge in a double broadside more steel projectiles, in weight, than fired by the combined Spanish fleet. If in contest with such vessels as Dewey fought at Manila, the secondary battery of the Illinois would discharge more missiles in weight in one broadside than the entire fleet of Montejo would fire.

The total muzzle energy of all her guns is greater than the total muzzle energy of Dewey's and Montejo's squadrons combined. Another way of putting it is that if a quantity of dynamite 600 feet in length, two feet in breadth and two feet in height were discharged in the heart of Chicago it would represent the muzzle energy of all the guns of the Illinois when in action.

Greater battle ships will undoubtedly be constructed as naval skill progresses in the future, but for years to come the Illinois will be a type of battle ship to be respected and feared by all foreign nations and to be honored by the people whom she defends.

In one respect the Illinois will materially differ from that "terror of the seas," the Oregon. The battle lines of the Oregon are vicious, mean and ugly. She stands for the word "fight" in every outline that she presents to the eye. The outlines of the Illinois are far more graceful, and while in many ways she is a more terrible vessel than the Oregon she does not show it. Her appearance is fierce, but softened by lines that will give her a beautiful appearance when afloat and not stripped for action.

FOOTBALL PADS.

What the Players Have To Wear To Protect Themselves.

To the spectator who watches the hard-fought battles on the football field nowadays, it appears as though the players are so well protected from injuries that there are not nearly so many risks to be run as there were twelve years ago. In the old days the members of the big 'varsity teams wore very little so-called armor. A man who wore canvas trousers and jacket, with a jersey underneath, and always put a rubber protector over his mouth before diving into a pile of struggling combatants was considered proof against bruises or broken bones. But with the growth of the game came changes, until at present a football player without all the modern devices to protect him from harm is regarded as foolhardy.

Who would have worn boots of a double thickness and padded with thin felt twelve years ago? And yet many of the best players to-day wear them to protect the small bones in their feet and to avoid sprained ankles. If the old-timers had been asked to wear shin guards they would undoubtedly have spurned them, but nobody is without them now. From the light canvas or cloth trousers of former years we have heavily padded moleskins, with bulging knees a foot thick, solid paniers over the hips and leather protectors for the stomach and kidneys. Canvas jackets are not very popular now, but heavily padded jerseys are considered the right idea instead. Chadwick, of last year's Yale team, had perhaps the most novel looking jersey. Around the wrists were leather bands, and on each elbow was a leather pad the size of a loaf of bread. On each shoulder was a leather protector which was half the size of an ordinary saddle and must have weighed three or four pounds. The inside of the jersey was lined with some strong texture.

Modern football players believe in protecting their heads. Twelve years ago there were very few "long-haired" experts, but the craze for letting one's locks grow has become universal, so that a football man with short hair is looked down upon. The rubber nose mask, which covers the mouth as well, and the leather helmet are devices that seem almost indispensable. The helmet that is in use now not only covers the top of the head with a cap of hard leather, but protects the ears with two big muffs made of thick felt, through which are small holes, so that the wearer can hear the instructions of his captain. It is estimated that with all of his football togs on a player can tip the scales at thirty pounds above his actual weight. Somebody has suggested steel masks and coats of mail, but unfortunately the rules prohibit any such warlike accessories.

It is rather expensive to own a complete outfit, the big 'varsity teams having to pay about $40 per man for the various articles needed in a gridiron battle. But as college elevens have plenty of money at their command, nothing is thought of such an outlay.

To Cure Low Spirits.

Take one ounce of the seeds of resolution, properly mixed with the oil of good conscience; infuse into it a large spoonful of the balsam of patience. Distil carefully a composing plant called other's woes, which you will find in every part of the garden of life. Gather a handful of the blossoms of hope, sweeten them properly with a syrup made of the balm of Providence; and, if you can get any seeds of true friendship, you will then have the most valuable medicine that can be administered. But you must be careful to get the seeds of true friendship, as there is a weed that much resembles it called self-interest, which will spoil the whole composition. These ingredients, well mixed and faithfully taken, soon complete the cure.

Kicking Lore.

Kicking in football may be divided into three branches or departments—that of punting, drop-kicking, and place-kicking. Of the three the third is by far the easiest to acquire. To one who has mastered in a way the first two, punting offers more opportunities for a display of science than drop-kicking, and is harder to master. The novice, on the other hand, would class drop-kicking as far the more difficult of the two.

But, easy as place-kicking is, the fact remains that there are more players who can punt better than they can kick goals than the reverse, by a large majority.

TENDER THOUGHTS, ETC.

"Six years ago next month we gathered in an adjoining home at the bier of one whose life was dear. Death so unexpectedly and sudden has now come to this home. To husband, sister, kindred and friend these words 'I will not leave you,' come with special significance. Has not our Lord robbed the grave of its terror, and He comes to us with gracious help; He comes to comfort us.

"This life just gone out filled with generosity, love and sympaty, and the much that she has done shall be a memorial to her. The donations to the Children's Home and kindred societies, the relief to the poor and her efforts to spread the Gospel, shall all be remembered. 'Blessed are those who die in the Lord;' they shall rest from their labors, and their works shall follow them."

In conclusion Dr. Schenck offered a fervert and impressive prayer, in which he frequently mentioned the prescious life of the departed. An opportunity was then given all present to view the remains that rested in a handsome casket in the rear parlor. Surrounding it there was a beautiful display of floral tributes consisting of a large cross, pillow and wreaths, all from the immediate members of the bereaved family.

The interment was in the family plot at Hillside, this morning, only the immediate family being present. Before leaving the house prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. Richards.

The bearers of honor, selected by the family, three from the Crescent Avenue church and three from Trinity Reformed church, were as follows: Hon. Charles Place, Henry C. Squires, Joseph W. Sandford, G. L VanEmburgh, Robert Clark, Jr., and A. L. Force.

At the grave a short burial service was recited by Dr. Schenck, followed with the benediction by Dr. Richards. The remains were then lowered into mother earth, through a grave heavily-lined with evergreen branches, thus taking away much of the dread of the interment.

—The parsonage of the Congregational church at the corner of West Seventh street and Madison avenue is being repainted. The house will be a grey, with white trimmings and dark green blinds.

ON THE GRIDIRON.

Carey, the new candidate for the Plainfield team, showed up Tuesday evening and did some excellent work. He made a favorable impression with all, and is considered a strong man for a back or end. With plenty of good local candidates in the field, however, it may be hard to find him a place.

The members of the Plainfield team will meet at the Westervelt avenue grounds this evening to practice for the election day game. The team will also meet for practice tomorrow evening, Saturday afternoon and Monday night. Most of the time this evening will be devoted to the line-up, passing and running with a chance for the ends to break up interference. Saturday afternoon, some of the candates will do some active work at Martine field. Monday evening will be devoted to a final drill of the team in the new signals.

GOLF.

The members of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club have decided to abolish the monthly handicap for the balance of the season, also the girl's handicap for next Saturday. BASKET BALL.

The basket ball team of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. will go to Newark Friday evening to meet the team from the Newark Institute at the gymnasium of the latter. Walter L. Long, who was injured in the first game of the season played at New York, will probably not be able to go as one of the team.

Commissioners Instructed to Resist Our Demands.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Madrid, November 3.—The Government has telegraphed to Senor Montero Rios, President of the Spanish Peace Commission at Paris, instructing the Commission to maintain the rights of Spain against the pretension of the Americans of their right to keep the Phillippines. This claim the Government regards as a breach of the terms of the protocol, wherein the Americans agreed merely to occupy Manila until the treaty of peace was concluded.

HOW CHINESE BUTLERS BORROW.

A Guest at a Dinner Party May Recognise His Own Property on the Table.

Chinese butlers have a way, when their own supplies fall short, of borrowing from the neighbors. At least this was a very common custom twenty-five years ago, and goods changed hands over the garden wall with astonishing celerity, the butlers, meantime, keeping a strict account. An American lady residing in China writes thus in the Atlantic:

At the first large dinner party to which I was invited—I went as a bride—I found myself eating with my own brand new knives, forks and spoons. I stared at them very hard; there could be no mistake, for I could see the fresh monograms.

I was dreadfully distressed, but did not dare to say anything. When I reached home I told my husband, rather trembingly, for I was quite sure that they had been stolen. To my amazement he only laughed and said:

"Oh, you will get used to that soon, and when you have too many guests you will find that, instead of asking you to get more supplies, the butler will just borrow your neighbor's and always make up the deficiency."

And so it proved. I can well remember once, when my husband had asked eight guests in to dinner only half an hour before the usual time (one for each of the delicious first spring snipe he had shot), that there appeared later a splendid roast leg of mutton as one of our courses.

Now I knew we had no mutton for earlier in the day the cook had been bewailing the non-arrival of the Shanghai steamer, by which it always came. Turning to the gentleman on my left I asked, "Did your steamer come from Shanghai to-day?"

"Yes; why?"

I looked down to the other end of the table, where my husband was carving the unexpected treasure trove with very evident enjoyment.

"Well, ours did not," said I, "and yet—"

He caught sight of the mutton. "Oh!" he laughed. "I suppose that is mine. No doubt yours will come tomorrow and probably be much better; so I shall be the gainer this time, and enjoy it all the more."

Queen Victoria's Havana Cigars.

Queen Victoria has a great dislike of smoking and will not tolerate the use of tobacco in her immediate neighborhood. And yet the cigar bill for her guests is a very heavy one.

The principal item is the brand of the finest Havana cigars, which are specially made for her and sent to Windsor in glass tubes hermetically sealed. Queen Victoria's cigars could not be had even in Cuba at wholesale prices under a dollar apiece.

The men who make them receive thirty cents for each cigar, and none but the oldest and most skillful workmen are entrusted with their manufacture. At this rate they can earn quite a small fortune, for three hundred cigars a day can be turned out by the most expert.

How Pigeons Are Protected.

Carrier pigeons in China are protected from birds of prey by a little apparatus consisting of thin bamboo tubes fastened to the birds' bodies with thread passed beneath the wings. As the pigeon flies along the action of the air through the tubes produces a shrill whistling sound, which keeps birds of prey at a respectful distance.

If it were not for the salts in the ocean, the whole sea would soon become a mass of corruption, owing to the decay of the organic matter it contains.

WIT AND HUMOR.

"My son," said the London business man, "I must again caution you to live within your means."

"Has anybody been sending you my bills?"

"Not yet. But you have been seen saying 'howdydo' to two Dukes and an Earl."—Washington Star.

"Why, sir," said the geologist, "the ground you walk on was once under water."

"Well," replied the friend, who is nothing if not patriotic, "it simply goes to show you can't hold America down."—Washington Star.

"I am always grateful to my parents for the musical education they gave me," said Willie Wishington.

"But you never sing."

"No. Thanks to my thoughtful parents, I know enough about music not to try."—Washington Star.

"Ethel coaxed Harry to quit sending her flowers and candy and save money for a tandem."

"Well?"

"Just when he had enough saved he got engaged to another girl."—Chicago Record.

Jones (leaving for Europe)—When I'm in Rome I'll do as the Romans do.

Smith—Indeed you won't. You'll do as the Americans do—pay twice as much for everything as anyone else would.—Puck.

"We are in danger," said one Spanish statesman, "of sinking into oblivion; of being almost forgotten by the rest of the world."

"Never!" replied the other, proudly. "We still have our debts."—Washington Star.

Freddie—Mamma, don't you wish it would rain diamonds?

Mrs. Rich—No, dear. If it should, people with money couldn't afford to wear them.—Jeweler's Weekly.

THIMBLES FOR PLAYING THE PIANO.

And Also For Typists. Said to Save the Nerves of the Worker.

Thimbles for pianists and typists—that is something new for you. Either of these young ladies finds that incessant use of the fingers pounding on the ivories all day long, or for six, seven or eight hours in rapid and constant manner, is very nervous work. The tips of the fingers are nerve centers. In fact, the most sensitive part of the entire body is the end of the finger. If this nerve center comes in harsh contact with the solid ivory keys thousands of times during the day—in fact one might say millions of times—think what a strain on the nervous system.

It is no wonder that these ivory manipulators of either sort give out and become nervous wrecks in the course of time. Some physicians have even gone so far as to say that a typewriter cannot retain her vigor of nerve for longer than five years, and it is well known that a pianist often has nervous prostration.

These new thimbles are made of rubber and intended to lessen the shock fo the nerve centers. They are made to fit the ends of the fingers as the glove fingers fit. They are made in sets according to the size of the glove worn, and can be ordered in that way. Of course the typewriter does not need full sets, but the fingers which are used the most will be greatly relieved by their use.

A pneumatic ring cushion forms the end of the thimble. In making a number of carbon copies the amount of strength required is lessened by their use. It is said that the speed is also increased at least ten per cent. It is certain that they save the ends of the fingers from becoming callous or cracked, and save the nails from breaking and splitting.—New York Herald.

VOORHEES GREETED BY LOCAL G. O. P.

Fairly Enthusiasic Meeting Held in Music Hall.

DISCUSSED STATE ISSUES.

CONGRESSMAN FOWLER TALKED ABOUT SILVER QUESTION.

Candidate Cross Brought Up Crane's Record and Attacked—Fowler Stirred the Audience to Some Interest—Voorhees Greeted With Much Cheering—An Impromptu Reception Was Held.

Music Hall was filled last night with Republicans and others interested in seeing what arguments they had to present for the consideration of voters. The meeting was not wildly enthusiastic as some expected it would be, but nevertheless it accorded the speakers, and especially Mr. Voorhees, a cordial welcome.

W. R. Codington called the meeting to order, after the political leaders and candandates had taken their seats on the platform. He named Craig A. Marsh as chairman, and the latter took charge. Joseph A. Coward at this time read the list of vice-presidents and secretaries, which are as follows:

William Rockwell, J. F. Buckle, J. H. Tier, Sr., J. Fred MacDonald, J. B. Probasco, L. V. F. Randolph, J. K. Large, William Douglass, J. H. McVey, A. W. Anderson, J. C. Pope, William H. Sampson, S. A. Ginna, Robert Gutridge, C. B. Corwin, Marion S. Ackerman, J. B. Dumont, A. D. Cook, C. S. Foote, Lewis Croom Alex. Gilbert, O. T. Waring, Ernest R. Ackerman, F. H. Andrews, F. W. Runyon, J. W. Murray, Sr., E. T. Barrows, Mason W. Tyler, C. A. Marsh, J. F. Hubbard, Spencer Conway, William Mayhew, L. W. Serrell, W. W. Corlell, R. A. Meeker, George W. DeMeza, W. A. Westphal, F. C. Lounsbury, William Connett, William A. Kline, Elias H. Bird; secretaries, W. N. Runyon, J. C. Kirkner. William Newcorn.

Chairman Marsh made a few remarks in support of the principles of the Republican party, after which he introduced the first speaker, Joseph A. Cross, of Elizabeth, the nominee for State Senator. Mr. Cross was well received and in opening his address he spoke briefly about the silver question. He believed that the silver question is still very much alive for the fact that all but five States have voted for it, and he urged that New Jersey stand by the principles as declared by the Republican party. Mr. Cross then went on to speak of Foster M. Voorhees the nominee for Governor. He said that Mr. Voorhees had been before the people of Union county for twenty years; that he has done for the State a great work; that his investigating committee have succeeded in disclosing the wrong-doings of the Democrats. In comparison, he mentioned the name of Mr. Crane, the Democratic nominee for Governer. About him he said that he is prosecutor of Essex county, and that as prosecutor he failed to present several indictments, but the Grand Jury gave instructions that he either present them or that he himself be presented to the Grand Jury. The indictments were then speedily presented.

The next speaker was Congressman Fowler, and when he arose to speak, he was received with loud applause. A portion of Mr. Fowler's address is as follows:

"Ladies and gentlemen, I take peculiar pleasure in coming here, for this is a Republican city in a Republican district. I suggest three cheers for our country, everybody rise and salute.

"I am a great believer in our country, and especially in New Jersey. During the past few years, when a question of honor or dishonor has arisen, you have always decided right. You did it when the race-track question was before us. You did it in 1894, when you voted 48,000 for America against the world. In the last Presidential election you gave a plurality of 87,000 for solid money and sent Garret A. Hobart and Wm. McKinley to Washington.

"Each man is a king, each woman a queen, and in that fact you have a priviledge, also a duty. The time has passed when a man says he votes a ticket because his father voted it.

"I am one of those who believe that there cannot be two systems of morals. Have the Democrats done the right thing? They met at Trenton and nominated one Crane. Will he be Governor, if elected? No, and James Smith, Jr., knows it. What reform do the Democrats hope to carry out? Isn't it simply a James Smith, Jr., issue. Between Hudson and Camden counties and James Smith, Jr., you have the three graces. They set about to denounce the best war Governor in any State. These people set about to do what no man has ever been capable of doing.

"There is only a national question involved in this election. It is your priviledge to know the character of those before you asking for your suffrage. I wonder if the Democrats know what Jeffersonism is that they are crying about. Ever since the days of Jefferson we have had a gold standard, and we are for that standard.

"Our free silver friends tell us we will have more money on a free coinage of silver basis. As a matter of fact it would make less money. In Mexico you can obtain $10 in silver for $5 in gold. Our Democratic friends have been making something out of nothing.

"Two years ago Mr. Bryan recognized the fact that a change in standards would cause a commotion, but he said we would feel better afterward. Now our friends tell us that there is not enough gold in the world. There is sixty millions of gold used every year, and there is practically a gold mine in everyone's mouth. Every effort is being put forth to make everything cheaper, but labor; honest labor, which ought to rise steadily upward.

"The flag of our Nation now floats over Porto Rico, never to come down. It shall float over such parts of the Phillipines as shall be ours to take for our best interests. No one is an Imperialist for Imperialism's sake only. I want to urge upon my Republican friends not to allow themselves to be deceived. You remember four years of long night when our industries stood still, while the Democrats held the reins. There was one bright star when Grover Cleveland announced that every dollar in the treasury should be spent before the American dollar should be dishonored.

"I urge that you Republicans and Democrats be true to your sacred trusts, your country and your God, and I have every confidence that you will vote to support the administration of William McKinley."

Mr. Fowler then left amid tumultous applause, and while the audience was waiting for Mr. Voorhees, the time was spent in listening to an address by Judge Francis Scott, of Paterson. Mr. Scott spoke in support of the entire Republican ticket and for the principles of the party, and it was very interesting throughout. Just before Mr. Scott concluded his remarks, Mr. Voorhees entered the hall, and the crowd quickly gave evidence of the fact. Cheer after cheer was given, and the band played. When order was resumed the chairman introduced Mr. Voorhees as a man that always performed his duty whether anyone liked it or not. Mr. Voorhees then talked in part as follows:

"Mr. Chairman, I am very glad to be with you tonight and speak a few words in behalf of the Republican party and its principles. At the last convention of the Democratic party at Trenton a platform was adopted declaring for "home rule" and "equal taxation," and many other things, all of which reflect on the intelligence of the people of New Jersey. In 1893 the people of this State became tired of such home rule and voted for a change. Home rule, I may say, was established by the Republican party, and cannot be made an issue of this campaign. Regarding equal taxation the Republican party brought that about, and have adopted measures whereby a man's neighbor is taxed in equal proportion. The Democrats say that they want expensive commissions abolished. There is not today in this State one commission receiving a salary except in the case of clerk hire and for stenographers services. Don't the Democrats know the facts? They say let us go back to the old days when the Democrats were in power. I say Heaven save us from that.

"'Bob' Davis, of Hudson county; and the 'Duke of Gloucester,' delivered the votes of the delegates of the respective counties. Mr. Crane spent one year in the Assembly and simply followed the routine order of business. I have nothing to say against him, for I think my cause sufficiently just without it. He claims he voted for the labor bill, but every Republican did the same thing.

"The Democrats claim that the Republicans have been extravagant. This statement I refute. The people of New Jersey want their money spent honestly, and this the Republicans have done. We have Democratic evidence that the expenses of the State cannot be reduced. We are not coming so near bankruptcy as some would believe. During the past year the State was run on an amount of about $160,000 less than that required by the Democrats in one year. Have

LAND OF WILLIAM TELL

GARRET P. SERVISS DESCRIBES THE GREAT SWISS PATRIOT.

A Very Interesting Lectur, Finely Illustrated With Pictures of the Alps and Other Scenes in Switzerland.

Those who attended the illustrated lecture at the Casino last night spent a pleasant hour with Garret P. Serviss, of Brooklyn, and visited in imagination the land of the Alps and the birthplace of William Tell. The views thrown on the screens were among the best ever shown and depicted this land of the skies in all its entrancing beauty.

The lecture was the first of a series of three to be given at the Casino by Mr. Serviss during this month. Many of the views shown were taken by Mr. Serviss himself during tours through Switzerland. The snow-clad peak, Mt. Blanc, and the Matterhorn, fertile valleys perched near the top of high mountain ranges, the clear blue lakes of Luzerne and Geneva, little villages nestling close to the mountain's base, glaciers and even types of the natives were all shown as naturally as though the beholder stood upon some vantage ground and swept in the scene from nature itself.

"There is no spot in the world," said the lecturer, "like the country of the Alps, the land of William Tell. I believe in him as fully as I believe in the existence of the Rhine, and although scholars have tried to make us believe that Tell is a myth, and had no substantial part in the freeing of Switzerland, he represents too truly the aspirations of a people for freedom and its achievement to imagine him a creature of fable and story. We may as well set aside our Washington as the Swiss William Tell."

Tell was born about 600 years ago, when the power of Austria hung like a pall over the land, and the tyranical governors did their best to stir up the Swiss to revolt. Tell's stern upright character, his love of liberty and his refusal to acknowledge the Austrians' power were described.

SNEAK THIEVES AGAIN.

SECOND TIME THEY HAVE BROKEN INTO THE SAME HOUSE.

Hous; of B. R. Waldror, of Codington Avenue, Looted of a Quantity of Canned Fruit—Broke a Window

For the second time within a week thieves entered the home of B. R. Waldron, on Codington avenue. The second robbery occurred yesterday afternoon about 4 o'clock while the family was out. On the first occasion the thieves entered through an unlocked cellar door, but yesterday they broke a window and effected an entrance. The affair happened while all of the neignbors were at home, but still no trace of the thieves can be found.

They carried away with them a large quantity of canned fruit which the family had stored away in the cellar. It looks very much as though the parties are well acquainted in the neighborhood and especially at Mr. Waldron's home. When the first robbery occurred fruit was taken in addition to $8 in money. Mr. Waldron has an idea that he knows who the guilty parties are, and an effort will be made to catch them before long.

MERRY BOWLERS.

Netherwood Club Spent Hallow E'en in a Jolly Manner.

The Netherwood Bowling Club gave a Hallow E'en costume party at the Hunterston Hotel Tuesday evening. There were about thirty present and the costumes were very laughable and original. After bowling in the alleys part of the evening the club repaired to the hotel, which was thrown open to their disposal, where refreshments were served and a good time in general enjoyed. During the evening Ralph Davison took a flashlight picture of the party. Among those present were: Mrs. J. D. Wheeler, F. I. Smith, L. E. Eaton, Mrs. Barton, Mrs. C. Bellows, the Misses N. A. Wheeler, M. N. Wheeler, Alvord, Hand, Thorn, Andrews, Smith, Bostwick, and Messrs. Johnson, Wheeler, Mason, Hunter, Fancher, Henry, Morgan, Maidment, Bellows, Mosher, Eaton and Davison.

Corner Stone to be Laid.

Next Sunday the corner stone of the new Calvary Baptist church on Central avenue will be laid with imposing ceremonies. There will be visitors presents from all parts of the State and the music will be a feature of the occasion.

Trains Late Owing to Fog.

A large number of the early morning trains on the Central Railroad were late this morning on account of the heavy fog, and the ferry boats were also much delayed for the same reason.

A NEW SWEDISH CHURCH

ORGANIZED LAST NIGHT WITH REV. O. G. TINGLOF AS PASTOR.

Met in The Congregational Church—Address by Rev. C. L. Goodrich—A Charter Membership of Thirty Was Secured.

Since last July there has been a good work going on among the Swedish people of this city who have from time to time been holding religious meetings. Those who took the iniative in this movement have felt that there is room in Plainfield for a Swedish church, and their hopes are now soon to be realized. Last evening the Swedish Mission Society met in the Congregational church for the purpose of organizing themselves. The members extended a call to Rev. O. G. Tinglof, of Manchers, N. H., and the call was accepted. He was present last evening and was most cordially received by his people.

The exercises last evening were in charge of Rev. O. G. Norseen, of Perth Amboy, who has from time to time assisted the Plainfield Swedish people in their meetings. During the evening a short address was made by Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, in which he spoke words of encouragement to the new church and bid the members God speed. An additional feature of the programme was a vocal duet by Miss Swedeberg and Miss Ericksen.

The new church starts off with a membership of about thirty, and new members are constantly being received. Mr. Nord is the present chairman and treasurer of the society. The meetings will be held every Thursday evening in the Congregational church and Sunday evenings in the W. C. T. U. rooms. At present Pastor Tinglof is stopping on Spooner avenue, but he will soon bring his family here.

KNIFE USED IN A FIGHT.

TWO ITALIANS ENGAGED IN A DISPUTE ABOUT A BILL.

A Lively Argument on Somerset Street—Injured Man Made Complaint of Assault and Battery Before Judge Mattison.

John Lawrence, an Italian, appeared before Justice Mattison, of the borough, this morning and made a complaint against another Italian named "Tony" Marx, both of whom are employed by Patsy Christmas in repairing the trolley tracks. According to the story told by Lawrence, he owed Marx about $13 for board. The two men live at Scotch Plains, and a few days ago, he says, he gave $3 to Marx toward what he owed him.

This morning on Somerset street, near Greenbrook road, where the men are working on the trolley tracks, Lawrence and Marx engaged in a dispute. The latter wanted the money coming to him, and Lawrence said he would pay the sum as soon as he received it. This did not suit Marx and the two men were soon mixed up in a scuffle. Lawrence got the worst of it, for he had a bad cut in his forehead from which considerable blood was lost. He then appeared before Justice Mattison and made a complaint, charging assault and battery. A warrant was issued and is in the hands of a constable. It is likely that Marx will be found easily and arraigned before the Justice today to answer to the charge.

RESCUED IN NICK OF TIME.

Man Pulled From Under Moving Car in Time to Save His Life.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, Nov. 4—A narrow escape from instant death was witnessed last night at the station here, and had it not been for the prompt action of Harry Dodwell, the assistant baggagemaster, and Fred Wilcox, a Press carrier, a passenger who had alighted from the 5:32 train from New York must have been instantly killed.

When the train pulled in last night there were two passengers, a man and his wife, who wanted to get off at Dunellen. The brakemen were up at the forward end of the train, so there was no one to tell the couple they had arrived at their destination.

The man got off the train and peered around in the gloom, but could not find out that they had reached Dunellen until just as the train was pulling out. Then he called to his wife who still stood in the car and she jumped into his arms.

The shock knocked the man over and he rolled under the wheels of the moving train. The woman was safe. Dodwell and Wilcox saw the man's danger, and running to him drew him out from under the car just as the wheels grazed his head. The couple refused to give their names, but said they were going to visit relatives in New Market.

PENNY FOR EVERY YEAR

BIRTHDAY SOCIABLE HELD IN VINCENT CHAPEL.

Each Month Was Represented by an Appropriate Recitation and Children Were Dressed in Novel Costumes.

A birthday sociable was given in Vincent chapel last evening under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. E. church.

The programme opened with a vocal duet by the Misses Ethel and Mabel Jamison, accompanied by Miss Jessie Utter. The guests rose when their birth month was called and deposited little sacks containing the same number of pennies as they were years old. Earl Lynn, as a drummer boy, was February. Miss Edna Kennedy was all prepared for the showers of April. Fred Lynn represented July attired as a farmer. Miss Margarent Demarest, as August, appeared like a little summer fairy.

After a vocal solo by Miss Ethel Jamison, Miss Clyde Doane recited a November selection. Miss Lillian Snodgrass stood for November and Raymond Lyman for December. After another duet by the Misses Jamison, Miss Helen Whitney represented October in an appropriate manner. Miss Peck appeared for September and Miss Gertie Guier for June. May was not represented.

A piano duet by Miss Jessie Utter and Miss Biglow was followed by a pantomine for January. The story was read by Miss Susie Davies while Miss Bertha Jenkins took the part of the country belle and Clifford A. McGee as her awkward rustic swain. Miss Persis Snodgrass impersonated the vigilant mother of the fair maid.

The receipts of the little bags amounted to about $41.

The committee in charge of the entertainment consisted of Mrs. Charles H. Lyman, chairman, Mrs. J. R. Joy, Miss Bertha Whitney and Miss Susie Davies. The refreshment committee consisted of Mrs. C. H. Rugg, chairman, Miss Jackson and Miss Sharp.

IN THE WRONG COURT.

COMPTON VAIL RELEASED BY CITY JUDGE DEMEZA.

Larceny is Out of the Jurisdiction of the Local Police Court—Vail Was Rearrested on Warrant of Justice Newcorn.

Last Thursday, Compton Vail, of South Plainfield, was arrested on the charge of being disorderly and stealing milk bottles. The theft was charged by Patrolman Totten. Yesterday afternoon Vail was arraigned before City Judge DeMeza and the complaint dismissed. The City Judge said that it was out of the jurisdiction of the local police court and should come up before a Justice of the Peace. He released Vail who was immediately re-arrested on a warrant issued by Justice Newcorn, charged with petty larceny.

Vail was brought before Justice Newcorn and pleaded not guilty. His hearing was set down for next Thursday afternoon. He was represented at both courts by his counsel, William G. DeMeza.

MORE BICYCLES STOLEN.

Two Wheels Fall Into the Hands of Thieves.

The bicycle thief is operating again, and Tuesday night stole a Tacomo wheel belonging to Reginald Chandor, of East Fifth street, from in front of a house on LaGrande avenue, where the young man had stopped to call. The wheel disappeared about 6 o'clock. Chandor went into the house leaving the bicycle leaning against the curb, and when he came out five minutes later the wheel was gone. The theft was reported to the police.

Yesterday morning an Outing wheel owned by Thomas E. Currin, of 92 Summit avenue, teller in the First National Bank, was stolen from the entrance way to the offices above in the bank building. Mr. Currin had just ridden up to the entrance and left his bicycle outside a moment for the janitor to put it down cellar. When the janitor was ready to do so, the wheel was gone.

The object of the meeting was for the purpose of organizing a branch of the W. C. T. U. among the colored people, but as there were so few out no organization was effected. Another meeting will be held at an early date.

Grant Club Active.

Tomorrow evening there will be a meeting of the U. S. Grant Club, of the borough, and it is expected that several Republican speakers will be present, including the Somerset county Republican candidates.

AN ECHO OF HALLOW'EEN

SCOTCH PLAINS BOYS ACCUSED OF MALICIOUS MISCHIEF.

Arrested and Arraigned Before Judge Clark, But the Board of Education Had no Strong Evidence—Hearing Adjourned.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, Nov. 4.—Warrants were sworn out yesterday afternoon in Judge Clark's court for the arrest of John Alberts, Willie Trayno, Squier Reick, Albert MacCauley, John Rikerson, Lynus Walpole and Robert Jahn charged with breaking and entering the school building on Hallow'een night. The culprits were all ordered to appear before Judge Clark at 7:30 o'clock last night in Excelsior Hall.

When court opened the hall was nearly filled. The charge was read to the alleged offenders, as sworn to by Dr. F. W. Westcott, president of the Board of Education. The boys all pleaded not guilty. The first witness called for the Board was Prof. John R Morey who testified as to the condicion of the rooms and the general disorder of the building.

Eddie Heath was one of the witnesses who the board expected to give evidence that would place the guilt upon the youthful defendant, but he claimed to know nothing about the case.

Several persons were sworn, and no incriminating evidence had been given, but the Board had what was thought to be their star witness in reserve. This was Vanderbilt Raymond, who had given the story to the teachers Tuesday morning, and also gave the names of the boys arrested as being the guilty ones. To the amusement of all present he denied the whole affair, but but said later that he knew Willie Trayno was in the crowd.

The boys were then given a chance to testify in their own behalf. John Alberts, William Trayno, Squier Reick, John Rikerson, Robert Jahn and Lynus Walpole all agreed that they had attended the two serenades in town that evening, after which they all went to Walpole's and from there to their own homes. Albert MacCauley swore he was at home and had not been out that evening. Judge Clark immediately discharged him.

As the evidence was all conflicting, the Judge concluded to adjourn the case for two weeks when, if the Board cannot show a stronger case, the boys will be discarged. To some the whole affair seemed to be a farce, but the action of the Board will no doubt call a halt to the malicious mischief which has been going on in the town for some time.

AN INCORRIBIBLE YOUUH.

Willie Frey Will Probably be Sent to Reform School.

Willie Frey, the twelve-year-old son of Charles Frey, of Somerset street, seems to be incorrigible. Several times he has run away from home, and refused to come back until sent for by the police, and now his last caper is the alleged theft of about a dollar from his mother. The last time Willie ran away, his mother tried had to have him committed to the Reform School, but Judge Vail refused to do so. Willie was held for the grand jury this morning by Justice Nash, on a charge of petty larceny, and it is pretty certain this time that he will be sent away.

The alleged theft was committed yesterday. While Mrs. Frey was out Willie took about a dollar in change from her purse, and spent it. Mrs. Frey missed the money at once, and going before Justice Nash, had the warrant made out for his arrest. Councilman Flynn caught the lad this morning and locked up in a cell. He stoutly denied the charge.

Game Warden Tooker Indicted.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Paterson, November 4.—Game Warden Tooker, who shot Secundo Canova in the mountains, has been indicted for murder. Tooker has not been arranged yet. This will have to be done before Justice Dixon, who will come to Paterson for that purpose. Tooker claimed that Canova had dead robins in his pocket, and that when he ordered him to surrender the Italian aimed his shot gun at him, where upon Tooker pulled his revolver and fired.

A Lecture on the War.

A lecture will be given in Hope chapel on the evening of November 15th, on the subject "The Spanish-American War." E. O. MacFarland, of Newark, will give the lecture, which will be illustrated with stereopticon views, and will be given under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the chapel.

THEIR AIM IS TO AID POOR AND DESERVING.

Fifth Anniversary of the Organized Aid Association.

THE OFFICERS ELECTED.

COL. MASON W. TYLER WAS AGAIN CHOSEN PRESIDENT.

Facetious Remarks Made by the President About the Anniversary, Which He Likened Unto a Wooden Wedding Without a Bride—Eutertaining and Instructive Address Was Made.

One of the most successful societies ever organized in Plainfield, and one which has a very warm place in the hearts of benevolent Plainfielders, is the Organized Aid Association, which exercises a careful supervision over the city's charities. A deeply interested company gathered last night in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, to celebrate the fifth anniversary of the Association, and review the year's work.

Col. Mason W. Tyler, president of the association, presided over the meeting. The opening prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, the pastor of the First Baptist church, after which the president delivered his annual address. Mr. Tyler spoke of this occasion as the society's wooden wedding, but added that it might be difficult to discover the whereabouts of the bride. He spoke with gratitude of the work done during the past year, and was glad to report the finances of the association in good condition. He said that too much must not be expected of the society, as it was still young, and the field of work of scientific almsgiving was itself a new one. He described somewhat the work of the different committees, and referred to the large amount of work done which made no show and no stir in the world, but which accomplished an untold amount of good.

A vocal solo by William H. Holmes, accompanied by Howard Case, was the next thing on the programme. Mr. Tyler then announced that Rev. Dr. Amory H. Bradford, of Montclair, who was to have been the speaker of the evening, was unable to be present, on account of illness, but that his sister, Miss Cornelia Bradford, of Whittier House, Jersey City, the first social settlement in New Jersey, had consented to take his place. Miss Bradford is one of the most enthusiastic settlement workers in this country. As a speaker, she is easy, interesting, and bright, and her clever talk was much enjoyed. She directed the thoughts of her hearers along sociological lines. She spoke of the necessity of realizing that all men, high or low, are brothers, and using every effort for the uplifting and advancement of one's fellows. The influence of environment on heredity, the shamefully low wages paid to women employed in the manufacture of ready-made clothing, etc., the sin of employing women and girls in places in an improper sanitary condition, and of employing children who ought to be at school and at play, were some of the subjects which she touched on briefly. She believes in prevention of crime rather than rescue from a life of crime, where it is possible; she would educate the children and young people, to prevent their becoming criminals. Incidentally, Miss Bradford spoke of the work at Whittier House, and urged the help and interest of Plainfielders in the work there.

After another solo by Mr. Holmes the election of officers was held, resulting as follows: President, Mason W. Tyler; vice-presidents, Alexander Gilbert, Mrs. H. B. Opdyke, David H. Rowland; secretary, John Doull Miller; treasurer, J. Kirtland Myers. The reports of the treasurer and committees were not read, but will be published in pamphlet form at an early date.

Politics Too Attractive.

The political mass meeting at Music Hall was too much of an attraction for the temperance people last night, and instead of attending the business meeting of the Reform Club, they went there. At the business meeting nothing but routine business was transacted. The election of officers takes place next week. Owing to the small attendance the debate on the "Devil in the Bandbox," was postponed for another week. Remarks at last night's meeting were made by Messrs. Sayres, Armstrong and Markley.

THE PEACE CONFERENCE

Negotiations Not Likely to Break Off Immediately.

FRANCE WOULD MEDIATE

Spanish Commissioners Offended by Our Curtness. Senor Sagasta Likely to Continue to Direct Matters. Inconsistency of American Demands with the Protocol.

Paris, Nov. 4.—The reported rupture of the peace negotiations between Spain and the United States is not credited at the French foreign office. France willingly will serve as intermediary, in the hope of putting Spain under permanent and moral, as well as financial obligations, thus strengthening her own position in the European balance of power.

Paris and Brussels bankers are taking an active interest in the question of Spanish debts.

The American members probably will welcome a change in the Spanish side, as they are not a match in legal subtleness for Senor Montero Rios. Whether there is a rupture to-day or not Senor Sagasta is likely to continue to dictate the negotiations.

There is high authority for prognosticating the course of the first dispute over the American interpretation of the third article of the protocol and the claims upon the Philippines for war indemnity as inconsistent with the previous articles, and also with the original diplomatic correspondence through Messrs. Cambon and Patenotre.

Senor Sagasta will say that he considers that Porto Rico is a sufficient indemnity. In the second place, if nonsuited, he will proceed to put a value upon the Philippines far in excess of any possible war indemnity, on the ground that Germany and England, or even France, would offer terms higher than the Americans take as the basis of negotiations. He will plead that no Spanish ministry could live if they accepted the American terms.

As a third step he would resign office, leaving the negotiations to begin over again under a Conservative ministry.

Thus a speedy termination of the negotiations is not expected. The commissioners are renting apartments outside the hotel.

Madrid, Nov. 4.—The government has telegraphed to Senor Montero Rios, president of the Spanish peace commission at Paris, instructing the commission to maintain the rights of Spain against the pretension of the Americans of their right to keep the Philippines. This claim the government regards as a breach of the terms of the protocol, wherein the Americans agreed merely to occupy Manila until the treaty of peace was concluded.

Premier Sagasta has expressed his hope that the Americans will modify their demands allowing Spain some compensation in the event of their retaining the islands.

The Epoca says that the Americans are mistaken in their assumption that cession to another power of certain territory does not imply that power's recognition of the debts contracted by the territory ceded. All of the treaties concluded in Europe or America prove the contrary.

The American demands, the Epoca continues, are contrary to what the Spanish colonies did when they separated from the mother country.

HEART DISEASE.

SOME FACTS REGARDING THE RAPID INCREASE OF HEART TROUBLE.

Do Not be Alarmed, But Look For the Cause.

Heart troubles, at least among Americans, are certainly increasing and while this may be largely due to the excitement and worry of American business life, it is more often the result of weak stomachs, of poor digestion.

Real, organic heart disease is incurable; but not one case in a hundred of heart trouble is organic.

The close relation between heart trouble and poor digestion is because both organs are controlled by branches of the same great nerves, the Sympathetic and Pneumogastric.

In another way, also the heart is affected by that form of poor digestion, which causes gas and fermentation from half digested food; there is a feeling of oppression and heaviness in the chest caused by pressure of the distended stomach on the heart and lungs, interfering with their action; hence arises palpitation and short breath.

Poor digestion also poisons the blood, makes it thin and watery, which irritates and weakens the heart.

The most sensible treatment for heart trouble is to improve the digestion and to insure the prompt assimilation of food.

This can best be done by the regular use after meals, of some safe, pleasant and effective digestive preparation, like Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, which may be found at most drug stores and which contain valuable, harmless digestive elements in a pleasant, convenient form.

MUTINY OF COLORED TROOPS.

The Sixth Virginia Obeying White Officers.

Knoxville, Nov. 4.—There was considerable anxiety last night lest the mutiny in the Sixth Virginia which occurred yesterday morning, would break out again.

The Sixth Ohio, Thirty-first Michigan and First West Virginia retained ammunition in their guns and awaited orders all night.

Not a pass from the camps was given. There was no further trouble, however, and the negro regiment is drilling under the newly mustered in white officers without further signs of revolt.

The trouble grew out of the forced resignation of nine of the negro officers, who, it was claimed, were incompetent, and the appointment by Governor Tyler of Virginia of white officers from the Virginia regiments which were being mustered out, to take their places.

The regiment refused to drill when four of the white captains arrived; and for several hours were in open mutiny. Speeches were made by Colonel Kuert, now in command of the Second division, and other officers.

A negro major, C. B. Johnson, read the articles of war to the men, and induced them to return to their duties and await the result of a protest sent the governor.

The men finally were pacified and are now obeying the new officers. The feeling, however, is very ugly.

The Sixth Virginia is a short regiment. It consists of only eight companies, and is in command of Lieutenant Colonel Croxton, a white man. The only other white officer, before these new appointments were made, was the assistant surgeon.

THE PANAMA SAFE.

Arrival of the Transport at Havana This Morning.

Havana, Nov. 4.—The United States transposrt Panama, which sailed from Santiago last Monday, and for whose safety fears had been entertained, arrived here yesterday morning at nine o'clock and landed seven American passengers, including several military officers.

She left Havana at about ten a. m. her supposed destination being New York. It is reported that she has about four hundred persons, including a number of sick men, on board.

Washington, Nov. 4.—The published reports of the loss of the transport Panama caused much excitement at the war department and the navy department yesterday morning, and both were deluged with telegrams from relatives and friends of persons believed to be on the transport, begging for information.

Neither department then had any information, however, and each discredited the report, for the reason that a telegram was received from General Wood at Santiago about midnight the night before treating of purely business affairs, and saying nothing whatever of the rumored loss of the ship.

Colonel Bird of the war department, who has charge of transportation matters, said that the Panama was regarded as thoroughly seaworthy.

Indians Weary of War.

Chicago, Nov. 4.—"As an abstract proposition the Indians want no more fighting. They have had enough to last for some time in the Bear Lake campaign just over. However, the Indian character is such that we may never tell when he will take up his arms and wage a desultory warfare against local communities," said General John M. Bacon, the veteran Indian fighter, who commanded the United States troops in the recent Indian outbreak in Minnesota.

"I want to say one word," continued General Bacon, "about the so-called raw recruit.' Out of the seventy-seven men who were with me in the battle of October 5 fifty-eight were enlisted during the middle of last summer, but their conduct was admirable."

To Go Into Liquidation.

Chicago, Nov. 4.—The Bank of Commerce, a state bank, with $500,000 capital and $1,600,000 deposits, has voted to go into voluntary liquidation.

Its deposits and an equal amount of its bills receivable will be taken over by the Union National Bank.

The affairs of the Bank of Commerce will be wound up by its directors and the proceeds paid to its stockholders.

Farragut a Hummer.

San Francisco, Nov. 4.—The torpedo boat destroyer Farragut, on her trial trip had all but accomplished the requirements of the government when an air pump broke down. The requirements call for thirty knots.

For forty-two minutes the Farragut made 31.30 knots, or more than thirty-six miles an hour, when the break came.

Advance in the Price of Envelopes.

Chicago, Nov. 4.—Signs that the long threatened combination among the manufacturers of envelopes has become a fact, have reached the paper stationery trade in the shape of circulars quoting an advance averaging 25 per cent. in all grades of envelopes.

The trust is said to control 90 per cent. of the production.

Presidents Trip to Vote.

Washington, Nov. 4.—The president hopes to get away Monday night for Canton, to vote on Tuesday.

He has given up the idea of going to the camp at Lexington, Ky., and it is just possible that the situation in Paris may be such as to prevent his leaving Washington on Monday night.

Battleship Texas Returns.

New York, Nov. 4.—The battleship Texas returned from Philadelphia yesterday and anchored off Tompkinsville. She will go to the navy yard in Brooklyn for examination and repairs to the sleeve of her starboard propeller, which came in contact with a floating log in the Delaware.

Registration in Illinois.

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 4.—Tuesday was the last day for registration in Illinois outside of Chicago and dispatches from most of the one hundred and one counties outside of Cook indicate that about eighty-five per cent of the vote of 1896 which was 1,090,869, will be polled on Tuesday next.

PREPARING WARSHIPS

Britain's Activity in Naval and Military Lines Continues.

SHIPS COAL AT HONG KONG

Reported that the Powerful Has Been Ordered Ready for Sea. Gunboats of the Fleet in Chinese Waters to Rendezvous. Supplies of Fuel Bought in Philadelphia.

Hong Kong, Nov. 4.—Extraordinary activity has prevailed in naval and military circles here during the past few days, but no explanation for it is obtainable.

The British first class cruiser Powerful has just taken on board over two thousand tons of coal, and all the other British warships here are loading stores and ammunition.

It is reported that they have been ordered to be ready for sea immediately.

The British second class cruiser Bonaventure has been recalled from Manila, and arrived here last night. She is now coaling with all possible haste.

It is reported that the British gunboats have been ordered to rendezvous here.

At the navy yard the ordnance department is actively engaged in mounting siege guns.

Halifax, N. S., Nov. 4.—The crews of the warships in port, the Renown and Pelican, were ordered yesterday to clear ships for action.

The warships are now provisioned for a long voyage, provided with extra ammunition and have a full supply of coal.

The work was completed Wednesday night and yesterday their decks presented a warlike appearance.

Philadelphia, Nov. 4.—A morning paper publishes the following:

"The probability of a war between England and France received fresh impetus yesterday by the action of England in purchasing a large amount of American coal, for immediate delivery at her West Indian naval stations.

"In response to hurried cablegrams from London, ship brokers engaged in the West Indian trade spent the greater part of yesterday searching for tonnage suitable to transport the coal from Philadelphia and Newport News to points where it will be most convenient for English war craft to fill their bunkers. Sailing vessels from 1,000 to 2,000 tons capacity are particularly in demand.

"The first shipments are to be sent to Kingston, to be followed by vessels for Bermuda, St. Lucia, and Demerara, which are the principal ports in the West Indies subject to Great Britain. It is also proposed to discharge a part of the purchase at St. Thomas, a Danish island, where hulks will be used.

"It was reported yesterday that two British warships had been ordered here to undergo slight repairs, which under ordinary circumstances would have been made at either Halifax or the Bermuda islands."

Washington, Nov. 4.—The Chinese minister, Mr. Wu, discredits the report that Russia had taken the treaty port of Niu-Chwang.

Admiral Miller's Retirement.

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 4.—Rear Admiral J. N. Miller, who hoisted the flag over the Hawaiian islands, and proclaimed them a part of the United States, left this city yesterday, after a day's stay, for Springfield, Ohio, his boyhood home.

Admiral Miller will retire from service in the navy November 22. Before leaving, Admiral Miller said:

"I believe the Pacific station to be second in importance, if not the most important naval station we have. I am greatly gratified that the government has seen fit to send such two magnificent battleships as the Oregon and the Iowa to the Pacific station.

"One necessity shown by the war is that of having a large number of first class battleships, capable of sailing 18 miles an hour. We must have them and I think we will have them. We want more ships like the recently launched Illinois."

United States Consul at Berlin Dead.

Berlin, Nov. 4.—Julius Goldschmidt, United States consul general here, died last evening from heart disease.

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 4.—Julius Goldschmidt, late consul general at Berlin, was a Milwaukee manufacturer and a man of considerable influence among the German-Americans of the West.

He was appointed consul at Vienna by President Harrison.

After the second election of Grover Cleveland he returned to America to engage in business, and during the campaign of 1896 he managed the German literary bureau of the Republican national committee.

President McKinley appointed him to the Berlin post, but illness incapacitated him before he had been at the German capital very long.

Uneasy Over Bank of Germany.

London, Nov. 4.—There is an uneasy feeling on the Stock Exchange, in consequence of the showing made by the weekly return of the Bank of Germany, which indicates a decline of £1,137,000 in cash and an increase of 1,642,000 pounds in notes. It is thought that the demands to be met at the end of the year will affect other markets.

Nihilists Arrested

London, Nov. 4.—A dispatch from Berlin to the Daily News says that it is reported that a widespread revolutionary movement has been discovered in Russia.

The center of the movement is said to be at Lodz. More than 400 arrests have been made.

Appointed by the President.

Washington, Nov. 4.—The president has appointed John C. Cline to be collector of customs for the district of Los Angeles, Cal., and Philip Mullen (acting boatswain), to be a boatswain in the navy.

THE OCCUPATION OF CUBA.

A Brigade Under Gen. Carpenter to Go to Nuevitas About Nov. 22.

Washington, Nov. 4.—The war department has issued a general order for the movement to Cuba. The first troops will leave on or about November 22, and will comprise a brigade under Brigadier General Carpenter.

The brigade will be taken from the Seventh Army Corps, and one of the regiments will be the Third Georgia. The brigade will be sent to Nuevitas, Puerto Principe.

The order was issued only after very careful consideration of the reports of the military officers now in Cuba, and of the Hecker board and other expert commissioners who have been in the field.

The order looks to the occupation of two points to begin with, namely, Nuevitas and Puerto Principe, but the occupation will be extended as rapidly as the Spanish evacuation proceeds. The order directs the movement to begin at once, but according to the calculations of the department, it will be scarcely feasible to make the first landing before November 22.

The headquarters of the new corps, which has been created for the purpose of beginning the occupation, will be at Nuevitas under the command of General L. H. Carpenter. He is now in command of the cavalry brigade composed of the Sixth and Seventh cavalry, at Huntsville, Ala. The order is as follows:

The headquarters and six troops of the Eighth United States cavalry, and the Third Georgia volunteers will be at Nuevitas. Six troops of the Eighth United States cavalry, and the Fifteenth infantry are ordered to Puerto Principe. The regiments will be prepared for embarkation at once, and the subsistence department will arrange for the necessary rations. The command will be equipped and rationed for sixty days. The quartermaster general's department will furnish the necessary wagon transportation for use at their new stations. The surgeon general will make provision for hospital and medical supplies. Brigadier General L. H. Carpenter, United States volunteers, is assigned to command these troops, with headquarters at Nuevitas.

The cavalry brigade, composed of the Seventh and Eighth United States cavalry, is discontinued. The Seventh is assigned to the First Army Corps, and the Eighth to the Second Army Corps. The Fifteenth United States infantry is detached from the Fourth Army Corps and an infantry brigade created, composed of the Third Georgia volunteers and the Fifteenth United States infantry, and designated as the Second brigade, Third division, Second corps. The orders sending the Second brigade, third division, Second corps, to Athens, Georgia, have been revoked.

The Ownership of Anticosti.

Montreal, Nov. 4.—Joseph Chamberlain, secretary of state for the colonies, has telegraphed to the Dominion government asking for full particulars regarding the sale of the island of Anticosti to M. Menier, the French chocolate manufacturer.

The authorities at Ottawa have ordered the attorney general of the province of Quebec to make a full report of the sale, and also of the subsequent action of M. Menier regarding the eviction of settlers, and the report will be cabled at once to the British authorities.

It is feared here that it is the intention of the present proprietor to make the island a French colony, with the idea of its being subsequently ceded to France, and used as a base of supplies in case of an outbreak of hostilities between that county and Great Britain.

It is believed that the British government will order the cancellation of the sale.

Voting at Camp Meade.

Camp Meade, Middletown, Pa., Nov. 4.—The vote of the Two Hundred and Third New York regiment was taken yesterday, polls being opened from nine to four.

The regiment is isolated among the Conewago hills on account of an outbreak of typhoid fever after reaching here, and less than half of the command is on duty.

The rest of the men are in city hospitals or home on furloughs, so that a light vote is expected.

The other two New York regiments have voted.

Arrangements are being made to take the votes of the four Pennsylvania regiments next Tuesday.

Our Soldiers in Porto Rico.

Washington, Nov. 4.—In response to an inquiry, Secretary Alger has received from General Brooks a cable dispatch denying that there had been any bad behavior on the part of the United States volunteer soldiers in Porto Rico.

Washington, Nov. 4.—Brigadier General Charles F. Humphrey, quartermaster's department, has been ordered to Savannah, Ga., where he will superintend the embarkation of the Fifth cavalry, which is destined for Porto Rico.

Five Years for Counterfeiter.

Trenton, Nov. 4.—In the United States District Court here to-day Frank Siemeun, the Italion tailor of New York who was convicted yesterday of passing a $2 counterfeit bill in Jersey City, was sentenced by Judge Kirkpatrick to five years in Sttates Prison and to pay a fine of $1,000. This heavy sentence was imposed because Seiman is believed to be a member of a gang of counterfeiters who have been manufacturing and passing bogus currency on a wholesale scale.

Starch Works Burned.

New York, Nov. 4.—Four of the National Starch Company's buildings at Glen Cove, L. I., were destroyed by fire yesterday morning. The loss was estimated at one hundred thousand dollars.

Col. Amos Webster Dead.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 4.—Colonel Amos Webster, a member of General Grant's personal staff in the campaign around Richmond, died here yesterday after a sickness of some months' duration.

MARSH SURRENDERED

Man Who Wrecked the Keystone Bank Returns to Philadelphia.

V FUGITIVE SEVEN YEARS

At the Time of His Disappearance in 1891 Marsh was Under Three Indictments. He Forfeited Bailbond for $20,000 and His Bondsman Spent as Much More Trying to Find Him.

Philadelphia, Nov. 4.—Gideon W. Marsh, the fugitive president of the Keystone National Bank, which collapsed on March 20, 891, returned to the city yesterday after an absence of more than seven years, and surrendered himself to his bondsman, William H. Wanamaker.

The closing of the Keystone Bank created a tremendous sensation at the time, and the developments immediately subsequent thereto resulted in the sentencing to long terms of imprisonment of John Bardsley, then the city treasurer of Philadelphia, and Charles Lawrence, the cashier of the bank. Both have completed their sentences.

Marsh was at the time of his disappearance, May 15, 1891, under three indictments for violations of the banking laws.

Security in $20,000 had been entered by William H. Wanamaker for Mr. Marsh's appearance at court. Marsh fled from the city and Mr. Wanamaker was obliged to forfeit the amount of the bail, and it is asserted that he expended fully $20,000 more in an endeavor to ascertain the whereabouts of the fugitive.

Mr. Marsh informed Mr. Wanamaker that he went from here to Brazil, where he remained several years and then came back to the United States and located in the State of Washington, where he has been earning his living.

He came East a few days ago and spent Tuesday in New York city. He came to Philadelphia and went at once to William H. Wanamaker's office.

Marsh will probably be surrendered by Mr. Wanamaker to the United States Commissioner late this afternoon.

To Succeed Judge Van Wyck.

New York, Nov. 4.—Frederick A. Ward, a well known corporation lawyer down town, whose home is at No. 61 Remsen street, Brooklyn, has been appointed to succeed Judge Augustus Van Wyck on the supreme court bench in the Second district by Governor Black.

Mr. Ward, who is a candidate for the supreme court judgeship on the Republican ticket in the Second district, which comprises King's county, running with Jesse Johnson, will fill out Judge an Wyck's unexpired term, serving until January 1 next.

If elected, he will continue in the same position for a full term.

The place on the bench has been made vacant since Judge Van Wyck resigned to accept the nomination for governor of the state, offered to him by the Democratic party.

Mr. Ward is well known in Brooklyn politics as an active Republican. His office in this city is at No. 31 Nassau street.

Gen. Graham's Illness.

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov.3.—Gen. W. M. Graham, who retired yesterday as commander of the 2d Army Corps at Camp Mead, was taken ill at the Commonwealth Hotel in this city last night, and it was feared that he was suffering from camp fever. This morning, however, he has sufficiently recovered to proceed to Fort Hamilton, N. Y., where he will join his family. He was accompanied by Lieut. Somerall, his personal aide. Gen. Graham's annual report has been forwarded to the War Department.

The War Investigating Board arrived at Camp Mead at 2 o'clock to-day, and will remain until Friday. Gen. Young will tender the members of the board a review of the corps to-morrow.

The 203d New York Regiment voted to-day, and Roosevelt will get a large majority in this command.

Steamer Burned at Wharf.

The railway freight sheds, filled with Canadian and American goods, were also destroyed.

The Pacific was valued at $65,000 and was insured for $25,000.

The loss from the burning of the freight sheds will be very heavy.

The steamer was operated between Collingwood and Sault Ste. Marie, stopping at way points.

Lower State Receipts;

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 4.—State Treasurer Colvin has compiled the financial statistics of the fiscal year ending September 30, 1898. A balance of $3,974,-320.45 is shown.

The receipts of the year were $30,-488,406.50, as compared with $32,678,112.09 for the previous year.

Expenditures were $33,757,981.36, as compared with $30,364,254.21.

The balance on September 30, 1897, was $7,243,904.31.

Schooner Burned at Sea.

Boston, Nov.4.—Pilot boat Hesper, No. 5, reports that on Sunday, when she was eighty miles east by south from Boston Light, a burning schooner was sighted, but she sank before she could be reached. No signs of life could be found. It is supposed that the vessel was the James E. Woodhouse, from Hillsdoro, N. B., for New York, whose crew was rescued and landed at New York yesterday.

Evacuation of Crete.

Canea, Nov. 4.—The Turkish Governor of Crete has informed the foreign admirals that he has been instructed to comply with the demands of the Powers for the withdrawal of the Turkish troops. The last of Ottoman troops to embark will be a force of 550 soldiers, who will remain in the island provisionally to assist in the shipment of war material

FASHODA DISPUTE NEARLY ENDED.

England Issues an Official Note Announcing the Situation.

London, Nov. 4.—An official note issued yesterday says:

There is now good reason to hope that the political situation is ameliorating. It can be confidently stated that when the cause of the irritation which unfortunately recently existed in France and Great Britain on the upper Nile is removed, which is expected soon to be the case, the door will again be open for a resumption of those friendly negotiations which happily characterize the normal state of the relations between the two countries.

Cairo, Nov. 4.—Major Marchand, the commander of the French expedition at Fashoda, arrived here at 7 o'clock last evening. He was met at the railroad station by the French officials and residents. The explorer looked thin and worried.

Directly the major appeared at the door of the train the spectators rushed forward, waving hats, sticks and handkerchiefs and crying "Vive Marchand!"

The latter, who was much pleased and touched at the reception accorded him, drove off to the French diplomatic agency amid more cheering.

The French officer, who is short, slight, active and bronzed, was dressed in civilian clothes.

THE WAR INVESTIGATION.

Surgeon Hartsuff Criticises the Chickamauga Camp.

Washington, Nov. 4.—Dr. A. Hartsuff, who was the chief surgeon of the army at Camp Thomas, Chickamauga Park, from April 21 until July 27 last, was examined yesterday by Colonel Denby of the war investigating commission concerning the conduct of the camp from a medical point of view.

He criticised various features in the management of the camp and said the sites were selected by General Brooke, and that notwithstanding his own position as chief medical officer, he had not been consulted in regard to the location.

He had made a formal protest at the time, but the protest was not heeded.

"Do you," asked Colonel Denby, "think the establishment of division hospitals a bad policy?"

"Very bad as done," responded the witness.

"Couldn't you, as chief medical officer, have controlled the matter?" he was next asked.

"No, sir; it was an order of the secretary of war, and under this order no regimental hospital could be maintained."

He thought this order unfortunate that in carrying it into effect the work of caring for the sick was greatly interfered with and that no one was benefitted by it.

Proctor on the Philippines.

Montpelier, t., Nov. 4.—United States Senator Proctor, who arrived here yesterday after a trip abroad, addressed the joint assembly of the House and Senate, which last month re-elected him. The senator said:

"The future policy of this country is the greatest question before our people.

"Hawaii and Porto Rico have been added to the nation's dominion and we have become sponsors for the good government of Cuba. We must assume some responsibility in the far East, whether it be greater or less. In my opinion the responsibilities in the far East are bound to be greater.

"Many wise and patriotic men in the country believe we should retain no territory nor control no part of the Philippine islands, beyond a coaling station or possib y a single island. I recognize the cogency of their argument, but have failed to see clearly any practical way of carrying out their views. If any jurisdiction is assumed in the East there is no logical stopping place short of the whole Philippines. Since that May morning when the Spanish fleet was destroyed it has seemed to me practically settled that Spain must surrender her entire control of the Philippines."

Pittsburg Strikers Weakening.

Pittsburg, Nov. 4—The first break in the ranks of the Window Glass Workers' Association occured last midnight, when, in open defiance of the explicit orders of President Simon Burns, a large number of the blowers and gatherers started to work at several of the plants of the American Glass Company.

The D. O. Cunningham Glass Company started its large plant on South Twenty-first street at midnight almost in full force. The Twenty-sixth street factory was started this morning. A detail of police was on hand to preserve order among the 200 or more workmen who had gathered about the plant.

Telegrams received to-day from Gas City, Dunkirk, Red Key, Ind., Barnesville, Frankfort, Ind., Kane, Pa., Bellevernon, Pa., New Lansington, Pa., and Brighton, N. J., reported that the news of the Pittsburg break had been received, and, consequently, many men would go to work in those towns.

The Havana Bank.

New York, Nov. 4.—The North American Trust Company of this city is apparently determined to solve the branch bank question without waiting for congressional action.

It has given notice that the Havana Bank, owned by it, will be opened for business on Monday next, the 7th inst., at No. 85 Habana street, under the immediate management of S. M. Jarvis, vice president of the trust company, who will also supervise the operations of the company's bank at Santiago, established in August last at that place.

Brooklyn Man Takes Prize.

Ithaca, Nov. 4.—The fellowship in architecture at Cornell University for this year has been awarded to W. H. Dole of Brooklyn, a graduate of the class of '94.

The fellowship is valued at $2,000, and entitles the holder to two years' study in Europe. It was established by the board of trustees of Cornell last year.

Gen. Lee's Mother Dead.

Mr. Murray's Position.

In reference to the recent criticisms made by Lawyer Winfield S. Angleman on Assemblyman Roger F. Murray's new tally sheet. Mr. Murray stated his side of the question to a Press reporter this morning. A tally sheet similar to Mr. Murray's will be used November 8th in the counties of Cumberland, Morris, Bergen and in the city of Newark. Mr. Murray did not see why Plainfield could not take advantage of this short method as well. His main object in getting up the tally sheet was to save labor and time for the members of the election boards.

The election boards of Newark use this short method, Mr. Murray said, and their returns have not and will not be questioned. If the tally sheet is not legal, Mr. Murray said, the only thing that the Courts can do is to order a recount. So confident is he that it will not be done, however, that he declared that he would gladly pay the local election boards personally if the recount should be ordered.

The New Jersey editor of the New York Tribune is the blindest partisan that the Republican party has working for its interests in this State. Editor Martin has the Smithophobia in its most acute stages, as witness the following from today's Tribune concerning the organization of the Plainfield Democrats:

This association was formed to purify and reorganize the Democratic party in Plainfield, but "Jim" Smith cracked his whip over the heads of the impudent Democrats who dared to think for themselves and gave them a few cuts about the shins, and the dear little fellows became as meek as lambs and obediently passed a resolution pledging "our constant and honest efforts for the election of all regularly nominated candidates of the Democratic party," and especially indorsing the candidacy of Elvin W. Crane.

Law students who served in the late war will have the privilege of having the time they were soldiers applied to the time they must devote to their studies before being permitted to come up for examination for admission to the bar. There is no one in Plainfield to whom this rule will apply, but that doesn't mean that there are no brave law students here. The nerve that some of the law students display in the local Justices' courts is sufficient to relieve them of any charge of being fearful to meet a Spaniard on the battle field.

AFRICA A BATTLE GROUND.

Prophets of a great war in the closing hours of the Nineteenth Century are looking to Africa for their confirmation. With England and France in a belligerent attitude toward each other over the claims of Major Marchand at Fashoda, and General Joubert of "Oom Paul's" army fighting the hordes of Chief Opefu in the Transvaal, the situation is ominous.

According to the annual report of the State Board of Education the total number of pupils enrolled in the State is 304,680, there being 2,000 more boys than girls. The average daily attendance was 200,278. There are 1,850 school houses. The total number of male teachers is 834, an increase of 30 over the preceding year, and the female teachers number 5,442. The average monthly salary paid to the male teachers was $68.82 and to the female teachers $49.72, an increase of $4 43 in the salary of males and $1.53 in that of females.

Congressman Fowler stated yesterday, during his visit to this city, that he would be very much disappointed if Voorhees did not carry Union county by 5,000. After his meeting with a certain well-known Republican on Front street yesterday afternoon the Congressman did not attempt to predict what his own majority would be in Plainfield. The Congressman certainly did receive the cold shoulder, and for the moment must have felt like a thirty-cent piece.

Even if Charles Codding, of Westfield—he of the pure white smile—chairman of the county Republican executive committee, can't run for office, he can make optomistic predictions of election results for the G.O.P. Yesterday Mr. Codding came out with a prediction that Judge Cross would receive 2,200 majority and the Assembly candidates 2,000. Of course, he thinks Voorhees will sweep the State.

The Newark Advertiser is today the fairest Republican paper in New Jersey. There is nothing hide-bound in the Advertiser's position and it does not stoop to the low tricks that many other partisan sheets are guilty of. Even in a political adversary the Advertiser can sometimes see a good quality.

Chas. S. Foote, of Putnam avenue, is mentioned as the Republican candidate for the Common Council in the Second ward. Mr. Foote has been a resident of this city for many years, is a prominent New York lawyer and has many friends endorsing him for the position.

"Farmer Orator" James E. Martine stirred up the Democrats of Somerset county in Somerville last night. Mr. Martine is very enthusiastic about the chances for a Democratic victory.

Six hundred claims for pensions have been filled at Washington as a result of the Spanish American war. There are more to come, though.

Justice Lippincott has decided that because a man voted at the last election he does not necessarily have a legal residence in the State.

Yesterday was Republican day, today is Democratic day and next Tuesday is—well, we will wait and see.

Democratic mass meeting tonight.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

"The Sunshine of Paradise Alley," the beautiful idyl of life among the lowly of New York's East Side, which was one of the very few genuine successes in an otherwise disastrous theatrical season in New York two years ago, and which will be presented at Music Hall next Monday night for the first time in our city, is the work of Denman Thompson, our old friend of "Old Homestead" fame. It is illustrated by a car load of special and magnificent scenery, a wealth of electrical effects, and a number of mechanical devices, and will prove a glorous spectacle for the eye as well as a good intellectual treat. In the cast are twenty selected players, the famous Boston Verdi Ladies Quartette, and the Acme Male Quartette.

• • • •

A cast of metropolitan players will appear at Stillman Music Hall tomorrow in the latest and best of farce comedies, entitled "Where is Benson?" The comedy is one of the funniest ever seen here and is interpreted by actors who are such in the highest sense of the term. No one who witnesses the production will regret, for we are assured it will give unqualified approval. The comedy is a satire on theosophy and has to do with a Mahatma who in the midst of his experiments gets the soul of Dr. Benson into the body of Henry Harkins. The complication that ensues must be seen to be appreciated and it will be too bad if theatre goers allow such a splendid organization to pass uanoticed. Frank Blair, a comedian known all over the country, plays the leading part.

Nicaragua Canal Grant.

New York, Nov. 4.—There was a directors' meeting at 1 p. m., yesterday, at the offices of the Maritime Canal Company, No. 56 Broad street, and the attitude of the government toward the rival Nicaragua Canal companies was discussed.

The most interest was felt in the news that Secretary Hay had cabled instructions to Minister Merry, in Nicaragua, to lodge remonstrances through Consul Donaldson at Managua, with the Nicaraguan government against the concession to the Grace syndicate.

The opinion was freely expressed that the Grace syndicate had been organized, now that the construction of the canal seems certain, to secure the concession and sell it at its own terms to the Maritime Company.

Those present at the meeting were Messrs. Hiram Hitchcock, president; Judge Henry E. Howland, James Roosevelt, Alexander T. Mason, Samuel E. Kilmer, Horace L. Hotchkiss, Robert Sturgis and Thomas P. Atkins.

A Fight Over a Negro Prisoner.

Augusta, Ga., Nov. 4.—Yesterday a negro named William Robinson was arrested for attempted assault upon Miss Minnie Walker and confined in the jail. During the night about five hundred men, including a number of soldiers in camp here, marched to the jail, in which twenty policemen had been stationed and demanded the surrender of the negro.

Upon being told by Collins, the jailer, that the jail would be defended, one of the party shot at a policeman who held a lantern. A general firing then followed.

William Moore, a volunteer soldier on furlough, was shot through the head and will die. When he fell the attack was abandoned. None of the policemen was injured.

Transports from Manila.

Question of Transportation.

A story is told of a prompt and witty retort made by an Irish drover to a remark of the present solicitor general, Sir Robert Finlay, Q. C., M. P. Once, when in Ireland, Sir Robert—when Mr. Finlay—met a drover proceeding with a number of cattle to a fair in the South.

"Where are you going to?" asked the eminent barrister.

"To Waterford fair, yer hanner."

"Indeed? And how much do you expect to get for your beasts?" asked the Q. C.

"Sure, an' av I get eight pounds the head I shall not do badly," replied Pat.

"Ah, that's a sample of your country," said Sir Robert. "Now take these heifers to England and you average fourteen pound a head."

"Just so, yer hanner," said Pat, promptly, "and av yez were to take the Lakes of Killarney to purgatory yez would get a guinea a dhrop."

MAKING IT PLAIN.

Values crowd each other as the season advances; they clamor for a place in print; perhaps one in twenty gets it. Last month we broke a record, and the next 'twill be the same. We own the goods to do it with; we have the nerve to cut prices right through every department, not on half-a-dozen articles for baits, but every dollar's worth of goods in the store. It means much to you from a money-saving standpoint.

PRICE BREAKS

In Silks among the manufacturers means Price Breaks here; you get the full benefit of it, and it means much. Over one thousand yards of Handsome Silks that were $1 to $1.75 the yard will go for 79c yd.

DRESS GOODS

We have too many of certain lots, a backward season is to blame for it, and when the values remain the same the prices are badly twisted. About 100 pieces of Skirt and Waist Lengths, were 40, 50 and 75c yd, now 25c yd. Fifty pieces of Fancies, were 50 and 75c yd, now 29c yd. Twenty-five pieces of Imported Novelties, were 75c yd, now 49c.

WHITE QUILTS.

About one hundred of them manufacturers samples, full size, handsome quilts, staple as wheat, but they go to you at half value—were $1.25 to $3, now 69c to $1.75.

Frock for Little Girl.

The little girl in the illustration is wearing an artistic frock of dull blue style of a yoke frock and yet is suited to an older girl. The rounded yoke is prettily guaged, and the skirt—being first tucked all around to the depth of about three inches—is then gathered into it. This has a far neater appearance than has the full yoke effect, and is more like a Dutch dress with its short waisted bodice. The skirt has a deep hem and three tucks around the bottom. Tucks again appear at the wrists, for the sleeves, instead of being gathered into a cuff, are tucked to form one. This charming design could also be carried out in richer material for a child's "best frock."

Styles for the Hair.

In France fashion says now that one may wear one's hair in any style liked except the pompadour; the pompadour is out of favor now with well-dressed women. To take its place there are several styles, and perhaps fashion is about equally divided between a high coiffure, with a bunch of curls over the forehead, and a parting with the waved hair arranged flat on top and puffed out on each side. The first style approaches that adopted so many years ago by the Princess of Wales, but the curls are looser and more irregular, and, it is needless to say, not kept in place by a hair net. The second style is much the prettier, and if carried a bit further would suggest the classical. The curious part of this change of style in hair-dressing is the total dissimilarity in the two fashions in vogue. Some women who wear the bunch of curls on the forehead are making an irregular parting in it a trifle to one side; this adds a youthful look to many faces.

Substitutes for Tea.

Of course, everyone is aware that under the name of "tea" we often drink a beverage which has no acquaintance with the real leaf. But there are several "teas" which are not fraudulent manufactures, though they are not made of tea-leaves.

In Mauritius, for instance, they make tea of the leaves of an orchid. In Peru they drink mate, a tea made from a native species of holly. The Abyssinians make a tea from the leaves of the catha edulis, which has such stimulating qualities that even a leaf or two of it chewed has all the reviving effects of "the cup that cheers," and thus is most valuable to travellers. The Tasmanians are said to be the happy possessors of no less than a hundred substitutes for tea; while the Tonkinese have teas of their own made of berries, leaves, woods, and bark of trees. In Sumatra coffee leaves are infused in the tea-pot, and the result is said to be an excellent beverage.

Shawl-Shaped Capes.

For elderly women are some new shawl-shaped capes, almost as long as a shawl proper, formed very much like the newest fur capes. These are made variously of corded silk, plain satin, or brocade, and are trimmed with a deep graduated ruffle of the same, or with rather wide lace. These capes add greatly to the beauty and effect of a black costume, and although only silk-lined, have considerable warmth, without being heavy. These wraps have not yet been generally displayed in the shops, but leading modistes are making them up, after designs obtained from importers of French patterns, or from models they have themselves brought from the other side.

Husbands and wives travelling together in Norway pay only a fare and a half on the railways, and in Austria and Hungary this is also the case. In the latter countries a child under six years of age travelling with an adult is not charged for, while considerable reduction in the fare is made for children of a family, according to their ages and to the number travelling.

The highest masts of sailing vessels are from one hundred and sixty to one hundred and eighty feet high, and spread from sixty thousand to one hundred thousand square feet of canvas

A Cannibal Plant.

There has been discovered in Nicaragua a flesh-eating, or rather man-eating, plant, which for horror is quite the equal of the novelist's imagination. This plant is found, it is asserted, in Nicaragua, and is called by the natives "the devil's snare."

It appears that a Mr. D——, a naturalist, has lately returned from Central America, where he spent two years in the study of the plants and animals of those regions. In one of the swamps which surround the great Nicaragua Lake he discovered the singular growth of which we are writing.

He was engaged in hunting for botanical and entomological specimens, when he heard his dog cry out, as if in agony, from a distance. Running to the spot whence the animal's cries came, Mr. D—— found him enveloped in a perfect network of what seemed to be a fine, rope-like tissue of roots and fibres. The plant or vine seemed composed entirely of bare, interlacing stems, resembling, more than anything else, the branches of the weeping willow denuded of its foliage, but of a dark, nearly black hue, and covered with a thick, viscid gum that exuded from the pores.

Drawing his knife Mr. D—— attempted to cut the poor beast free; but it was with the very greatest difficulty that he managed to sever the fleshy muscular fibres of the plant. When the dog was extricated from the coils of the plant Mr. D—— saw, to his horror and amazement, that the dog's body was blood-stained, "while the skin appeared to have been actually sucked or puckered in spots," and the animal staggered as if from exhaustion. In cutting the vine the twigs curled like living, sinuous fingers about Mr. D——'s hand, and it required no slight force to free the member from its clinging grasp, which left the flesh red and blistered.

Six Months in a Bath.

Life in a bath must be somewhat monotonous, but it is quite common in the best of our modern hospitals. At first it was tried only in a few absolutely hopeless cases, but the results were so satisfactory that various forms of disease are now systematically treated by continuous immersion in water.

Some time ago, for instance, a young girl was dying from a complication of terrible diseases. She was a mere shadow, and nothing but death was before her under ordinary treatment. But an ingenius doctor placed her on a sheet and sank her into a warm bath so that only her head remained above water. The bath was kept constantly warm, and in it she ate, drank, and slept for 183 days and nights. At the end of the time she stepped out fat and strong.

In skin diseases the continuous bath is invaluable, for it can be medicated. And many hopeless cases of burning have been successfully treated in this extraordinary way.

Army Cat Doomed.

Lovers of puss will learn with regret that the German Army cat is doomed. For some time past the Kaiser's military establishment has included a regularly organized corps of cats, whose function it is to protect the military stores from mice. These cats are trained in their duties by the inevitable drill-sergeant. They wear badges and receive rations and medical attendance. Now the announcement is officially made that this corps is to be disbanded, inasmuch as Professor Loeffler has discovered a species of typhus bacillus which is fatal to mice, and whose services will, in consequence, be substituted for those of the cats.

One can easily imagine the military Tom, after passing the physical examination and being mustered in, donning his badge and reporting for duty, and drawing his daily rations of milk and cat's meat. What puzzles one is what food the typhus bacillus will consume and whether it will wear a badge.

Natty Short Jackets.

The Eton and zouave jackets continue to appear en suite with very many of the autumn costumes, and an unusally pretty style has the skirt very much gored, and opening at the sides of the top of the front breadth after the fashion of the bicycle suits. Odd colors are combined in these costumes; blues are lined and faced with green and heliotrope; browns have military red or yellow vests, etc., and although there are only glimpses to be seen between button-trimmed straps, slashed fronts, folds, and the like, these glimpses give a touch of color which renders the gown smart or otherwise.

Strange Dishes.

Horseflesh, assflesh and muleflesh are now eaten in such large quantities in France that the regular butchers who deal in beef and mutton are getting uneasy. In the dingy restaurants frequented by the lower orders of Rome, Florence, and Naples, they go one better. There, a dish composed of the harmless wood serpent's flesh is regarded as something of a dainty.

Braid Popular for Trimming.

Mohair braid in various widths and buttons of graded size trim the skirts and bodices of rough dress fabrics, and silk braid and small tailor buttons ornament the costumes made of finer weaves of wool and silk and wool materials.

Never enter a sick-room in a state of perspiration, as the moment you become cool your pores absorb any infection that may be there. Do not approach contagious diseases with an empty stomach, nor sit between the sick and the fire, because the heat attracts the vapour.

HOW HE WAS DUPED.

The messengers of a certain European State who travel to and from the adjoining capitals may easily be recognized by the red wallets they carry, emblazoned with the arms of the state in gold. The agents of the great powers travel in the most unostentatious style, and would be very fearful of carrying any important State papers in a blazing red wallet. The State of which we speak being an unimportant one, its little army is decked out in the most gorgeous uniform—by the way, the pockets of the uniform are always empty; but that is another matter—and similarly the usual Government papers are of so trivial a nature that it would matter just as little whether they went through the ordinary post or whether they were heralded by a brass band. On one occasion, however, it did happen to matter, and the bearer of the conspicuous red wallet came unmistakably to grief, and is at the present moment the owner of an obscure cafe in London; and who can tell—but to our story.

The messenger, who was then a younger and not so wise a man as he is now, had gaily completed three-quarters of his journey, and had arrived at Buda-Pesth in the best possible spirits, and in the knowledge that his task was nearly completed. His wallet had never left his sight from the moment he started until now. He was in a fair way to fortune.

If there is anything more than another calculated to make a young man on the Continent lose his head it is the sight of a young and beautiful Englishwoman. But to travel alone with the most charming woman he had ever seen put the young courier in a tremor from head to foot.

He sat in his corner of the railway carriage and contemplated her as calmly as he could. She certainly was most ravishing, with that delicate pink and white complexion and clear blue eyes. She was English, there was no doubt about that. The dirty white labels with Charing Cross printed on them on her black dressing trunk that lay beside his red wallet proclaimed her such. But she had not deigned yet to give him even so much as a look. She unwound the fur that encircled her neck and displayed the charms of the whitest and most symmetrical throat he had ever seen. Her hand, too, when she removed her glove, was sparkling with gems that made the young man the more desirous to find out who she could be.

His mental endeavors to find some sort of excuse to speak to her remained unsolved. At last the train stopped. An official thrust his head into the window and asked if madame had not ordered tea, to which she replied in French that she wished to have it brought to her. Here was the young courier's opportunity, which he embraced in an instant. She gave him the sweetest of smiles, and he rushed off to get the English beverage.

Had he seen the action of the lady during his absence his heart would have stood still. Quick as a cat she touched a spring in her black trunk, which opened in a second. Thrusting the luckless courier's red wallet into it she drew out another so exactly alike in appearance that when he returned, accompanied by a servant carrying tea on a tray, he glanced at the sham red wallet and believed it to be his own.

Could greater fortune have befallen him? he thought, as he sat and sipped the tea from the cup which she graciously handed him, while she looked the picture of loveliness as she musically laughed and chatted with him, now that the ice was broken. Never had eyes looked so deeply violet, nor lips so perfect of shape and hue. Hours passed as minutes—it is ever so in the fool's paradise, but after all who shall say that the fool's is not the paradise of paradises? The wise man is too wise to have one.

The English lady proved to be the daughter of Lord Trathan, and the delighted courier kissed the card his fair companion gave him (it was the way of couriers in those days) when she parted company with him at Vienna. Alas, poor young man, how was he to know that Lord Trathan was unmarried, and that his fellow-traveller was none other than La Belle Pucelle, alias Madam Kratov, alias the Countess de Varnac, and the bearer of I don't know how many more sham titles, one of the astutest secret service agents in Europe.

The treaty he had carried was on its way to Paris when he presented himself at the Foreign Office at Vienna. The Austrian Minister looked at first very grave and then flew into a violent rage, asking the astounded courier the meaning of the sham treaty which he thrust into his trembling hands. There was a fine scene, and the poor wretch was not sorry to take his leave, although when he stepped out of the salon he was a ruined man.

The little State still sends its couriers to and fro with red wallets, and the proprietor of the little cafe near Regent street, London, dare not, even if he would, return to his native country, where a dozen of those toy soldiers would be drawn up in a line, and he would be shot as a traitor to his country. But then everybody does not know the story of the beautiful English lady with the blue eyes and white.—Golden Penny.

"Say, I'm paying this war tax without a blessed grumble."

"Why so cheerful?"

"You know that typewriter who talks all the time?"

"Yes."

"Well, I keep her licking stamps all day long."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Sachsen.

Dresden. Zwei Radfahrer wurden von einem Geschirr, dessen Pferde wild geworden waren, so unglücklich überfahren, daß der eine seinen Verletzungen sofort erlag, und der andere voraussichtlich stets ein Krüppel bleiben wird. Ein dritter Radfahrer wurde von dem Geschirr in den Straßengraben geschleudert und kam unverletzt davon.—Die hiesige Polizei hat einen von der Staatsanwaltschaft in Memmingen wegen eines in Rottenbach verübten Raubes gesuchten Gärtner Johann Georg Adler verhaftet. Auch seine Geliebte, Therese Brummer, wurde festgenommen.

Bautzen. Die Behauptung eines Berliner Blattes, daß man im hiesigen evangelisch-lutherischen Lehrerseminar Haussuchung gehalten, bei verschiedenen Seminaristen zahlreiche sozialdemokratische Schriften gefunden und einige besonders rothe Seminaristen bereits relegirt habe, ist nach einer öffentlichen Erklärung des Direktors der Lehranstalt, Schulraths Müller, von Anfang bis zu Ende unwahr.

Chemnitz. Der aus seinem Amte in Rochlitz kürzlich disziplinarisch entlassene Superintendent Merbach wurde vom hiesigen Gericht zu 1 Jahr 9 Monaten Gefängniß verurtheilt. Der Mann hat, um Schulden zu decken, die zum Theil noch aus der Studentenzeit herrührten, in der er unter den Kommilitonen „eine hervorragende Rolle" spielte, sowohl Amts- wie Mündelgelder in der Gesammthöhe von einigen Tausend Mark unterschlagen.

Zittau. Die städtische Behörde hat den Direktor der Naturheilbadeanstalt Fischer aus Sachsen ausgewiesen. Ein Grund für diese Maßregel ist nicht angegeben, doch vermuthet man, daß die Ausweisung nicht auf politische Ursachen, sondern auf die gewerbliche Thätigkeit desselben zurückzuführen ist.

Zwickau. Rechtsanwalt Schraps hier hatte in einer Prozeßsache eine hiesige Einwohnerin zur Vollziehung einer Urkunde über einige Hundert Mark zu bewegen gesucht, und ist deshalb vom hiesigen Landgericht wegen versuchter Erpressung zu sechs Monaten Gefängniß und drei Jahren Ehrenrechtsverlust verurtheilt worden.

Voß den Bau eines Passagier- und Frachtdampfers für ihre Linie Hamburg-New York abgeschlossen, welcher in seinen Größenverhältnissen die „Pennsylvania" und „Pretoria" noch wesentlich übertreffen und insofern einen ganz neuen Schiffstyp darstellen wird, als durch besondere Einrichtungen für die Sicherheit und Bequemlichkeit der Passagiere in bisher noch nicht erreichtem Maße gesorgt sein wird. Der neue Dampfer erhält eine Länge von 600 Fuß, bei einer Breite von 66 und einer Tiefe von 42 Fuß. Die Ablieferung soll im Frühjahr 1900 erfolgen.

Bremen. Die Deutsche Dampfschifffahrts-Gesellschaft „Hansa" in Bremen wird binnen Kurzem ihren bisherigen direkten 14tägigen Linien nach Bombay-Karachi und Colombo-Madras-Calcutta auch noch eine direkte, vorläufig monatliche Linie von Hamburg-Bremen und Antwerpen nach Rangoon hinzufügen. Den deutschen Exporteuren eröffnet sich hierdurch die Möglichkeit, hinfort die unbequeme Verladung via Liverpool zu umgehen, während andererseits zu erwarten steht, daß die neue, deutsche, direkte Verbindung dem deutschen Export nach Birma einen neuen Impuls geben wird, um so mehr, als die birmanischen Eisenbahnen stetig ausgebaut werden, und ihre Verlängerung bis in die angrenzenden chinesischen Provinzen hinein demnächst verwirklicht werden soll.

Lesson For the Week Beginning Nov. 6.

Comment by Rev. W. J. Yates, A. M.

Topic, The Childhood of Jesus.

SCRIPTURE READING:—Luke ii, 40-52.—"The child grew and waxed strong in spirit, filled with wisdom, and the grace of God was upon him."

Speculation has exhausted itself in trying to picture the divine nature and to penetrate the mystery of the union of the divine and human in Jesus Christ. The mystery of the incarnation is as deep a mystery as ever, and its complete solution is a hopeless task for the human mind. There is another clew. We may approach this subject from a different side. It is not wholly an intellectual problem. It has far more to do with the moral and spiritual sides of human nature than with the purely mental. Wisdom is more than learning, more than understanding. It is a disposition of the soul, it is an attitude of the will and affections toward the true, the right, the beautiful and good. From earliest infancy all lives are under the play of forces good and evil. Every one who comes to consciousness realizes sooner or later the opposite pull of impulses. Some are higher and some are lower in their nature and worth. Bodily appetites, mental visions, hopes, desires, loves, hatreds, all arise and contend for recognition. In the field of opposing forces we choose the better or worse, the higher or lower, the worthy or unworthy. As we choose so we grow, strong in spirit of wisdom or weak in spirit of foolishness; bold of heart and pure and fearless or craven, foul and reckless. The example and word of others have some influence with us. In the main we alone are responsible.

The miracle life of the boy Jesus has its wonder element in the evil times in which He lived and the purity He developed. The divine in Him was akin to the divine in every child of the race. He had the same powers as we, but brought them to higher development than any other one. In all our worship of Him as the Divine we must not lose sight for an instant of the fact that He was Son of Man. Here lies our hope as truly as in the fact that He was Son of God. Our help lies more in what He has in common with us than in anything else. Did He grow and become strong? So can we. Did He become wise and full of God's grace? So may we. He became a partaker of human nature that we might become partakers of the divine nature.

We are saved by His righteousness, not by any fictitious transfer or imputation, but by a very real impartation, so that we have the same spirit of power and purity. We think and feel and act as He would do if He was in our place. If you are a child of God, be diligent to grow in spirit of strength, wisdom and grace.

Editor of Epworth Herald.

One of the best known names in the Epworth world is that of Dr. Berry, the able editor of The Epworth Herald. He was born in 1855 in Michigan and was educated at Milton academy. He began to preach at 16 years of age and joined Detroit conference in 1874. Twelve years in the pastorate were followed by four as assistant editor of the Michigan Christian Advocate and then his election as editor of the Epworth League organ when it was founded.

Dr. Berry is as efficient on the platform and in the pulpit as in the editorial chair. His work at conferences and conventions is always of a high order. Long may his star ascend!

Bangor Convention.

The First general district includes all New England except a small part of western Vermont, Massachusetts and Connecticut. The convention is held biennially. The beautiful city of Bangor, Me., acted as hostess this year, and never has the district been better served or the convention more profitable. The programme was full of good things, and all passed off well. The excursion July 7 to Moosehead lake was not the least enjoyable feature of the meeting. Those who took the steamer from Boston had a most delightful trip on the ocean and up and down the queenly Penobscot river.

President Perein retires from office, and Secretary Freeman is advanced to his position. George W. Penniman, Esq., of Fall River, Mass., was elected secretary. Rev. H. E. Foss of Bangor succeeds Rev. CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 6.

Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—"Fight the good fight."—I Tim. vi, 11-16; II Tim. iv, 7, 8.

The Christian life was often likened by Paul to a warfare. It may have been that his long residence at Rome, where soldiers were constantly being drilled and disciplined, may have suggested the figure. Whatever suggested it it is an apt and telling one. The Christian life is a constant struggle, a ceaseless warfare between right and wrong, between holiness and sin, between the kingdom of God and the kingdom of satan. It is a good fight, because it is in a good cause, has a good captain and produces good results. It is a fight of faith—faith in God and Christ, faith in humanity, faith in eternal life.

The enemies in this fight are Biblically called "the world, the flesh and the devil." This world is not a friend to grace. Its influence is to draw us away from God and to weaken us in the great struggle for eternal life. The flesh is wicked, sinful self, the natural human heart, which is enmity against God. The principal adversary of the human soul in its struggle for life, however, is the devil, a personal, powerful, fallen being, whose knowledge of our weakness and power to tempt us make him a formidable enemy indeed and over whom we can gain the victory through the Lord Jesus Christ alone.

The weapons for this fight Paul describes in Eph. vi, 10-17. They are the girdle of truth—the truth as it is in Jesus; the breastplate of righteousness, not our own personal righteousness, but the righteousness of Christ; the sandals of the gospel of peace which has been prepared, and as a result of being at peace with God we can stand firm and secure, as one with sandals on his feet; the shield of faith, strong, real, abiding faith in God; the helmet of salvation, for being assured of our salvation we can hold our heads erect as one who wears a helmet; the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God, by which we are to overcome all the arguments of the evil one.

The result of this fight will be victory or defeat, as we enter upon it and continue it—victory if trusting in God we use the knowledge He has given us with His power to overcome; defeat if, lightly esteeming the enemy, we put our trust in our own knowledge and powers.

Paul won a glorious victory. Face to face with the end of life, as the warfare is about to close, he writes to Timothy: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of rejoicing, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, will give me in that day, and not to me only, but unto all them also that love His appearing." What Paul accomplished every Christian can accomplish. May his example inspire us all to the required effort!

Bible Readings.—Ex. xiv, 10-14; Deut. i, 30; Ps. xxvii, 1; Math. iv, 1-11; xxvi, 36-45; I Cor. ix, 25-27; xv, 58; Eph. vi, 10-18; Heb. x, 31-33; Jas. iv, 7; I Pet. v, 8; Rev. ii, 10.

Go Slow.

There is no more ominous word than "fast," which means a great deal more than do many slang words. It means that it is possible to get through life in such a hurry as to curtail that which one would suppose it would be to our interest to lengthen. When the end is reached, there is collapse—all is lost. Do we not do well to ask if this is the best thing that life can do for us? Is there nothing higher than this feverish haste, nothing better and more manly than this perennial round of frivolous excitement? Remember that he who thus throws his life away throws away a chance wholly unique. Only once there is given to us the possibility of living out this brief life as God intended that His creature man should live.—Churchman.

Pain and Peace.

It is often surprising to see how much pain there may be in the sensibility, and yet peace, in the depths of the mind. In crossing the Atlantic some years ago we were overtaken by a gale of wind. Upon the deck the roar and confusion were terrific. The spray from the waves blew upon the face with almost force enough to blister it. The noise of the waves howling and roaring and foaming was almost deafening. But when I stepped into the engine room everything was quiet. The mighty engine was moving with a quietness and stillness in striking contrast with the war without. It reminded me of the peace that can reign in the soul while storms and tempests are howling without.—C. J. Finney.

Satanic Assaults.

The power of Satan to trouble the saints is never done. It may be that the child of God has been such consciously for long years, he may have been enabled to grasp the fullness of salvation which belongs to him who is clothed with the righteousness of Christ since he was first converted, but let him never think that he is safe from the assaults of the evil one.—Episcopal Recorder.

To Those Who Trust.

Let none doubt, however weak and erring they may be, the security of their souls and the comfort of their hearts amid all trial and temptation and sorrow, who have a living Redeemer, sympathizing with them in heaven, interceding for them with the Father and ready to impart all power, even His own almighty and divine Spirit, to those who trust His grace.—Presbyterian.

Duty.

Never to tire, never to grow cold, to be patient, sympathetic, tender; to look for the budding flower and the opening heart; to hope always, like God; to love always—this is duty.—Amiel's Journal.

THE SUNDAY LESSON.

INTERNATIONAL SERIES, WITH COMMENTARY BY DR. STEARNS.

Golden Text.—Yield yourselves unto the Lord, and enter into His sanctuary.—2 Chron. xxx: 8. No. 6, 1898.

1. "Come to the house of the Lord at Jerusalem to keep the Passover unto the Lord God of Israel." This was the message of Hezekiah, a king who did right in the sight of the Lord (chapter xxix, 2), to all Israel and Judah, regarding them as one people. Although long divided into two nations, they are one in His sight and shall yet be one in the eyes of all nations (Ezek. xxxvii, 21, 22). Hezekiah repaired the house of the Lord and restored the worship. He wrought good and right and truth before the Lord his God and did every work with all his heart and prospered (chapter xxxi, 20, 21). He would have all Israel remember their deliverance from Egypt and rejoice in the Lord and serve Him.

2, 3. "The king had taken counsel, and his princes and all the congregation in Jerusalem to keep the Passover in the second month." Although the first month was the regular time for the feast, there was provision in the law to keep it in the second month if necessary (Ex. xii, 18; Num. ix, 10, 11). Place and time and form are not so important in God's sight as a heart that is right with Him. Even feasts and Sabbaths are a shadow of things to come. Christ is the reality of all, and apart from Him nothing is real (Col. ii, 16, 17).

4. "And the thing pleased the king and all the congregation." It is written of David in II Sam. iii, 36, that "whatsoever the king did pleased all the people." When king and people please each other, and all together please God, that is surely a sample of the kingdom of God on earth. Thus it shall be when Israel shall have become a righteous nation with the Christ, the Son of David, as their King (Ez. xxxvii, 24, 25).

5. "Make proclamation throughout all Israel to keep the Passover unto the Lord God of Israel at Jerusalem." This feast commemorating the great deliverence of Israel out of the bondage of Egypt by the mighty power of God was to be kept every year, but in the Old Testament we have an account of only five after the first one in Ex. xii. These records are found in Num. ix, Josh. v, II Chron. xxxv, Ezra vi and in our lesson. The greatest Passover in the New Testament is recorded in Luke xxii, 14, 15, and in the other gospels as having been kept by our Lord and His apostles on the night before He was sacrificed for us as our Passover. He spoke at that time of a future fulfillment in the kingdom of God (Luke xxii, 16), and instituted the Lord's supper as a memorial of His death to be kept by His redeemed till He shall come again.

6. "Ye children of Israel, turn again unto the Lord God of Abraham, Isaac and Israel and He will return to the remnant of you." Letters from a king to his people urging them to turn to the Lord God would be a most unusual occurrence in our time. Even if a church is in need of funds, it is more customary to turn to some wealthy people or to some worldly way than to the Great Head of the church.

7. "Be not ye like your fathers and like your brethren which trespassed against the Lord God of their fathers." Their sin is briefly stated in Jer. ii, 13, "My people have committed two evils; they have forsaken me, the fountain of living waters, and hewed them out cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water." Thus they changed their glory for that which could not profit. The Lord was their judge and lawgiver and king, but they turned their backs upon Him and preferred their own way. Is there any analogy now?

8. "Yield yourselves unto the Lord, and serve the Lord your God." The margin says, "Give the hand unto the Lord." In Rom. vi, 13, it is "Yield yourselves unto God as those that are alive from the dead." As unsaved sinners all we are asked to do is to receive Christ.

9. "The Lord your God is gracious and merciful and will not turn away His face from you if ye return unto Him." His name in Ex. xxxiv, 6, is "The Lord, the Lord God, merciful and gracious, long suffering and abundant in goodness and truth." Read also verse 7. He says in Mal. iii, 6: "I am the Lord. I change not." In Heb. xiii, 8, He is "Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, to-day and forever." He is not willing that any should perish, has provided eternal redemption for all and is ever saying, "Him that cometh to me I will in nowise cast out" (John vi, 37).

10. "So the posts passed from city to city, but they laughed them to scorn and mocked them"—that is, many of Ephriam, Manasseh and Zebulun did. The final testimony concerning Judah is, "They mocked the messengers of God and despised His words, and misused His prophets until the wrath of the Lord rose against His people, till there was no remedy" (II Chron. xxxvi, 16). This is the carnal mind which is enmity against God and is ever the same, but these were not the heathen who never heard of God. They were the people of God for whom He had done more than for any nation on earth. See II Tim. iii, 1-5.

SPORTING.

ON THE GRIDIRON.

The Plainfield eleven met for practice on the Westervelt avenue grounds last evening. Excellent work was done. Practice will be continued tonight. This evening Captain Roy T. Phillips, of the Alis team, wants to see all the candidates for that team at the Westervelt avenue grounds.

The Alis second will meet the second eleven of Pingry's School of Elizabeth in Plainfield this afternoon.

It appears after all that Volney F. Green will not play with the Plainfield team election day. Green has given up his chances for the team. Fletcher Hallock is now booked for one end, and Edgar I. Serrell is credited with having the best showing for the other.

Saturday afternoon will see an exciting football game at New Brunswick. Stevens Institute and Rutgers College will meet for the second time. The first game broke up in a dispute, the Stevens captain claiming a forward pass that his opponents would not allow. The visiting team became angry and withdrew, leaving the Rutgers eleven on the field. The management of the two teams patched up the difficulties and arranged another game for Saturday afternoon.

Of the young men who represent the red and black of Rutgers College on the gridiron, the best known to Plainfielders is Ernest Rapalje, who formerly attended the Plainfield High School. The friends of Rapalje will regret to learn that he has met with an accident that will keep him from playing for the remainder of the season. Rapalje has been playing right end on Rutgers this year. With his college team he went to Albany two weeks ago and played against the Union College eleven. During the game a Rutgers back came around Rapalje's end. In keeping off the Union men, Rapalje slipped and fell. He dislocated his ankle and broke one of the bones in his foot. He now wears that foot in a plaster cast and hobbles around on crutches. There is hardly a day passes, however, that does not see Rapalje on the sides watching the practice.

BASKET BALL.

The first basket ball game to be played in Plainfield this season is scheduled for Monday evening at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, when the "Bowery Boys" of the Young Men's Institute of New York will play a return game here.

MARRIED SOLDIERS REJOICE.

Those in Third Regiment Soon Will Be Mustered Out.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, November 4.—Word was received here that orders have been issued by the War Department authorizing Colonel Lee, in command of the Third Regiment, now at Pompton Lakes, to muster out twenty-six men in each company of his command, maintaining the minimum of eighty men in each company.

This is the result of persistent work by Senator Sewell, Representative Howell, Robert Carson and other political powers, who have insisted that men having dependent families be discharged. The Third Regiment has been ordered to go to Athens, Ga., at once.

John Reed Cannot be Found.

(Special to the Daily Press.)

Boston, Nov. 4.—No trace has yet been found of the missing confidence man, John Reed, in spite of the fact that every agency at the command of the police and the State prison officials has been set at work.

FIRE LADDIES DANCE.

PLEASURE FOR THE GUESTS AND PROFITS FOR THE FIREMEN.

Cake Walk Was the Feature of the Affair—Won by James McLean and Miss Della Doyle—Those in Charge.

The drivers of the Plainfield Fire Department gave a very successful ball last evening in Washington Hall for the benefit of the Firemen's Mutual Benevolent Association, Branch No. 7, of this city. There were about five hundred people present, and everyone had a thoroughly enjoyable time. During the evening Chief Doane and his assistants, as well as several public officials were present and gave encouragement to the affair. The music for the event was furnished by Eugene O'Reilly and his orchestra, and everyone spoke praiseworthy of the selections. Just before the ball came to an end there was a grand cake walk for a cake offered by Eden Boice. The performance was very amusing and was finally won by James McLean and Miss Della Doyle.

The officers of the association are as follows: President, William F. Townley; vice president, William A. Ross; secretary, Fred Breem; treasurer, George Feiring. The committee in charge of last evening's affair consists of James E. Bailey, James H. Daly, Fred Breem, William F. Townley, Harry Bush, George Feiring and William A. Ross. They desire to thank all who in any way assisted in making the dance the success that it was.

DEMOCRATS TURN NOW.

MASS MEETING TO BE HELD IN REFORM HALL.

Congressional and County Candidates to Be Present—Colonel Murrell Will Stir Up His Colored Brethren Also.

Tonight will be the Democratic inning in stirring up local interest in the great political fight that will end next Tuesday. A mass meeting has been arranged to be held in Reform Hall this evening, which will be addressed by a number of speakers. One especial point of the meeting will be to interest the colored voters. For that purpose Col. Wm. Murrell, the noted colored politician, will be on hand. He has been very active in this campaign, and owing to his former connection with the G. O. P., he can be depended upon to deliver a speech that will be decidedly stirring.

Other speakers will be former Senator Fred C. Marsh, of Elizabeth, and Col. John B. Green, as well as a number of the Democratic county candidates. Of course, James E. Martine will be on hand to say a few words to his fellow citizens.

Col. E. H. Snyder, of East Orange, the Congressional candidate in the Eighth district, will also be there. Col. Snyder and the other visiting Democrats will arrive here this afternoon and be met by a number of the local leaders. They will be escorted around among the voters so that the latter may have the opportunity of meeting those for whom their suffrages are to be asked.

Resignation of Rev. E. E. Kempshall.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Nov. 4.—Rev. Everard E. Kempshall, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, Elizabeth, tendered his resignation at a parish meeting held Wednesday night. Mr. Kempshall was installed in 1861. He is president of the Citizens' State League, and took an active part in the crusade against the race track gamblers.

His health is not robust, and he will go to California. C. C. McBride, chairman of the meeting, appointed a committee to wait upon the Presbytery and present the resignation, and ask it to dissolve Mr. Kempshall's connection with the church.

Another Vicious Dog.

The seven-year-old daughter of Geo. Rickert, of the borough, was bitten yesterday in the calf of the leg by a dog owned by Mr. Schroppe, of Jackson avenue. The dog's teeth penetrated the skin to a depth of about a quarter of an inch. The wound was cauterized by Dr. Mattison, of Somerset street, and no ill effects are feared.

The Crowning Woe.

"You don't seem to thoroughly realize how low you have got," said the Court.

The prisoner, a faded, battered specimen of manhood, upon whose haggard face, deeply lined with the marks of dissipation, there still lingered the reminders of better days long past, started as if struck.

"You do me an injustice, your Honor," he said, bitterly. "I can bear the disgrace of arrest for drunkenness, the mortification of being thrust into a noisome dungeon, and the humiliation of a trial in a crowded and dingy courtroom, but to be sentenced by a Police Magistrate who splits his infinitives—that is indeed a crushing blow."

And as they led him away he placed a trembling hand to his forehead and shivered like one in an ague.—Chicago Tribune.

HE DID NOT COME BACK.

But in the Morning All the Trenches Were Dug.

When the American line had fought its way to the top of the hills at El Paso and San Juan and Caney, General Wheeler issued an order that every command should dig trenches in preparation for the conflict that he knew would break out again in the morning. But the soldiers had thrown away most of their trenching tools during the fierce rifle charges, and as darkness fell upon the scene of battle they threw themselves upon the ground and went to sleep from sheer exhaustion. Adjutant Hood, of the Rough Riders, noting this condition of affairs, rode over to General Wheeler's tent and informed the good old veteran that the men were played out. Wheeler at the time was lying upon his cot more dead than alive, but there was a smile upon his lips and his never-failing good humor twinkling in his eyes, when Adjutant Hood said:

"What men?" asked the general.

"The cavalry division," said the adjutant.

General Wheeler sat up in bed and began pulling on his boots.

"Send me the man," he directed.

"What man?" asked the adjutant.

"The man who can't dig trenches."

"But it is not one man; it is many men. They are just played out."

"But you can surely find one man who says he can't dig the trench. I only want one. Go, get him and bring him to me."

"But there are—"

"I don't care how many there are. Go get me one."

The adjutant had never faced such a man as Wheeler before and he did not know just what to make of the conversation. The little old general was as smooth and suave and courteous as could be, and Hood had nothing to do but to ride back to the line. In some way he managed to round up a colored trooper belonging to the 9th Cavalry, and brought him back to the division headquarters. He stood looking sheepishly at the ground when Wheeler addressed him.

"Are you the man who says he can't dig these trenches?" asked the general.

The general stoppd him and walked out of his tent.

"You can go to sleep now, my man, and I'll go up and dig your trench for you. When the sun comes up to-morrow morning the Spaniards are going to open on us, and every man who isn't protected is not only in danger of being killed, but will be unable to help maintain our own position. The trenches have to be dug, and if you are unable to dig yours I'll just go out and dig it for you. Where's your pick?"

With the most business-like air in the world Wheeler slid into his coat and turned toward the big cavalryman. The man's eyes opened as he saw the proceedings, and they began to bulge when the general motioned to him to lead the way to his camp. For half a minute his voice stuck in his throat, and then he said:

"Boss, you ain't fit to dig no trenches. If they done got to be dug I'll just naturally do it myself. I'm dog tired, but that ain't work for you."

Wheeler stopped and looked at the man with a flicker of amusement in his eyes.

"I know it isn't work for me to do," he said, "but I am going to need soldiers in the morning and I am going to save your life if possible. Do you think now that you can dig the trench?"

The negro started up the hill without a word. Then the general turned to Adjutant Hood, with a voice as pleasant as sunshine in May.

"He seems to have changed his mind," he said. "Now, you go and find me another man who can't dig trenches."

The adjutant bowed and rode off. He never came back. In the morning the trenches were dug.—Atlanta Constitution.

He Was Altogether Too Literal.

A San Francisco hostess, famous for her tact and resourcefulness, tells a good story on herself. It seems that an officer in one of the Tennessee companies, a very shy young man, brought letters with him when his regiment came to the coast, and presented himself one evening at the (let us say) Van Ness avenue residence. As he was the son of a well-known public man and a member of an old family, his hostess exerted herself to entertain him. "We should be glad to have the pleasure of your company Friday at dinner," she said, as he was leaving; "the Hawaiian Commissioners are to be with us." Friday came, and the Commission. Shortly before the hour for dinner the butler excitedly entered the room. "They's a regiment of soldiers, mum, outside." "No doubt in honor of the Commissioners; I will tell them." Just then the lieutenant was announced. "When you are ready," he said, "I will have the men march to their places in formation." "Why," said the hostess, "what men?" "It's my company," was the reply, "all but ten, and they're sorry, but they couldn't come."—San Francisco Argonaut.

"Pompey, how did you like my sermon?" asked a vain and rather long-winded preacher to a black man who had sat under the gallery.

Pompey was still aching with the fatigue of listening to the forty-minute discourse.

"Well, boss," he replied, "I t'ink yo' went by a lot o' mighty good stoppin'

OUR FLEET'S FIRST ADMIRAL.

Interesting and Remarkable Career of Ezekiel Hopkins.

Who was the first commander-in-chief of the American navy? What were the names of our first war ships and when were they built?

Probably not one out of a hundred of the average newspaper readers can answer, without investigation, these questions; yet the knowledge is interesting and valuable and especially timely just now, when the navy and the doings of the naval officials occupy so large a part of the public attention.

The Continental Congress at the outset managed the Revolutionary war through committees, there being at that time no executive. John Adams was chairman of the naval committee, with Stephen Hopkins and three other congressmen as associates. On October 13, 1775 Congress ordered two cruisers built. These were the first war vessels constructed by the United States; and were followed by others until by January 1, 1776 Congress had ordered the building of fifteen cruisers. This was the navy, and its first commander-in-chief was Ezekiel Hopkins, of Rhode Island, a younger brother of Congressman Stephens Hopkins. He was appointed to this high office on December 22, 1775.

At the time of his appointment Ezekiel Hopkins was a brigadier-general in command of the Rhode Island troops, acting under commission from the governor. He had spent part of his life on board merchant ships, and had also been a ship builder; consequently he was fitted both by experience and ability to fill the important office given to him. In a short time a fleet of four ships and three sloops were ready, and with these Admiral Hopkins set out to win glory for himself and country. Among his lieutenants was the famous John Paul Jones, who was, probably, the most brilliant and daring naval officer of the wars with England.

The Bahama Islands in the West Indies were then an English colony, with New Providence as their principal seaport and seat of government; and hither the new Admiral sailed the new navy. He attacked the city, captured the harbor fort and town, and brought back with him to America the English governor as a prisoner, eighty cannons and a very large quantity of ammunition and other military stores. This brilliant achievement was a godsend to the disheartened and impoverished patriots. It renewed their courage and replenished their stores. Admiral Hopkins was the hero of the hour and received a vote of thanks from Congress for his great deeds which had redeemed the glory and advantage of his country.

Shortly after his return from the Bahamas he met two English ships off Block Island and captured both of them. Two days later he had an engagement with the English twenty-nine gun ship, Glasgow, but did not succeed in capturing it. The public severely censured his conduct of this battle, and in June, 1776, he was ordered to appear before the congressional committee. After a hearing had been given him, the committee sent a favorable report of his actions to Congress, which the latter body approved, so the Admiral was exonerated from all blame.

He was now placed in charge of a large number of war vessels, which Congress was having built. The task was a difficult one. Money and material were hard to get. A powerful English fleet blockaded the harbors, and prevented the sailing of some of his ships when completed. The people became impatient. The press accused him of slowness, of being a laggard in his country's services. His temper was never of the best, and he emphatically resented the clamor of complaints. Again he was summoned to appear before Congress for investigation. Then the testy old sailor lost his temper entirely, and sent a point blank refusal to Congress, couched in vigorous but undiplomatic English. The result of all this was that he was dismissed from the service January 2, 1777.

Ezekiel Hopkins at once equipped a fast and powerful privateer, and again went to sea. He sailed to the East Indies, where his daring and skill found rich rewards. During one cruise he captured a sufficient number of rich English merchantmen to cause his profits to foot up over $1,000,000. At another time he fell in with a large fleet of English merchantment protected by a man-of-war. He boldly joined the fleet, and every night cut out and captured a vessel, until he had sent ten home and could spare no more men from his crew. He became the most successful and daring of all the American privateersmen.

When the war ended he returned to Rhode Island, and became one of her most prominent and busy citizens.

The outbreak of the Revolutionary war found the patriots without a navy. Congress had to create one. Four merchantmen were first purchased, hastily equipped with guns and sent to sea as cruisers; but their defects as war vessels soon became so apparent that Congress determined at once to set about the building of a navy. On October 13, 1775, Congress ordered two cruisers built; and on December 13, the order was increased to five thirty-two-gun ships, five twenty-eight-gun ships and three twenty-four-gun ships. They were to be ready for the sea by the following April. The names given to the thirteen vessels were: Boston, Congress, Effingham, Delaware, Hancock, Montgomery, Providence, Raleigh, Trumbull, Virginia, Warren, Washington and Randolph. These were the first war vessels constructed in the United States.

MAYOR WILL ADVANCE THE MONEY IF NEEDED

Generous Offer Made by His Honor in the Borough.

TO MACADAMIZE AN AVENUE

COUNCIL AUTHORIZES THE IMPROVEMENT TO BE MADE.

Bill For 243 Loads of Stone That the Mayor Said Was Not to Have Cost the Borough Anything—Easier Time For the Marshals—Mayor Wilson Described the Pavements he Saw in Easton.

Business at the Borough Council meeting was pushed through rapidly last night, and by 9 o'clock the regular meeting had adjourned and the Council had gone into executive session. Routine business only was transacted, an important item being the ordering of the macadamizing of Summit avenue.

The Mayor and all the members were present. A petition was read from the residents of Coddington avenue asking that an electric light be placed at the corner of Coddington avenue and Somerset street. The petition was referred to the committee on lights.

Mrs. Carrie Boice presented a bill to the Council for $30, which has remained unpaid since 1894, when her property on Somerset street was used for election purposes by the borough. The bill was originally presented in 1894, but escaped payment then because the property had just changed hands. It was referred to the auditing committee and later ordered paid.

Among the bills presented was one from J. H. Cooley for 243 loads of stone. The Mayor declared that this stone was to have cost the borough nothing, so that claim was held over.

William Kernan and Lewis C. Wyckoff were appointed special marshals and Raymond Schenck was appointed janitor of Warren Enginehouse in the place of the old janitor, who has resigned.

Councilman Burtis, in his report, stated that twenty arrests had been made during the past month, of which fourteen were for being drunk and disorderly. Six were committed to jail, and on two sentence was suspended. Sixty one dollars altogether has been collected in fines. Councilman Burtis said that there had been considerable illness among the members of the force last month, and suggested that the men each be given one night a month off after this.

Councilman Woolston reported that $208.74 had been spent upon streets last month as follows: Labor on Rockview avenue, $49.75; repairing Someaset street, $55; general street repairing, $75 49. The balance has been expended for general repairs. Mr. Woolston also reported that $181 of the $200 necessary had been subscribed by property holders on Summit avenue for the macadamizing of that street. Councilman MacLaughlin offered a resolution that the work be done as soon as the remaining $19 should be raised. This awoke quite a discussion among the members, some of whom were not sure about the financial condition of the borough, and hesitated about spending the money, but when Mayor Wilson offered to advance what was needed, if necessary, the resolution was passed.

Upon this Councilman Rogers offered a resolution that the chairman of each committee prepare an estimate of the amount of money needed for the balance of the fiscal year, so that the Council could fully understand its financial condition. This, too, was also passed. The committee on taxation had no report to offer.

During an interval in the meeting Mayor Wilson described a visit to Easton last Wednesday, in which he inspected the streets there which are paved with vitrified brick, and told what a satisfactory road-bed they made. The Mayor merely threw the facts out as a suggestion, which may be acted upon at some future time.

The financial report is as follows: Paid to county and State, $2,174.48. Cash balance, $239.95. Total balance, $2,414.43. Since the last report $185.11 has been collected from the following sources: Bertha Saunders, $18.23; T. B. Brooks, $48.02; estate E. R. Pope, $27.75; Walter McGee, $15.76; F. A. Potts, $19.35. Taxes to the amount of $8,750.70 have been collected. Total amount collected, $12,892 17; disbursements, $3,430.31; balance, $9,461.86.

In a Precarious Condition.

Edward Mundy, the farmer from Metuchen, who was injured the other day at Washingtonville, by a runaway team of horses, passed a poor night at the hosital and today his condition is worse. Chances for his ultimate recovery are slight.

HIGH SCHOOL HONORS.

OLD CUSTOM REVIVED AT THE PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL.

All Pupils With "Good" or "Excellent" in All Their Studies Are Awarded Special Mention—Roll Read Every Two Months.

After an absence of many years the roll of honor has been revived at the Plainfield High School. Last year Principal Ira W. Travell started an honor roll in attendance which was read every two months. The list contained the names of those who had not been absent any day during that time. This year that plan has been continued, but Principal Travell has added a real roll of honor in scholarship after the method in use ten years ago.

On the roll of honor are placed the names of all the pupils who have had a standing of "good" or better in every subject. According to the method of marking in vogue at the High School at present, E or "excellent" is the highest; G or "good" is next; then comes F, "fair," P, "poor," and V P, "very poor." "Fair" is the standard of promotion.

Principal Travell has now announced the scholarship roll of honor for the month of September and October and a list of the meritorious ones has been posted at the High School. A new list will be announced the first of the year.

The roll of honor is as follows:

Senior Class—Henry A. Pearce, P. G.; William A. Fisher, Robert A. Pruden, Helen L. Hall, Jessie E. Saxton, Bessie M. F. Randolph and Marjorie C. Sterling.

Junior Class—Charles H. Fountain, Dora A. Bennett, Marion D. Woodcock, Edna Burr, Elizabeth E. Cutter, Pauline S. Denton, Clara G. Dunham, Mary Lock, Mary A. Ross, Mary L. Mann, Ruth P. Maxson, Iola Moore and Alice L. Morgan.

Third Class—Kizzie Eager, Ella L. Lounsbury, Lillian Maclay.

Fourth Class—Daisy M. Brouard, Marguerite VanDeventer, Fred C. Lounsbury, Edith DeLong, Lulu Fuller, Bertha Mitchell, Hollis Cubberly, Erwin B. Leland and Harold A. Nomer.

DR. WESTCOTT BEAT OF TRAMPS.

Encountered Three Suspicious Characters Loitering Around His House.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Fanwood, Fovember 5.—Dr. F. W. Westcott, the county physician, had an encounter with three tramps last evening near his home. Although alone, the doctor advanced on the enemy and beat them off without injury to himself.

When Dr. Westcott returned to his home early in the evening he noticed three suspicious characters loitering about his residence. The doctor ordered them to move on, but they refused and started for him. The beams from a neighboring electric light showed a set of brass knuckles on the hand of one of the strangers.

Dr. Westcott had a heavy package in his hand which he used to good advantage and the assaults of the tramps were beaten off and they retreated before the determined stand of Dr. Westcott. Then the doctor hurried to the house and the tramps fled. The doctor was not injured and is still on the lookout for suspicious characters.

Salvationists' Mercy Box.

One of the most prolific means of support for the rescue homes, workingmen's and women's hotels, children's homes, farm colonies, etc., instituted by the Salvation Army throughout the United States within the past few years, is the mercy box. This box is delivered free of charge to sympathizers in the work of the Army, who agree to deposit therein at least one cent a week. Anyone desiring to help the army in this way can have a box by making application to the local secretary or the officer of the army.

Crushed His Hand.

Philip DeHart, aged twenty-one years, unmarried, and living at 905 South Second street, was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital yesterday afternoon about 3 o'clock suffering with a badly crushed hand. The accident happened at the Pond Tool Works, where Mr. DeHart is employed. It was found necessary to amputate one finger, but an effort is being made to save the rest of the hand.

Champion Before the Court.

At last the case of Alfred Champion, the colored man sent to the Elizabeth jail several weeks ago by City Judge DeMeza on a charge of disorderly conduct, and who is trying to get out on habeas corpus proceedings, came up before the court at Elizabeth yesterday. William G. DeMeza represented Champion and Craig A. Marsh the city. The decision was reserved until Wednesday.

ELECTION DAY GAME.

CANDIDATES FOR THE FOOTBALL TEAMS THAT PLAY TUESDAY.

The San Remo Eleven Will Bring Twenty Players With Them for the Game—The Probable Makeup of the Local Team.

The fact that there is to be at least one good football game in Plainfield this fall has rejoiced the hearts of the football enthusiasts. Much interest has been shown throughout the city in the game that is to be played on Martine field, Tuesday afternoon, between the Plainfield team and the San Remos of the New York Athletic Club.

The San Remo eleven is by no means unknown to this city, having played here three times during the last two years. One game was won by the Plainfield players, the San Remo team won one victory and the other game was a tie. The game election day will be the deciding one and the final result is awaited with much interest.

Plainfield will be represented by a strong team. There are a number of excellent candidates to whom the choice has now narrowed and the snowing in the practice this afternoon and Monday night will decide the final makeup of the eleven. The candidates for the end positions are Fletcher Hallock, last year's tackle, Edgar I. Serrell, an end last season, Carey, recently of the Orange Athletic Club, and Volney F. Green, of the Naval Reserves.

Dr. William Sheldesker, of Columbia P. and S., comes with a bright record from the DuQuesne A. C. He and Nathan E. Lewis, of the Steven Institute team, are the principal candidates for tackle. "Shorty" Milne and Ed Brown will be the guards and Thomas A. Cuming centre.

Between Louis Darling, Roy T. Phillips and Roger Erickson lays the choice of quarter back. Darling will probably open the game there. George Cathcart, Thomas U. Smith and Edgar I. Serrell are all excellent half backs and will do their share of the work. Henry L. McGee will play full back unless he meets with some hard luck when Darling would probably drop back.

There will be twenty players for the San Remo team that will come to Plainfield Tuesday. Four good men will be prepared to play end, Mitchell and Smith of last year's team, Millen, of the Barnard School eleven and Hunt from the Montclair A. C. Zimm, W. Carr, L. Carr and Stean, all of last year's San Remo team, will try for tackle. Arnold and O'Donnell, the regular guards, will be reinforced by Westerfield, of the Crescents, of Harlem. Morris and Gilham, of last year's team, will be ready to play centre.

Little Casanova will be back at quarter with Fulton, of St. Paul's School, as sub. Luders is the only old player among the other backs. The other candidates are Huntington, of Berkeley School; Gillam, of Packard's Business College; Wards, from the Yonkers A. C., and Russell, a Trinity School player.

SHOT TWO DEER.

Plainfielder's Successful Hunting Trip in the Adirondacks.

Samuel H. Edwards, of LaGrande avenue, returned yesterday after a two weeks' vacation spent in the Adirondack woods. He was accompanied by a friend and two guides and they spent most of their time hunting deer. According to the game laws of New York State, each hunter is allowed only two deer a season. When they came out of the woods, they brought four together, the limit allowed by law. Two of them fell before Mr. Edwards' rifle. One of these, Mr. Edwards sent to the Lunch Club, of the Tide Water Oil Company, at Bayonne, the members of which will now enjoy venison for several days.

DEMOCRATIC GOSPEL HEARD LAST NIGHT.

A Good Sized Crowd Gathered in Reform Hall.

APPEAL TO COLORED VOTERS

COL. WILLIAM MURRELL ARRAIGNED THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

Former Senator Marsh Discussed the Issues of the Campaign—County and Congressional Candidates Were Heard—Murrell Was Emphatic if Not Graceful—James E. Martine's Enthusiastic Talk.

Last evening in Reform Hall the Democrats held a mass meeting that was enthusiastic and largely attended. The local candidates were present and received a hearty welcome from all. During several of the speeches wargraph pictures were displayed on a canvass and this seemed to please the audience.

The meeting was called to order by James E. Martine, and John M. Hillman was selected as chairman. The following vice-presidents and secretaries were chosen:

Vice-presidents—Walter L. Hetfield, John Rafferty, W. A. Coddington, W. J. Gleak, Louis Peterson, W. K. McClure, Leonard Spangenberg, Isaac P. Brown, Jr., D. C. Ivins, James Clark, Frank Bacon, A. H. Atterbury, E. H. Birmingham, M. R. Flynn, George O. Stevens, James Scott, V. L. Frazee, J. H. McVey, Isaac M. Fields and Charles DeGraw.

Secretaries—P. J. Reville, Michael DeCourcy, Leonard Somerset and Frank S. Voeseller.

The first speaker of the evening was Ex-Prosecutor Fred C. Marsh, of Elizabeth. He gave a rousing speech along the lines of Democracy. He stated that he had nailed the lie circulated by Republicans that Mr. Crane, the nominee for Governor on the Democratic ticket, had ever introduced a bill in the Legislature lowering the age of consent, or that he ever voted for such a bill. On the contrary he was instrumental in raising the age. He also stated that he had been able to secure a denial of the lie in the Elizabeth Journal. Mr. Marsh spoke of the true worth of Mr. Crane, regarding the great services he had given the State, and how he was selected as a candidate without a dissenting vote at the convention.

Mr. Marsh then went on and spoke individually concerning Assembly nominees Scudder, Capt. Collins, Higgins; George Ford, the nominee for State Senator, and Col. Snyder, the nominee for Congress. He spoke of them all as being typical Democrats, and worthy of the support of every Democrat and Republican in New Jersey, and if elected they would cast nothing but Democratic votes. He claimed that the nominees deserved the whole and hearty support of the Democrats and he felt sure that they would receive it next Tuesday. He decried the fact that the Republicans want to make people believe that the late war was a Republican victory. He spoke about the extravagance of the Republicans, and of their mistakes in ballot reform, which compelled an American citizen to go before a notary public and pay him fifty cents to secure a certificate telling him that he was one. Mr. Marsh's remarks were pointed and well received by all.

The next speaker was George Ford, of Elizabeth, the nominee for State Senator. He made a few remarks in which he stated that if he should be elected he would do the best for the State and the people he represented. This speaker was followed by F. T. Higgins, of Linden, a candidate for the Assembly; also Mulford Scudder, of Westfield, and Capt. Collins, of Elizabeth, candidates for the Assemblyn. The first two made brief remarks thanking those present for the flattering reception and hoping that a large vote for the Democratic ticket would be polled next Tuesday.

Capt. Collins talked more at length and stirred the enthusiasm of the crowd. He stated that he felt sure that next Tuesday a large Democratic majority would be given. In speaking about the recent war he said that nearly every volunteer from Plainfield in his company was a Democrat and they were among the best soldiers in the company.

The next speaker was followed by Col. Snyder, of Orange, who created a favorable impression. He said that he brought good news to Plainfield from all parts of the State, and he was confident that on next Tuesday there would be a sweeping Democratic victory. "When elected," Mr. Snyder, said, "I will come among you and learn your wishes about what you want done in Congress. In case there are any appointments to be made I will come to you and ask you who you want appointed, then the majority will rule."

The next speaker was Col. Murrell, of Asbury Park, a colored veteran of the late war, and a man of some prominence among his people. He spoke somewhat as follows:

"I have stumped this State for fifteen years for Republicans, but I am now in the Democratic party. The newspapers have blackguarded most shamefully the colored people, and let the white man go when he changes his vote. I will show you that the Democratic party is truer to the colored folks than the Republican.

"I have been all over the State, from Cape May to Bergen. The Republican party today is not what it was thirty years ago. You want to learn both sides of the question, then you will know how to vote intelligently next Tuesday I am no liar, but why are the Republicans keeping my people away from this hall tonight with a glass of beer and a sandwich. Why not let them come here for awhile and listen to me.

"The Governor arraigned me for stating that he would not call colored troops in the recent war, and that I would not be found in the front ranks. In reply I would say that during the late war I served three years and four months, and anyone can read my pension papers which says that I draw my pension for gunshot and bayonet wounds, and no chronic diseases. Last March I offered my services to the country, and Secretary Alger replied that the wounds I received in the late war incapacitated me for service on the field. I have a son who is serving proudly the State of New Jersey in Company D, Tenth Cavalry, that saved the gallant Rough Riders at San Juan, and he was there without the thanks of Governor Voorhees.

"I want you to understand that I am not receiving one dime for my services. I am giving my work without promise or reward. On the Democratic side they don't sidetrack the negro like the Republicans do.

"Two words of the truth from my lips would damn a certain colored leader in this city with the Republicans and Democrats. He asked me to spare him and I will. Tonight he is at the other end of the town with the 'gang'. He wants to go slow."

Following Col. Murrell, James E. Martine, of this city, was called upon and he spoke at some length. Mr. Martine was received with hearty applause. He stated that he had nothing to say against Mr. Voorhees, but on the contrary considered him a friend. He rehearsed the acts concerning the race-tracks and its accomplices among whom were many Republicans, and he spoke strongly against the extravagance of the Republican party. Regarding the charge of extravagance made by the Republicans, Mr. Martine cited one instance concerning the flagpole on the capitol at Trenton, which the Republicans claimed to be extravagance at a cost of $135, when it could have been purchased for $100. "I wonder," said Mr. Martine, "if there is not something wrong about our $150 flagpole in this city."

Mr. Martine devoted some time to remarks about Congressman Fowler, as to how he had published a book entitled "The Needs of the Government," and how he was imported to New Jersey by the Standard Oil Works, a monopoly. He stated that Mr. Fowler had been identified with farm mortgage loans, which later became a wreck. This is the man, Mr. Martine said, who is such an authority on finance and who seeks your suffrage!

The last speaker was William Davis, colored, of Trenton, who told in a few word how the colored people of New Jersey are going to vote the Democratic ticket next Tuesday.

Programme for Reception.

At the annual reception Thursday evening to be tendered the Park Avenue Baptist church and congregation, Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Richardson will be assisted by Mrs. Udele Smith, of the Women's String Orchestra, of New York, accompanied by Mrs. Chas. Lewis; Miss Rita Pond, elocutionist; Mrs. H. E. Rider, soprano, and Mrs. Harry Johnson, solo pianist. Rev. Dr. Robert Lowry will speak on "The Pastor and These Times," and Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes on "The Church and These times."

A Little Heroine.

Miss Kittie Albert, of East Fourth street, proved herself quite a heroine yesterday afternoon in rescuing a four-year-old child from instant death. The little tot lives on East Third street just over the track. The child got out of the house and crawling upon the railroad track was walking directly in front of a locomotive when Miss Albert ran out and carried the tot off just before the engine reached the spot.

HIS STORY A SILLY ONE.

ALLEGED BICYCLE THIEF HELD FOR GRAND JURY.

William Gray Arraigned Before Judge Nash—Received But $10 a Month But Said He Paid $70 for the Bicycle

William Gray, alias William Broadsdale, who is accused of stealing Frank Dencklau's bicycle, two weeks ago, was brought here from New Brunswick yesterday and given a hearing before Justice Nash Gray denied stealing the wheel, but was held to await the action of the Grand Jury.

One night about two weeks ago Dencklau's Eldridge bicycle was left standing outside of Hall's pharmacy on Watchung avenue. When Dencklau went after it later in the evening it was gone. Dencklau reported the matter to the police and a few days afterwards a man riding a wheel answering to the description of the one Dencklau owned was arrested in New Brunswick upon suspicion and given ten days in the county jail under a charge of disorderly conduct to hold him until the case could be investigated. The man gave his name as William Gray, and said that he lived with a farmer near Metuchen.

The New Brunswick police telephoned here to Chief Grant and the Chief and Dencklau went to New Brunswick the next day where Dencklau identified the wheel as his. So when Gray had served his time in New Brunswick he was re-arrested and brought here.

He told a silly story yesterday afternoon when arraigned before Justice Nash. He claimed that he had paid a colored man in Metuchen $70 for the bicycle. He said that he only made $10 a month, yet could afford to pay that fabulous price for the wheel. Gray was an intelligent looking fellow, young, and it surprised the court very much to hear him tangle himself up so in absurd statements.

MARIA TERESA SUNK.

Former Spanish Cruiser Went to the Bottom Near the Bahama Islands.

(Special from the Union Associated Press.)

Charleston, Nov. 5th, 1:40 p. m.—The former Spanish cruiser, Maria Teresa, was sunk off the Bahama Islands Tuesday. The crew aboard of her was saved by the tug accompanying the cruiser.

The Marie Teresa was proceeding under her own steam to Norfolk for repairs after being raised at Santiago harbor. Nothing could be done to save the ship. The cause of her loss has not yet been ascertained.

MAN MORTALLY SHOT.

Victim's Comrades Bind Shooter and Detain Him Over Night Until Arrested.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Somerville, November 5.—Luigi Minichella was taken to the county jail from Bernardsville yesterday afternoon by Constable Totten. The prisoner's wrists and ankles still showed the welts made by the ropes with which he had been kept bound all night, and he was glad to escape with his life from his fellow countrymen, who live in a shanty in Hub Hollow while working upon a dam for a lake in that neighborhood.

Vincenzo Airesto and another Italian quarrelled Thursday night near the shanty in which they live. Minichella interfered, and was hit with a club. That angered him so that he drew a revolver and fired five shots at Airesto, one bullet piercing his wrist and the other entering his left side and lodging in his lung. Dr. Farrow says the man cannot recover.

Comrades of Airesto seized Minichella and tied him with ropes hand and foot and yesterday morning Prosecutor Dungan was informed. He sent Totten to investigate, and he found Minichella tied up in the shanty.

Case was Dismissed.

The assault and battery case of Johan Lawrence against "Tony" Marra, both Italians, came up before Justice Mattison yesterday evening, and on account of an insufficient amount of evidence the case was thrown out. What little evidence was produced was very conflicting and Justice Mattison could not hold the defendant for the Grand Jury.

New Members Elected.

At the meeting of Columbia Lodge A. O. U. W., last night the following four new members were received: John G. Bicknell, William Clawson, George Giddis and Charles E. Codingling.

PASSED AWAY WITH END OF CENTURY.

Mrs. M. Margaretta Cock Died in Her 97th Year.

LIFE ONE OF GOOD DEEDS.

TOOK AN ACTIVE PART IN CHURCH AND CHARITABLE WORK.

Witnessed the Great Progress of Civilization in the 19th Century—Wife of a Leading New York Physician—Removed to Plainfield at His Death and Has Made it Her Home Since.

After nearly completing a century of life, Mrs. M. Margaretta Cock, one of the oldest parishioners of Grace P. E church, passed away quietly last evening at her home on East Fifth street surrounded by her children. It was an eventful life that was ended and one that was filled with good and loving deeds, the activity in which was only lessened by her old age.

Mrs. Cock was born September 12th, 1802, at Lancaster, Pa. She was the daughter of William Riehle, of Philadelphia. In 1836 she was married to Thomas Cock, M. D., then one of the distinguished physicians of New York city. They resided in New York, where Mrs. Cock was one of the patronesses of the Marion Street Lying-in Asylum and also prominently associated in the Society for the Relief of Indigent Widows with Small Children, then one of the most important charities in New York.

Dr. Cock died in 1869, and in the spring of 1871 Mrs. Cock removed to this city where she has resided ever since. In Plainfield she joined the Grace P. E. church and soon became one of the most active workers in the parish. She was for a number of years president of the Parish Aid Society. One of the efforts of that organization resulted in the purchase of the present organ now used in the church.

Mrs. Cock's health gradually declined and her activity became lessened. She has been confined to her room for nearly eleven years up to the time of her death. Although one of the oldest parishoners of the church, Mrs. Cock never set foot in side of the new edifice. She was, nevertheless, greatly interested in the work.

Mrs. Cock witnessed the wonderful growth of civilization during the nineteenth century. Her first visit to New York was made when she was a young woman on a stage coach before the time of the steamboat or locomotive. She afterward traveled over the same country on a fast express. Before her ill health confined her to her home, she saw the telephone in practical use and conversed over it.

Mrs. Cock has been growing weaker and weaker during the last few weeks and it was known that her end was at hand. Dr. Endicott attended her.

There was no pain and yesterday morning she fell into a deep sleep from which she never awakened. At 7:25 o'clock she passed quietly away. Besides the family, Mrs. William Taylor, formerly of Plainfield, and now of Philadelphia, was present at the last. She was a very dear friend.

Mrs. Cock leaves a daughter, Miss Elizabeth R. Cock, and a son, William R. Cock, with whom she has long resided at 235 East Fifth street. She was in her ninety-seventh year.

The funeral services will be held from Grace P. E. church Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

COUNTY BOULEVARD PLANS.

County Detective Has Completed the Work of Securing Consents.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Nov. 5.—County Detective Keron, who was appointed by the Board of Freeholders as a special agent to secure options from property owners on the north side of Westfield avenue, from the Elizabeth city line to the township line of Cranford, has completed his labors, and on November 17th will be ready to make his report to the Board.

Mr. Keron inspected eighty-five pieces of property, all there is on the north side of the avenue, and obtained from the owners a statement of the amounts they wanted for the forty feet of their land that the county needs for the construction of that portion of the county boulevard from Elizabeth to Cranford.

The special committee of the Board of Freeholders having the boulevard scheme under consideration was not ready to report yesterday at the meeting of the Board, but will do so on November 17th.

Wheel Was Not Stolen.

Reginald Chandor, whose wheel was supposed to have been stolen, has come to light. The bike was found in the young man's yard covered with leaves and was not stolen.

DUN'S WEEKLY REVIEW.

Neither the Volume of Business Nor the Value of Manufacture Shows Any Decline

New York, Nov. 5.—Not even the election has disturbed business nor industries on the financial side this week. Although many are doubtless waiting for the votes before borrowing, the volume of business through clearing houses is 8.5 per cent. larger than last year and 1.54 per cent. larger than in 1892.

Neither the volume of business nor the value of manufactured products diminishes. While Bessemer pig is sold against the combination at Pittsburg ten cents lower, with other iron there and elsewhere steady, the general demand crowds on the heels of production.

After seven weeks of strike, the Brockton lasters are asking work on the old terms, having failed to dictate to the machine companies, but new hands are so numerous that shipments from that point have been 52,700 cases against 55,875 last year, during six weeks of the strike. From Boston the shipments have been for five weeks larger than ever before.

Wool holders at Boston have discovered the falsity of reports which they have long believed about the available stocks in this country, and have begun selling largely at concessions said to be "several cents" per pound. The week's sales at the three chief markets were 10,797,400 pounds, against 9,957,902 last year, and 18,561,600 in 1896, but only 8,215,000 in 1892.

Cotton is again at the lowest point ever known, 5.31 cents for spot, while Mr. Neill estimates a crop of 11,500,000 bales, besides large stocks bought over here and abroad. There is nothing to indicate that the foreign demand will be greatly reduced compared with last year, nor will the home demand as a whole, although northern manufacturers may be obliged to curtail production owing to competition at the South. Wheat exports continue very large, amounting to 4,699,576 bushels from Atlantic ports, flour included, against 3,287,536 last year, and 1,029,838 from Pacific ports, against 1,592,252 last year, but the heavy exports have been much more than matched by western receipts of 9,490,092 bushels, against 7,600,993 last year, and prices have not changed materially.

Corn goes abroad largely, 3,011,085 bushels during the week, against 1,812,943 last year, and prices are well held.

Railroad earnings in October thus far reported have been 5.8 per cent. larger than last year and 6.1 per cent. larger than in 1892, notwithstanding the general complaint of cutting of rates, and the returns are on the whole the best of the year thus far.

While domestic exports from New York for four weeks past have been 29 per cent. larger than last year in value, for four weeks past, imports have been also somewhat larger, but the difference indicates another enormous balance in favor of this country, not at present covered by specie movement or by exchange loans, which are growing very heavy.

The country is so largely a creditor that as yet it does not know its own power.

Failures for the week have been 194 in the United States, against 276 last year, and 28 in Canada against 30 last year.

Clyde Liner Burns at Sea.

Vineyard Haven, Mass., Nov. 5.—A disaster at sea, fortunately with a small loss of life—five persons in all—was made known yesterday by the landing of 22 persons who escaped from the burning steamship Croatan of the Clyde line, bound from New York for Wilmington, N. C., and Georgetown S. C.

The disaster occurred on November 1, about eighteen miles north of Cape Charles, and about 206 miles from New York, from which port the steamer sailed on October 31, with a general cargo and eight passengers.

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon the hulk of the big freighter sank beneath the waves, but of the 27 persons who were on board of her only 22 have survived. These persons were landed at this port yesterday afternoon by the schooner Alice E. Clark of Portland, Me., which was in the vicinity of the Croatan at the time she was burning.

Joseph Jefferson Ill.

New York, Nov. 5.—Owing to the sudden and serious illness of Joseph Jefferson, the audience in the Fifth avenue theatre was dismissed at 8.10 o'clock last night.

The illness of Mr. Jefferson is more serious than was supposed at first. He was suffering only from a cold, but his friends now fear that the cold may develop into pneumonia, which, at his time of life, would be exceedingly dangerous.

Charles B. Jefferson, the actor's son, took a hopeful view of the case last night, and said that there was great hope of his father's recovery.

During his engagement at the Fifth avenue theatre Mr. Jefferson has been a guest of the Halland house. In that hotel at midnight it was said that the actor's condition was bad, but no bulletin was issued by his physician.

NO RUPTURE AT PARIS

Yet Spain Refuses to Give Up the Philippines.

OUR GOVERNMENT IS CALM

Discussion of the Question by the Commissioners in Joint Session To-day. An Adjournment Until Next Thursday. No Ultimatum to Be Presented.

Paris, Nov. 5.—The two peace commissions met at two o'clock yesterday afternoon. The Americans were aware before the session opened that the Spaniards would decline their proposal made last Monday to take the entire Philippine archipelago, and pay the debts actually incurred by Spain for the benefit of the islands.

The joint session lasted two hours. The Spaniards, as expected, refused the American proposition, but the negotiations were not broken off.

While it is believed that no formal counter proposition was made, there was a discussion of the Philippine question outside the lines of the American proposals. The commission then adjourned until next Tuesday.

A statement was printed here with much display yesterday morning to the effect that at yesterday's joint session of the peace commissions the Americans were to insist upon a complete surrender of Spain's sovereignty over the Philippine islands, and that in the event of the Spanish commissioners refusing to agree to this, Judge Day, the president of the American commission, acting under instructions from Washington, was to present an ultimatum to the Spaniards.

It was further alleged that thos seeming haste is due to a desire to settle the negotiations before the election in the United States takes place.

Reference is made to these allegations in view of the fact that they may have also been circulated in the United States, although it was known here that they were untrue.

No ultimatum is contemplated. The two commissions are considering an open question, and the Americans expect patiently to weigh all the points involved and carefully to consider the arguments of the Spaniards.

The Gaulois declared that it had been informed on absolutely reliable authority that Spain would refuse to discuss the unconditional surrender of the Philippine islands.

Spain, the paper says, has made particular reserves concerning the retention of the Philippine islands, and the Spanish minister of foreign affairs, the Duke Almodovar de Rio, had, himself, at the time of signing the peace protocol, stipulated that the island of Luzon alone should remain occupied by the American troops while the peace negotiations were in progress, and that Spain would resume sovereignty over the archipelago as soon as a more liberal form of government for the islands should have been decided upon.

The Fronde says: "The claims of the United States on the Philippine islands are looked upon with disfavor at St. Petersburg. The powers might, in the case of America proving too obstinate on this point, be provoked to protest."

The Evenement says: "Your money or your life!" is the attitude taken by America in regard to Spain. The latter having no money, offers Porto Rico and the abandonment of Cuba, and thinks she has thus discharged her ransom. 'Pardon me,' answers Jonathan, 'you yet have the Philippine islands, which are only an incumbrance to you. I will relieve you of them. Why? Because, with Fontaine, I have the strongest reasons for so doing."

Madrid, Nov. 5.—The Imparcial yesterday, commenting upon the peace negotiations in Paris, says:

"If the United States had shown in the protocol their intention to keep the Philippine islands, the matter would not have taken the course it did. Spain has never considered the Philippines as lost, nor has she desired their loss. On the contrary, her intentions were shown by her facing the anger of Germany on the question of the Caroline islands. America, by her conduct, has lost her place among civilized peoples, and henceforth will only count as the most numerous and opulent of hordes."

Washington Awaits Results.

Washington, Nov. 5.—The administration is awaiting results from the peace commission with equanimity in the realization that he government is perfectly well prepared for any turn the negotiations may take. The navy, especially, is in a state of preparedness, should it come to a resumption of hostilities, far in advance of its condition at the outbreak of the war. One by one all the splendid fighting machines of the North Atlantic squadron, which had been brought north at the earliest moment, were docked, cleaned and thoroughly refitted at the New York and Norfolk navy yards.

Their ammunition supplies were replenished, and they are now, with possibly one or two exceptions, ready for instant service in almost any quarter of the globe.

Rear Admiral Dewey has taken considerable precautions in the cases of his own vessels, having dispatched them one by one to the big British docks at Hong Kong, where they have been placed in good condition.

William to Catholics.

Jerusalem, Nov. 5.—Emperor William in visiting the Hospice of St. John and replying to the directors' remark that the building stood under the shadow of the emperor, said:

"This shadow is cast by the same black and white erman shield which is stretched over the Catholics in the far east, who sacrifice their lives and shed their blood in propagating the gospel. To protect them my brother is now in those regions with the mailed power of the imperial navy."

Appointed by the President.

Washington, Nov. 5.—The president has appointed William H. Lucas collector of customs for the district of St. Johns, Florida, and William H. Allaire adjutant general, with the rank of lieutenant colonel of the militia of the District of Columbia.

RACE WAR IN THE SOUTH.

White Men Seize Halls in Newberne.

Newberne, N. C., Nov. 5.—The white men have seized the public halls and will prevent the negroes from holding mass meetings here, because at recent gatherings negro orators advised lawlessness and bloodshed if necessary on election day.

Manufacturers and farmers have begun discharging negro employes, one of the former having dropped forty from his pay roll.

The demand for guns and ammunition by the whites and negroes is heavy.

Wilmington, Nov. 5.—Everything is quiet here and there is now no reason to believe that there will be any serious trouble before, on, or after the day of election.

So far as any race conflict is concerned, the situation here has lost interest.

The Republican county convention met last night and a motion to adjourn sine die without making any nominations for county officers was adopted unanimously.

The registration book of the North Williams precinct, in Columbus county, which mysteriously disappeared a day or two ago, was produced by the fusion registrars yesterday morning.

Frank McNeil, a Democratic lawyer, sent from Wilmington, threatened immediate prosecution of the registrars if the registration book was not forthcoming.

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 5.—The outlook yesterday at noon was that the election next Tuesday will be a quiet affair and that no serious disturbance will take place at the polls.

The acquittal of Captain Kitchen and others charged with intimidating a registrar is cited by Democrats as an evidence that the reports of intimidation were exaggerated.

Sailing of the Buffalo.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 5.—The departure of the cruiser Buffalo for the Philippines was the only event to disturb the customary quietness of the navy yard yesterday.

The cruiser was scheduled to sail from port at eleven o'clock, but it was nearer twelve when the big hawsers securing her to the dock were thrown off and the steel clad vessel drifted out into the middle of the East river.

For two hours previous to the time set for sailing there was quite a crowd of people on the dock.

Those composing the crowd were principally relatives of the six hundred blue jackets who comprise the crew of the Buffalo.

The loading of stores for the ships of Rear Admiral Dewey was kept up until the last moment.

Many of the sailors appeared to be sorry that they were going away and others could not coneal their delight. Farewells were waved as the ship moved away from the dock.

Chief Pilot Frank Bell took charge of the Buffalo and took her out as far as the Tompkinsville anchorage, where a Sandy Hook pilot relieved him and started the ship off on her long voyage. The Buffalo will go by way of the Suez canal.

Gould's Match Factory Idle.

Paterson, N. J., Nov. 5.—Over three hundred employes of the Edwin Gould Match Manufacturing Company of Bloomfield avenue, Passaic, were loitering around the works yesterday waiting to see if the company would open the factory and yield to the demand of the one hundred and fifty women employed in packing matches, that a cut in their wages be restored.

The company cannot run off a larger quantity of matches than can be handled by the packers daily, as it fears combustion.

It has been paying these packers, who are mostly Slavs and Huns, six and one-half cents a gross.

The company notified the hands on Wednesday last that a cut was to follow of one and one-half cents on each gross.

The strike followed and the company promptly cleared the factory.

The women packers threaten trouble for any one who takes their places. The firm says that the strikers will not be taken back.

The rest of the hands cannot work unless the packers are working.

The Fourth Ohio from Porto Rico.

New York, Nov. 5.—The transport Chester came up the bay yesterday morning. She had on board the Fourth Ohio infantry, Colonel A. B. Coit commanding.

The Chester was met down the bay by the government steamer Gen. Meigs, on which the sick men, Arthur P. Bagby, Company M; George W. Hill Company G, and Forest S. Briggs, Company H, were placed. They have typhoid or malarial fever.

Besides the Fourth Ohio there were on board the Chester a paymaster's guard of twelve artillerymen and a sergeant, who left here some time in September, as guard to Major Doyen, paymaster, United States volunteers.

These soldiers belonged at Fort Hamilton and they were sent there together with the sick men.

Later in the day the Chester drew alongside the Baltimore and Ohio dock at Communipaw and discharged the regiment on to trains to go to Columbus, O.

Three Judges on Trial

Wheeling, W. Va., Nov. 5.—The spectacle of a county court, the law makand executive body of a district, being on trial after it had been indicted by citizens in mass meeting for malfeasance, is one of the novelties now attracting legal attention in West Virginia.

At Moundsville, Marshall county, the county court judges, S. R. Davis, G. F. Gray and William Giesler, are on trial in the circuit court for being lavish in expending public money.

The president of the board, Judge Davis, was the first one called to the bar.

Probably one-tenth of the voters in the county have been summoned upon the case, which is one of the most interesting ones in the history of the state's courts.

Justin McCarthy Coming Here.

JOINT TRAFFIC ENDS

Railroad Men Meet and Dissolve the Association.

REPRESENT THIRTY ROADS

Recent Decision of the Supreme Court Declaring It Illegal Necessitates Its Dissolution. Committee Appointed to Settle the Accounts.

New York, Nov. 5.—Railroad presidents and chief executive officers, together with an array of railroad counsel, gathered at the Central building, at the foot of Liberty street, yesterday, to decide the fate of the Joint Traffic Association.

The association has been declared illegal, and a violation of the Sherman anti-trust law by the United States supreme court, and it was to take formal action regarding the court's decision and to decide as to the future course of the railroads that this meeting, which was that of the board of control of the association, was called by the board's chairman, Chauncey M. Depew.

Mr. Depew presided at the meeting.

More than thirty railroads were represented at the meeting by their presidents and chief executive officers.

It was the general opinion that the supreme court's decision left but one course to be taken regarding the association—the announcement of its formal dissolution.

As to the future of the railroads and what action might be taken toward continuing some general organization, there was much less definiteness. Some of the railroad officers held the opinion that increased power should be given to the existing Trunk Line Association, which in that event would become the successor association of the Joint Traffic Association, though, of course, it could not assume such work of that association as has been declared illegal by the supreme court.

Another proposition has been that a statistical and information bureau be formed by the railroads, to take over the valuable records of the Joint Traffic Association, and to become a sort of rallying point for the officers of the various companies.

In the face of the supreme court decision, however, it would appear that no association would be legal whose avowed purpose was the making of rate and traffic agreements.

While it was generally agreed that the abolishment of the Joint Traffic Association as at present constituted would be decided upon, another important result of the meeting was expected to be the reaching of an agreement by the railroads to unite in an application for congressional relief.

Chairman Chauncey M. Depew made the following statement before entering the meeting room:

"There is no question but that the Joint Traffic Association will have to dissolve, and no effort will be made to form a new association until after legislation by Congress."

Iowa Volunteers Sailed for Manila.

San Francisco, Nov. 5.—The transport Pennsylvania, with the Fifty-first regiment of Iowa volunteers on board, sailed Friday evening for Manila. The regiment numbered 1,028 officers and men and the transport is in charge of Colonel Lopers.

Since the Iowans came to San Francisco deaths and discharges have reduced the ranks of the regiment by 300 men.

The transport City of Puebla will sail for Manila to-day.

She is to carry Companies D, G, H, I and K of the First Tennessee regiment; Troop A, of the Nevada cavalry, a detachment of recruits for the Twenty-third infantry, and several hospital stewards with two acting surgeons. It may be owing to the surplus of room on the City of Puebla that her assignment may be increased by the addition of the Wyoming battery, which has only about ninety men, and is assigned to the Newport.

The sailing of the Newport has been fixed for Tuesday next.

A number of civilians will go on the Newport, including several women, among them being the wife and the daughter of Brigadier General Miller and the daughter of Major Genera Anderson.

Dinner for Lord Herschell.

New York, Nov. 5—A dinner will be given to Right Hon. Lord Herschell, late lord chancellor of Great Britain, president of the joint high commission of Great Britain and the United States for the adjustment of Canadian questions, by the Lotus Club this evening, and it promises to be one of the most brilliant entertainments of the kind ever given by the club.

Among the prominent speakers who will be present are Hon. Bourke Cockran, Dr. Chauncey M. Depew, Seth Low, Elihu Root, Joseph H. Choate and Rev. Dr. Henry van Dyke.

Gen. Renouard Removed.

Paris, Nov. 5.—The minister of war, M. De Freycinet, has signed a decree removing Genera Renouard from the head of the general staff and appointing him to the command of the Eleventh army corps at Nantes.

It is suggested that the minister's action was due to General Renouard's attitude in regard to the secret documents in the Dreyfus case.

General Brault has been appointed to succeed General Renouard.

Held Up and Robbed Near Boston.

Boston, Nov. 5.—Jackson Dawson, superintendent of the Arnold Arboretum, was knocked down and robbed by two men last evening on a lonely road in Jamaica Plain.

The robbers stole a check for $200, a gold watch and chain and a small amount of cash.

No clue to the robbers' identity has been obtained.

Eighth Now Mustered Out.

New York, Nov. 5.—The mustering out of the Eighth New York volunteers was concluded yesterday at the armory of the Eighth regiment, Ninety-fourth street and Park avenue.

Six companies, the remainder of the regiment, were on the floor at nine o'clock to be released and paid off.

DUPUY SILENT ON FASHODA.

Declaration of New French Ministry Contains No Reference to Foreign Affairs.

Paris, Nov. 5.—The declaration of the new Ministry, made in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday contained no particular reference to foreign affairs, especially to Fashoda.

The statement, after affirming the supremacy of civil power, says that the Government will make the army respected and will also assure the execution of the decrees of justice in the permanent interests of the country. The prime object of the Ministry will be to neglect nothing to conserve what the country's loyalty, strength and love of peace has won and to strengthen this situation, which a precious alliance has consecrated, in the eyes of the world.

"Our foreign policy," the statement adds, "will be inspired by the interests of the country, and the ministry will preoccupy itself to proportion its efforts to the value of the end in view. We are a cabinet of Republican union. We wish to vote a budget to secure the success of the exposition, to vote a law for the reform of the sale of drinks, and also laws for rural insurance and pensions for aged workers.

The chamber by a large majority passed a vote of confidence in the ministry.

An interpellation on Fashoda was presented in the chamber but M. Delcasse, foreign minister, refused to discuss the subject, as its debate at this time would compromise national interests.

THE SITUATION IN CHINA.

The Reactionary Spirit Said to Be in the Ascendant.

Pekin, Nov. 5.—In spite of the formal promises of the Tsung-li-Yamen, there is every indication of a concerted move of Chinese troops in the neighborhood of the capital.

t is said that Kang-yi, the high Manchu official who was next to rank to the late Prince Kung in the Kiun-ki-tehu, or council of state, has obtained great influence over the dowager empress.

He is bitterly anti-foreign and hopeessly conservative.

It is probable that Kang-yi was the suggester of the edict re-establishing the bow and arow exercise for the Chinese soldiers.

It is reported that Yuan-shek-hai the Chinese general in command of the foreign drilled troops at Tientsin, and an officer whose power is much dreaded by the dowager empress and her advisers, has received a grant of money, ostensibly for the purpose of increasing the strength of his division to thirty thousand men, "if time shows that the dowager empress can rely upon his fidelity."

It has been said that Yuan-Shek-hai might use his troops in conformity with the views of the foreign ministers at Pekin.

Mrs. Helmuth Reelected.

New York, Nov. 5.—When the delegates of the fourth annual convention of the State Federation of Women's clubs assembled at Mendelssohn hall, yesterday morning, for the fourth and last day of their session, the first topic upon which views were aired was "The Press."

There had to be some topic, for the ballots cast yesterday for Mrs. Helmuth as president were in process of counting, and were not to be reported until afternoon.

It was announced at three o'clock the election had resulted as follows:

President—Mrs. Helmuth.

Vice President—Mrs. Cornelius Zabriskie of Brooklyn.

Second Vice President—Mrs. Harry Hastings.

Recording Secretary—Mrs. Frank D. Church of Wellesvile.

Corresponding secretary—Miss Annie Rhodes of Staten Island.

Treasurer—Mrs. Milton Northrup of Syracuse.

The vote for president was as follows:

Mrs. Helmuth, 204; Mrs. Montgomery of Rochester, 5; Mrs. Backus of Brooklyn, 2.

London Honors Kitchener.

London, Nov. 5.—The freedom of the city and a magnificent sword of honor were conferred upon Major General Kitchener at the Guildhall yesterday.

The sword is of the finest steel damascened with gold, the hilt bearing the Sirdar's monogram in diamonds, rubies and sapphires.

He was in full uniform and rode in an open carriage with three of his officers.

The crowd greeted General Kitchener with repeated cheers, which he acknowledged by bowing.

Small-pox in Holguin.

Santiago de Cuba, Nov. 5.—Captain R. S. Woodson, the medical officer who accompanied Colonel Hood to Gibara, has returned to Santiago and made a verbal report to General Wood in regard to the smallpox epidemic in the Holguin district.

He said that it was impossible to exaggerate the situation. There are more than five thousand cases in the district and half of the town of Gibara is infected.

News from Australia.

Victoria, B. C., Nov. 5.—The steamer Arorangi, which arrived yesterday from Australia, via Honolulu, brings news of a large fire at Sydney, October 8, in which was destroyed twenty large mills.

Drought has played havoc with the Australian wheat fields. The commissioner of agriculture says there will not be enough wheat for the local demand.

10 to 6 on Pennsylvania.

Cambridge, Nov. 5.—There has been little betting on the result of the football game so far. A pool of one thousand dollars of Pennsylvania money was laid here last night against $600 on Harvard. At present that is about the prevailing odds.

Powers Occupy Canea.

The administrative offices are all occupied by foreigners except the Turkish post office and telegraph office, which remains provisionally under Ottoman control. The christians and Mussulmans are friendly.

GERMANY AND TURKEY

Emperor William's Compact with the Sultan.

a RIVAL ENGLISH SCHEME

A Guarantee of Protection in Return for Valuable Commercial Advantages. A Railroad to the Persian Gulf. Check to a Russian Advance Through Erzerum.

London, Nov. 5.—Information from a high official source here suggests that the German emperor and the sultan have come to an understanding of the highest importance.

The belief is that the kaiser has promised the sultan protection and to insure the maintenance of the Turkish empire's integrity, in return for exceptional German commercial and industrial privileges in Asia Minor.

German instructors having shown in the Greco-Turkish war what they could do for the Turkish army, German traders and capitalists now will be given full opportunity to show what they can do for Turkish commerce.

Permission has been granted to the Austolian Company to extend the Skurbekir and Bagdadt othe Persian gulf. tari-Angora-Kouieh line through Dia- This has great strategic value to Turkey, seeing that these places are in the district of the Sixth corps of the Turkish army, while this union of the sea of Marmora with the Persian gulf, with the erection of a fort at Haidar Pasha, gives an immense impetus to German commercial influence, and, in the opinion of the sultan, constitutes an effectual check to any advance of Russia from Erzerum.

Moreover, with the completion of the contemplated changes, Smyrna and Skutari in Asia Minor and Alexandretta, Beirut, Haida, Akka and Yafa, in Palestine, will be within the radius of an efficient loop line service, which will furnish more important markets with connecting transit.

Asiatic Turkey comes within the zone of German influence by the power of these contracts. It is also noteworthy that an English syndicate is employing Count Kaprist, brother of the Russian ambassador at Vienna, to negotiate for rights to connect Tripoli, via Syria and Mesopotamia, and the valley of the Euphrates, with the Persian gulf.

British Naval Activity.

London, Nov. 5.—The Central News says there is reason to believe that the admiralty will shortly organize a formidable cruiser division as an emergency fleet.

The work of getting the ships ready, in fact, has already been started.

A dispatch to the Central News from Paris says that the evacuation of Fashoda is assured. The Ministry has been largely influenced in taking this course by the pressure of representations from various towns which memorilizes the Government in favor of peace. The tone of the newspapers is now less pessimestic.

The French and Russian Ambassadors caled at the Foreign Office this afternoon and conferred with Lord Salisbury.

Prior to these conferences, Mr. Gochen, First Lord of the Admirality, had an extended interview with the Premier.

To Reform New Possesions.

Washington, Nov. 5.—A call has been issued for a National Christian citizenship convention, to be held here December 3 to 15, to discuss whether suffrage should be limited by educational tests in the new island territories, or civil service reform be extended there. They will discuss, also, if the national laws forbidding prize fights and bull fights, restricting divorce and forbidding bigamy and related evils, and the American civil Sabbath should be extended to these islands.

The call is signed by Josiah Strong, president of the Society for Social Service, New York; Anthony Comstock, secretary of the Society for the Prevention of Vice, New York; Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, W. C. T. U., Boston, and Mrs. M. D. Ellis, W. C. T. U., of Newark.

Pensions for Ex-Confederates.

Dallas, Texas, Nov. 5.—The constitutional amendment voted on last Tuesday, authorizing the pensioning of ex-Confederate soldiers, was adopted, though the full returns are not yet in.

It provided that all ex-Confederates who settled in Texas prior to 8880 are eligible to pensions, but no one shall receive more than eight dollars per month, and the annual appropriation for pensions shall not exceed the sum of $250,000.

Secretary of State Madden estimates that there are forty-eight thousand ex-Confederates in the state, a majority of whom have settled in the state since 1880, and are, therefore, not eligible. A majority of the ex-Confederates voted against the amendment. The negroes also voted against it.

Distress of the Cuban Army.

Washington, Nov. 5.—A letter from Lieutenant Colonel Carbonne of the Cuban army, now at Havana, has been received by Secretary Quesada of the Cuban delegation here, who has laid it before Secretary Alger, with an urgent request that steps be taken to relieve the extreme distress it sets forth.

Lieutenant Colonel Carbonne is regarded as the representative at Havana of the Cuban leaders and forces in the field.

Secretary Alger said that he would look into the matter and would telegraph the commission at Havana such instructions as were appropriate to the case.

Mr. Platt's Bank to Resume.

Washington, Nov. 5.—Comptroller of the Currency Dawes has authorized the Tioga National Bank to resume business.

This was the result of a long conference between Senator Platt, the president of the bank, his son Frank Platt, and Comptroller Dawes.

The latter was shown that by the investigation of the bank examiner the bank was not affected by the defalcation of the cashier, and so permission was given for it to resume.

The Country is Safe.

Tonight practically ends of the campaign in New Jersey, one of the most aggressive on the part of both the Democrats and the Republicans that has been witnessed in some years. While both sides are indulging in exhaustive claims of probable victory there can be no certainty either one way or the other until the votes are cast.

Personalities have crept into the campaign arguments in many sections of the State—happily, this particular section is free from them—but in a general way the issues have been fought out with the strongest arguments that both sides could get together to impress and convince voters to whom they are appealing. While the Democrats have confined most of their arguments to State affairs, only now and then devoting criticism of the treatment of the soldiers by the McKinley administration, the Republicans on the other hand have indulged copiously in National issues, though not neglecting New Jersey affairs in the light of what the Republicans have done and what they think the Democrats will do if elevated to office next Tuesday.

In the heat of political talk many things are said and done detremental to political candidates, but taken in calm consideration both the Republicans and Democrats have nominated exceptionally good tickets this year. Political orators and campaign literature predict dire results no matter who wins, but, of course, we all know that after election the American flag will float as proudly as ever, the American eagle will screech with its old time vigor and the country will continue to be the most glorious in the land.

A number of citizens of Cranford, who have banded themselves under an organization known as the Union County League, will make a stand against the county trolley project in the Supreme Court next Monday morning, when application will be made for the issuing of a writ of certiorari to prevent the consummation of the plan. The arguments will be made by R. V. Lindabury. The Cranford Chronicle saucily terms the Board of Freeholders "Bergen's."

Dr. O. L. Jenkins, who is now serving his second term as a member of the School Board, will be a candidate for re-election this year. Mr. Jenkins has served his constituents in a faithful manner and they have no doubt appreciated his services.

CAPTAIN D. C. COLLINS, Candidate for Assembly.

The Bound Brook State Centre is making especially efforts for the Democratic success in North Plainfield. This week they issue a special North Plainfield edition, in which they make particular appeal to borough voters.

The man who selected the wargraph pictures at the Democratic meeting in Reform Hall last night ought to have been fired out bodily for the indiscretion he exhibited in some of the pictures thrown on the screen.

A truthful sage was he who said that the man who pays as he goes, seldom goes fast enough to overheat himself.

After next Tuesday the only men who will admit that they are in politics will be the ones elected to office.

It is said that labor is a good cure for melancholy. We seldom hear of a laborer traveling the suicide route.

The best sort of a politician at this juncture in the campaign is the man who keeps his temper.

But one more working day before the votes are cast.

Who is going up Salt River?

—The Board of Health report that there is not a case of contagious disease in the city.

—John R. Leland, of West Second street, lost a valuable horse last night through the colic.

—The item appearing in the News last evening that the G. A. R. is to take part in a political meeting in the borough this evening, is untrue. The rules and regulations of the G. A. R. are such that the comrades are pledged not to mix in politics.

ROGER F. MURRAY. Candidate for Assembly.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

"Where is Benson?" will be fully explained tonight at Stillman Music Hall when the celebrated company of New York players appear in the comedy of that name. As before noted it is said to be one of the funniest and best fake comedies ever presented to the public and far ahead of the famous "My Friend from India" which had such a long run in New York. "Where is Benson?" is likewise booked for a long run and by the same company that will appear here tonight. Wherever the play has been performed it has been highly praised and in its present state of perfectness cannot fail to please.

* * * * *

As a dramatization, "The Sunshine of Paradise Alley," Denman Thompson and George W. Ryer's latest offering to the stage, which will be seen here for the first time in Music Hall Monday night, is, without doubt, one of the most successful plays produced during the past two seasons, and as a pecuniary success it has scarcely an equal. That it will remain so for an indefinite time to come nobody, conversant with affairs theatrical, doubts. It was first produced in New York two years ago and was a success from the start. The company which comes here is of picked excellence and comprises twenty players, the Boston Verdi Ladies' Quartette and the Acme Male Quartette. The scenery and electrical effects are unusually fine, and are the same as used in the original production in New York.

—Captain Thomas, from the Salvation Army headquarters, will sing Sunday afternoon at the Y. M. C. A. meeting.

—The few contagious disease cases in the borough at present are all improving and no new cases have been reported.

—The Christian Endeavor Society meeting at the First Baptist church last evening was largely attended and full of interest.

Patrolman Watson was off duty last evening on account of illness.

MAKING IT PLAIN.

Values crowd each other as the season advances; they clamor for a place in print; perhaps one in twenty gets it. Last month we broke a record, and the next 'twill be the same. We own the goods to do it with; we have the nerve to cut prices right through every department, not on half-a-dozen articles for baits, but every dollar's worth of goods in the store. It means much to you from a money-saving standpoint.

PRICE BREAKS

In Silks among the manufacturers means Price Breaks here; you get the full benefit of it, and it means much. Over one thousand yards of Handsome Silks that were $1 to $1.75 the yard will go for 79c yd.

DRESS GOODS

We have too many of certain lots, a backward season is to blame for it, and when the values remain the same the prices are badly twisted. About 100 pieces of Skirt and Waist Lengths, were 40, 50 and 75c yd, now 25c yd. Fifty pieces of Fancies, were 50 and 75c yd, now 29c yd. Twenty-five pieces of Imported Novelties, were 75c yd, now 49c.

WHITE QUILTS.

About one hundred of them manufacturers samples, full size, handsome quilts, staple as wheat, but they go to you at half value—were $1.25 to $3, now 69c to $1.75.

BLANKETS

and Comfortables—many who read this will feel bound to buy blankets and comfortables. We sell for $2.49 a ten-quarter all-wool blanket; no one can match it under $3.50. 98c buys a full-size white cotton filled Comfortable.

The Cutaway Coat.

The cutaway jacket, which is one of the popular forms of outdoor garments designed for this autumn, though a very severe garment, is extremely stylish in appearance and is a fad which not appealing to the generality of womankind will undoubtedly prove popular to the woman of exclusive tastes.

A jacket of this description built of castor colored Venetian cloth, moulded the figure like a gloe and fastened slightly to one side of the front with six small velvet covered buttons. A soft fluffy feather boa encircles the neck and tends to soften the mannish aspect of the coat. A saucy little toque of satin and straw is trimmed in front with black velvet and wings.

Handsome Rugs.

Probably the most satisfactory inexpensive rug is one of body Brussels carpet. These are usually kept in stock at the large carpet-houses, made from remnants as they accumulate. They can be had in various sizes from a square of nine feet or even somewhat less to a size that will serve in a large room. They come, too, in beautiful Persian patterns, and well made as they are, with borders carefully matched and seams lined and pressed, they are both handsome and durable. A good domestic Smyrna costs a little more, and has the added advantage of use on both sides. The ingrain art squares are not to be recommended in a room where the wear is at all serious. They are useful and effective, as they come in excellent designs, for light service, their extreme cheapness being another advantage. The imported rugs of this character are more durable, as they ought to be, costing twice as much or more, but their patterns are rather dull, and their grade of colors limited and difficult to tone with furnishings. Jute rugs are to be found in most attractive patterns and in a variety of colorings, dark and light, and at a very low price. They should be purchased, however, with the knowledge that their wearing qualities are poor.

Dainty Sandwiches.

The scented sandwiches, such as clover, nasturtium, rose and violet, in vogue with very dainty people, are made by covering both the bread and butter with the leaves or flowers, allowing them to remain over night, and then simply serving the bread and butter sandwich. Thim the crusts from the loaf of bread, put it into a large soup tureen in a bed of clover or any highly scented flower; wrap the butter in a piece of cheese-cloth and put it also in a tureen; cover with clover. Next day the butter and bread will be filled with the flavor and odor of clover.

For afternoon teas nut sandwiches, mixed fruit sandwiches, or slices of chopped fruit which have been firmly pressed together, using no bread whatever, may be used.

Pignolias or pine nuts, black walnuts, almonds and pecans may all be put through a meat chopper, mixed, a very little salt added, and spread over bread.

"Wilhelmina" jackets, hats, ties, and blue in some of the most beautiful shades we have ever seen these dyes produced in appear among tailor cloths, velvets, etc., for autumn gowns, and the trace of white needed appears on the silk or satin revers, vests, guimpes, and plastron or blouse fronts of the waist or jacket. In millinery these colors are quite as prominent, and in the red shades particularly are some dahlia and damask tints with a military name that are superb examples of the dyer's art.

Jawer (half awake): "Look here Maria, this is coming it too strong. Didn't I give you all I had when I came home?"

Select Winter Gowns Early.

It is a question to many women whether it is advisable to select fabrics for winter gowns as early as this, in view of the fact that new designs and materials are constantly added to the importer's display during the entire autumn season. On the other hand, it is very certain that with so many different weaves put upon the market, the early shoppers have unlimited choice, which is not afforded them later on. This has been proved over and over again by women who have bought some stylish or handsome texture when it first appeared, and later on, wishing to match these same goods, have been unable to do so. No duplicates are imported in a single season or year. It is therefore a very good rule to make a purchase of an entirely satisfying pattern or weave when one finds it, be it early or late; to hesitate and decide to wait is generally to lose the fabric desired or admired, especially in a city where tons of material are sold in a single day.

Where Cyclists are Benefactors.

It is a strange idea to many folk that this could be so anywhere, but far away in Siam, where bicycling is the pleasure of princes and nobles, it seems likely to have an enormous effect for the benefit of the country.

Up till now the roads in Siam have been, excepting in the towns, few in number and very bad. It is clearly no good to be an enthusiastic cyclist without the roads on which to ride, and the Siamese aristocracy have fully realized the fact. The result is that new roads are to be made which will be practical for the pneumatic tire, and incidentally of the greatest service commercially, for hitherto an immense amount of the produce of the country has been wasted for lack of the means for taking it into the towns for sale. It is hoped that the fashionable bicycling craze may result in a good system of roadways throughout the country.

Egg Croquettes.

Egg croquettes were a decided novelty taught recently to her class by a cooking-school demonstrator. Six hard-boiled eggs were cut into small dice, about a quarter of an inch in size. With these were mixed a few mushrooms chopped fine. A white sauce made of milk, flour, and butter, with a little onion juice, had been provided, and into this the eggs and mushrooms were stirred carefully before being packed in a cold bowl and set on the ice to stiffen. When chilled the mixture was moulded into croquettes, dipped in egg and powdered breadcrumbs, and fried in a basket in hot fat. They were served on a folded napkin laid on a platter, and were garnished with parsley and slices of lemon.

Handy Tweed Costume.

Go where the shopper may, tweeds and cheviots, both smooth and shaggy, and of almost every conceivable color, thickness and quality, meet the eye. For utility costumes these materials are in as great demand as ever, and with good reason, for they are at once natty in effect, useful and stylish in pattern, and have the additional advantage of requiring but little trimming. Notwithstanding the rage for elaborate decoration, there is no radical change this season in the style of making the tailor gown, and good taste is still shown in the construction of both skirt and bodice. In the first place, elaborate effects would be out of place on a tailor gown designed for any sort of practical wear, and then there are certain limitations due to the weight of the fabrics composing them, even supposing that trimmings were allowable.

Excellent Polish.

A furniture-polish that may be made at home, and which is reliable, needs for a foundation half a pint of linseed oil. This should be boiled and put into a stone pipkin, two ounces of yellow wax, cut in thin shavings, being added. Set the pot in a saucepan of boiling water until the wax is thoroughly melted, then strain through muslin, and stir constantly until cool. Add a quarter of a pint of spirits of turpentine and a quarter of a pint of vinegar; mix thoroughly and bottle.

Fringes and Buttons.

Fringes of every width and buttons in every variety of shape and size are shown with other new things in the way of dress trimmings, and among the very old-fashioned revivals is a cape in long shawl-point shape, both front and back finished with a fringe about eight inches deep, with a knotted network at the top—a style in fashion when Queen Victoria was in her teens.

Lovely Color Effects.

Many beautiful dyes have been added to the season's color list, which are effective offsets to shades already familiar, notable Roman red, a superb color that will be much used for dress accessories and autumn and winter millinery. The color is neither crimson, cherry, nor geranium. Cranberry jelly, held up to the light in a clear crystal glass, gives the nearest reflection of its rich, beautiful tone.

Home-Made Ice Cream.

Home-made ice-cream sometimes turns out buttery, to the dismay and surprise of its producer. To prevent this condition, it is obligatory that the scalded and unbeaten cream should be put together and thoroughly chilled before the dasher of the freezer is turned.

Black gowns of lovely transparent or semi-diaphanous weaves over silk or satin, and in heavier materials for day wear, will take high place in the ranks of fashion for the two seasons before us.

A HAPPY MISTAKE.

"Daisy, did I hear you promise that—that fellow to go to the picnic with him next Tuesday?"

"What fellow?" asked Daisy icily.

"You know who I mean." Dick was pale with jealousy and wrath.

"I presume that I can go with whom I choose," answered Daisy, haughtily.

"So you can; and I want you now to make your choice; but I tell you, once for all, that if you throw me over for that Fenwick you will be done with me forever."

"What right have you to speak to me in that tone? I am not your slave, and I shall go with Doctor Fenwick to the picnic."

"Very well," he said shortly, and turning on his heel, walked off in the direction of the barn.

As Daisy entered the cool dining-room Miss Maria was standing at the window with her arms akimbo, gazing after Dick.

"That boy," she said solemnly, "that boy ain't himself. I shouldn't be surprised if he's driven to do something desp'rate," and she looked resentfully at Daisy.

"You don't eat anything, Daisy," kindly said Uncle Edward, who never saw much of what was going on right before his eyes. "Maybe you think the weather's too warm for hot rolls and cakes? Well, take some iced milk and berries. Why, bless me! What's the mater with the child?"

Daisy had burst into tears.

"Please, uncle—aunt—excuse me," she said, and hastily left the room.

She did not go up-stairs, but out of doors where she could relieve her heart by sobbing unseen and unheard. Passing through the garden and the orchard, she followed the little foot-path which led to a pretty strip of woodland, where in a cool ravine ran a narrow but rather deep stream between mossy banks.

There had been a little rustic bridge leading to the hillside beyond, but this had been lately washed away, after a heavy rain and—wasn't that Dick, his arms folded, with his eyes bent upon the deep pool which the rocks had just here pent in?

A sudden fear seized Daisy. Surely, surely, Dick could not be thinking of drowning himself. She stood still and breathless, watching him.

Presently he started, as if from a revery, and with his lips compressed into a firm look of resolve, picked up a coil of rope which lay at his feet. Then he walked round and round a tall, straight tree, growing close to the edge of the stream, loking up into its thick foliage as if for a convenient branch to which to attach it.

For a moment she felt paralyzed, but as she saw Dick carefully make a noose on one end of the rope, and prepare to climb the tree, the spell was broken. She rushed forward with a wild shriek and threw her arms about him.

"Oh, Dick—dear Dick—don't do such a dreadful thing. Don't hang yourself, Dick—for my sake, don't. Oh, forgive me, dear Dick, and I'll never tease or grieve you again."

He looked down into the white face of the sobbing girl, and his stern eyes softened. But then he said gloomily—

"How can I believe you, Daisy? You have as good as told me that you do not love me, and without you I don't care to live."

"Don't talk so dreadfully, Dick! I—I do love you."

"Answer me truly, Daisy. Do you really love me?"

"Yes," sobbed the girl. "Indeed I do, Dick! Please throw away that dreadful rope!"

"Not yet, Daisy. Do you love me above everybody else in the world?"

"Yes—oh, yes."

"And you will marry me, Daisy?"

"Yes, I will, Dick; indeed I will!"

Dick flung the coil of rope into a thicket of laurel on the other side of the stream, and drawing Daisy to him, kissed her solemnly.

"Remember you have promised to be my wife, Daisy."

"Yes," she answered meekly. And so, hand in hand, they returned through the orchard and the garden to the house.

Uncle Edward was sitting on the top step of the porch contentedly smoking his pipe.

"Well, Dick," said he, cheerfully, "have you fixed that tree with the rope all ready to pull it down in the right direction?"

"No," answered Dick, quietly, "I'll attend to it to-morrow."

"Well, don't forget it, for the sooner that bridge is finished the better, if we want to get the hay over in good time."

Daisy stopped and looked straight up into Dick's face.

"You have deceived me," she said, indignantly.

"No, Daisy, I haven't; you deceived yourself, dear, and I'm very glad of it, I assure you."

"Glad," said Daisy, reproachfully, and with her face all crimson with blushes.

"Because but for that I might never have gotten you to say 'yes;' and we might both have been forever miserable. But how happy we are going to be for all the rest of our lives."

"Still, it was a dreadfully mean trick," Daisy murmured, "and if you ever say a word about it to any one I'll never forgive you—never."

MY MATCH MAKING.

My scheme was that a marriage should be arranged between Uncle James and Miss Stubbs.

We met Miss Stubs while we were traveling in Switzerland. She was a little, timid, washed-out old maid.

"My dear," she said to me one day when we had become intimate with each other, "dont say you want to see life—seeing is dreary work. I never wanted to see life, I wanted to live life; but I have never done either.

I took her thin little hand in mine and stroked it.

"Were you unhappy when you were young?" I asked.

"Oh, no, not unhappy, my dear; but not happy, either. I am not complaining, for everyone was very kind to me, and ready to give me little scraps of their lives to share; but no one seemed to realize that I wanted a life of my own."

"Poor Miss Stubbs!" I whispered.

"It is very kind of you to be sorry for me, my dear Madge, but really I am not complaining. I have had a very peaceful compared with many women!"

"But did you never fall in love?" I asked, with extreme boldness.

The pale blue eyes filled with tears.

"Yes, dear Madge. And I should like to tell you about it, only there is nothing to tell."

"Do tell me what happened," I urged.

"Nothing happened. I once met, some one whom I loved very much, and I think he loved me; but I am not even sure of that. I sometimes feel I'd give everything I have is I could only be sure of that, but I am not. He was a young man who had his way to make in the world, but my dear father—as I have told you before—thought a great deal of our family and position, and considered the man I loved was not good enough for me. So he just put a stop to our friendship."

"And you tamely submitted?"

"What else could I do? My dear father was a very stern man and I dared not disobey him."

"What was your lover like?" I asked.

"Oh, my dear, he was the handsomest man I ever saw, with such attractive manners," she replied.

"Was he tall?" I asked. (Being five-foot-nine myself, I had a profound contempt for little men).

"Yes, dear, and such a fine figure; nice broad shoulders, you know, and a splendid carriage."

I was filled with pity for poor Miss Stubbs; it seemed so sad to go through life without ever really living, as she had done; and thus it was that my great scheme occurred to me.

What a good thing it would be if Uncle James would marry Miss Stubbs, and so give her some comfort at the end of her life.

Uncle James was a worthy, middle-aged bachelor—rather short and increasingly stout—and was the apotheosis of commonplace respectability.

He possessed a kind heart and a dogmatic manner; and he lived chiefly at his club, and thought a great deal too much about things to eat.

I divulged my scheme to mother.

Mother laughed.

"I should be very glad for your uncle to marry," she said, "as it worries me to think of him all alone, especially when he is gouty. But how could you expect him, or any other man, to fall in love with that faded old maid?"

"Oh! I don't expect him to fall in love," I replied; "he is far too old. But I should like to see Miss Stubbs comfortably settled, and I am sure she would be a good, peaceful, little wife. Besides, Uncle James isn't exactly the sort of person to win a beautiful princess for his bride."

"Poor James! And yet he had his beautiful princess once, like other men."

"Tell me about it mother. You don't mean that that prosaic old uncle of mine was ever in love?"

"I do, though; he was dreadfully in love once, years and years ago. He used to tell me lots about the girl, and how happy he would be if only he could win her, though he hardly dared to hope she would ever look at him. I never knew exactly what happened; but he wrote to me, saying that the thing was finally at an end, and begging me never to mention Annie Lorimer's name to him again. And I have never done so."

"What a pretty name! And was she pretty too?"

"I never saw her," replied mother, "but James used to say she was lovely; a dainty, exquisite, fairy-like girl, as fragile as a bit of china, with golden hair and blue eyes and a lovely complexion. She danced beautifully, and was just the type to attract James, who had always been accustomed to big strong women." (Mother is quite as tall as I am, and my grandmother was even taller.)

"Poor Uncle James!" I said. "It is funny to imagine his caring for anything except pork, chops and safe investments."

"He cared enough for Annie Lorimer five and twenty years ago," replied mother.

When our Swiss trip was over and we were settled at home again, I induced mother to invite Uncle James and Miss Stubbs to pay us a visit at the same time.

She said it was an absurd arrangement and would lead to nothing, but she sent the invitations, nevertheless.

So Uncle James and Miss Stubbs came to stay with us. My uncle arrived first; and as he sat with mother and me in the morning room, he asked,—

"Is anyone else staying with you, Jane?"

"Only Miss Stubbs," replied mother; "and she arrives this afternoon. We met her at Lucerne you know."

"Oh! some girl that Madge took a great fancy to, isn't she?"

"I took a great fancy to her," I answered; "but she isn't a girl. She is quite old."

"What a nuisance!" said uncle James, in his sharp manner. "I hate old women, and old maids especially."

"You won't hate her, James," said mother, soothingly; "she is so quiet and unobtrusive that you'll hardly know she is in the house." Then she smiled slyly at me, and I felt my matrimonial plans foredoomed to failure.

At that moment Miss Stubbs arrived, and mother and I ran into the hall to meet her. She looked as faded and washed-out as ever, and as I followed her and mother into the morning-room I sighed over the futility of my well-meant scheme.

"Let me introduce my brother to you," mother began. "James, this is——"

But before she could finish her sentence Uncle James jumped up and seized Miss Stubbs by both hands; crying,—

"Why, Annie! you don't mean to say that it is you, come back to me after all these years?" And

SPORTING.

ON THE GRIDIRON.

The question of the backs for the Plainfield eleven for the election day game is about settled with the exception of quarter. Harry L. McGee, captain of the team, is a fixture at full back. He runs well, hits the line heavily, and is the best punter Plainfield possesses. George Cathcart has decided to play after all, and will play one half back. He is the best line bucker on the team. Thos. U. Smith will play the other half back. He excells as a running back. Louis Darling is playing a strong game at quarter and seems a likely candidate. There is a chance that Chas. Denice, the famous E. A. C. quarter back, may return from college for the game. Auguste Saltzman, Jr., is also a candidate for quarter.

GOLF.

The opening of the Park golf grounds will take place Tuesday, election day. This is now the best season of the year for the game. To those who come by car, it might be said that the entrance to the grounds on that side is on Hudson lane and that a broad walk leads from the gate all the way to the grounds.

OUR NEWEST CITIZENS.

Education as Applied to Cubans and Porto Ricans.

With Porto Rico and Cuba under the protection of the United States, the colored populations of those islands will derive benefits and receive rights which unjustly were withheld from them by the Spaniards. The negro of Cuba, in particular, is a sadly demoralized creature, worse in habits and surroundings than was the Afro-American before generous-hearted Lincoln taught the slave holders a lesson in history. The average negro of Porto Rico and Cuba knows little or nothing. He is obliged to work hard on the sugar, coffee and tobacco plantations and in the rice fields, but he knows nothing of the higher class of industries, because nobody has taught him. He does not fear God, because nobody has shown him the wisdom of doing so. There is nothing absolutely new in stating these facts, but there is something new in saying that a number of influential Americans have determined to lift the negro of both islands from his lowly surroundings by teaching him not only the value of learning a trade scientifically, but also the necessity for acquiring some knowledge of the Christian world.

At the head of this benevolent corps is William H. Baldwin, Jr., the president of the Long Island Railroad. Mr. Baldwin for several years has been interested in the good work of the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute of Tuskegee, Ala. This institution is devoted exclusively to the advancement of the colored people of both sexes and has done much to make the negro of the South and West independent of others and the creator of his own finances.

The Tuskegee Institute being recognized as the most successful of its kind in the world, it has been suggested that when the United States finally takes hold of Porto Rico and Cuba some provision be made for the immediate education of the negroes of both islands. Those who have given the subject deep thought, and Mr. Baldwin is one of these, think that if the government import from both islands a certain number of colored people of each sex, particular attention, of course, being paid to the more advanced kind, and give them, at the government's expense, the benefit of the various branches of learning at Tuskegee, they will be able, when finally graduated from that institution, to go back to the islands and instruct their less favored brethren in the trades and industries they have learned.

NEED OF GOOD ROADS

Uncle Sam Has Still Much to Accomplish Along This Line.

Although much has been done to improve the condition of the roads on this side of the Atlantic, there is still a great deal to be desired. This is made especially manifest when the roads here are compared with the highways in nearly all the European countries. Were the government of the United States to expend millions every year it would still be a long while before Uncle Sam could rank his roads in the same class with those of John Bull. In addition to the advantages generally recognized as inseparable from good highways, methods of communication would be cheapened and bicycles become an ordinary means of conveyance in the country as well as city. Machines driven by electricity would gradually come to supersede the horse. This would require more elevating manual labor in the manufacture of all the machinery needed to replace the horse. In England, France and Germany the roads already admit of the use of electrical vehicles, which are becoming more and more popular each year. In some parts of Germany it is said that farm produce is now being transported on electric wagons. The use of electricity as a motive power is as yet but imperfectly understood and the construction of horseless carriages is still in its merest infancy. Great developments may confidently be expected here in this line, but American ingenuity will be hampered until highways are constructed over which it will be feasible for such vehicles to travel.

WHERE LITTLE THINGS COUNT.

The Trouble for Bank Clerks if Their Accounts Are Two Cents Short.

Bookkeeping has been reduced to such an exact science in the big metropolitan banks that the clerks are expected to strike a correct balance at the close of each day's work no matter if the transactions run into the millions of dollars. When the books fail to balance, the whole force of the bank is put to work to discover the error, and no clerk starts for home until it is discovered whether it amounts to two cents or $2,000. Generally a quarter of an hour will bring the mistake to light, but sometimes the hunt is kept up until late into the night.

Such a search was being conducted in a New York bank located in the vicinity of Wall street. Forty-five cents were missing. At 6 o'clock not a trace of the errant sum had been discovered. Dinner was sent in for the whole force from an adjoining restaurant, and after half an hour's rest the search was again taken up. Midnight came, but still no clew, so sandwiches and coffee were served.

"Hello!" said a clerk. "The Blank National people are working to-night, too. Guess they're in the same box."

Sure enough, the windows of the bank across the street were brilliantly lighted. The incident was soon forgotten when the wearying hunt after that elusive forty-five cents was resumed. Shortly after 1 o'clock in the morning, as they were about to give up for the night, a loud rapping was heard at the front door of the bank.

"Hello! Hello! What's the matter?" called the cashier through the keyhole.

"Matter, you chumps. Why, we've got your blamed old forty-five cents! Come along home to bed!"

Outside stood the crowd of clerks from the neighboring bank. It appeared that, in making a cash transaction one of the banks had paid the other forty-five cents too much. As a result half a hundred men had worked for nine hours, and the search was only ended then because a bright clerk, noticing the light in the bank opposite, shrewdly guessed the cause, hunted up the cash slip, and discovered the error.—Harper's Round Table.

A Religious Compromise.

A certain Governor of Rhode Island, who lived in Newport and was a member of the Congregational Church, married a woman who was a Baptist, without any understanding as to the arrangement of religious matters. The first Sunday morning after the marriage the pair started out at church time together. They walked side by side as far as the corner of Church and Spring streets, where their accustomed ways to church diverged, and there they stopped. He stood with a little dogged leaning toward his church, she with the same leaning toward hers. "Well, wife," said the Governor, "which way shall we go?" She made no answer, nor did she make any sign of going his way. The Governor looked up at the beautiful spire and cheery door of Trinity Church, under the shadow of which they stood. "Ha!" said the Governor, "let's throw up both our churches and go in here!" And into Trinity they went, and were devout Episcopalians ever after.—Boston Transcript.

Snakes as Great Rat Catchers.

According to an account in the "Journal d'Hygiene," rats have become so abundant in Brazil that a domestic snake, the giboya, which has about the circumference of the arm, is sold in the marketplace in Rio Janeiro, to be kept in the house as a protection against rodents. It would seem that the serpent pursues its prey more for the pleasure that there is in it than from a sense of hunger, since it is said t rarely eats the rats caught. Similar in its habits and attachments to the domestic cat of our more northern latitudes, the giboya will, it is said, find its way back to the house of its master even if transported to a considerable distance.—Medical Record.

Nothing Odd About That.

Madam," said Meandering Mike, who had been pleading in vain, "ef nothin' else'll move ye, I'm willin' to do anythin' yer say in the way of odd jobs fur me breakfast."

He looked at it for a moment, and then, turning away, said:

"No; I'm a man of my word, an' I sticks to the letter of me proposal. I said 'odd' jobs; an' there ain't nothin' more common an' ordinary than choppin' wood."

He Celebrated the Event.

The woman who in a fit of anger had deserted her husband wrote him, after a week's absence:

"Dear John—I'm tired stayin' away. Can I come back home?"

She presently received the following reply, in a strange hand:

"Your John ain't here. He's off somewheres enjoyin' of his honeymoon."—Atlanta Constitution.

GREATEST OF TABLE TALKERS.

Volubility of the Iron Chancellor While at His Meals.

When in the course of his tour round the world, Gen. Grant went to Berlin and had an interview with Prince Bismarck—then at the height of his power—he carried away with him the impression that the German Chancellor was the most interesting conversationalist he had ever met. Carl Schurz, who subsequently came to Berlin and was entertained by the Chancellor, said that the best table talkers he had ever known were Mazzini and Oliver Wendell Holmes, but that Bismarck was better than either.

It was a strange anomaly that one of the wisest men and best table talkers of modern times should have been born on "All-Fools' Day"—the best of talkers, because the greatest man of action, of modern times. And how infinitely more interesting must ever be the talk of a man who has done great things than that of a man who has only thought great thoughts? Bismarck himself never published his autobiography, if he ever wrote one. But when his own memoirs come to see the light it will be found that much of their interest has been discounted by the autobiography which he has already spoken. For, in addition to being the greatest acter of his time in the literal meaning of the word—doer, achiever, author of events, maker of history—he has also been one of the greatest talkers in the sense employed by Gen. Grant and Carl Schurz, and much of this talk has been about his own accomplishments. Indeed, there might now be written an ingeniously compiled book entitled "Bismarck, By Himself," in which nothing would be used but the Prince's own words.—Review of Reviews.

HEARD HIS OWN PRAISE.

Dr. S. Wier Mitchell Had an Interesting Experience in Paris.

A Detroit friend of Dr. Weir Mitchell, the eminent author and famous medical specialist of Philadelphia, tells the following story on the doctor which he says he relates himself, whenever the occasion permits, with the keenest relish of its humor.

It appears that some years ago Dr. Mitchell was troubled with a nervous ailment, induced, it was thought, by his unflagging energy in his two lines of work. His condition became so serious that he went abroad, thinking that a change of scene and a giving up of his labors might tend to make a well man of him. In Paris he suffered an attack of the old trouble and deemed it well to call upon a certain specialist with whose name he was familiar, as being that of a man famous on both continents.

He visited the physician purely as a patient and did not even give him his name.

During the conversation preliminary to the examination, the Parisian said: "I see you are an American."

"Yes," answered Dr. Mitchell, "I am an American."

"Which is your home city?" he was asked, and replied "Philadelphia."

The French physician held up both hands and exclaimed: "What, a man come to me here in Paris to be treated for a nervous ailment when his own home is in Philadelphia, where resides the most famous nerve specialist in the world!"

"To whom do you refer?" asked the author.

"Ah, you have never heard? Why, to Dr. S. Weir Mitchell, of course."—Detroit Free Press.

Machine-made Flower Pots.

An industry carried on by an English company is the making of flower pots, and this is done in a manner quite new to this country, the entire article being made by machine instead of by hand, as has been the custom hitherto.

The clay is first of all dried by being exposed on the floor of a suitable room and prepared; it is then passed into a press, which forms the quantity of clay into a shaped lump, technically called a "clot." This is carried on to a mould, into which it is pressed by a plunger or bolt, which forms the clay into the familiar shape. The edge of the pot is then trimmed by hand, and the article is ready to be partially dried and then passed on to the kiln. The whole process is remarkable in its simplicity and ingenuity, nothing but a little oil being used to lubricate the clot before being placed in the mould.

In these machines, which make pots of all sizes, the difficulty of getting the pots to leave the dies without breaking has been overcome. The articles are turned out at an average rate of fifteen to sixteen a minute, and the time required to make the complete pot is two and a half days, instead of four days to a month, as when done by hand. Two-thirds of the ordinary amount of burning only is required, and the resulting pot is claimed to be more true to shape, lighter, firmer and stronger than the ordinary.

DOWNED WESTFIELD ON THE GRIDIRON.

Alis Football Eleven Won By the Score of 16 to 0.

PLAYED AT MARTINE FIELD.

SUPERIOR TEAM WORK AND INTERFERENCE WON THE VICTORY.

First Game of the Alis Team This Year—Some Changes in the Lineup—Long Runs Made Around the Ends—Cuming Scored First Touchdown—Woolston Made Two—Great Line Work.

Rivalry on the football field between Plainfield and Westfield has been of a long standing. The contests each year have been watched with more than the usual interest in the game. Saturday afternoon the rival teams met and the Plainfield eleven, the Alis team, defeated the Westfield contingent by a score of 16 to 0. The game was one of the hardest fought of the season, and only the superior team work of the Alis boys won the game for them. The match was played on Martine field.

It was the first game of the season for the Alis team, but showed that they had not forgotten their skill. Experts who witnessed the game from the side lines say that the team work and interference of the Alis eleven was the best ever done on a local gridiron. It was certainly deserving of great praise. The Alis team can no longer be counted among the junior teams of the county but, now that the Plainfield eleven will only play one or two games this season, they will represent Plainfield on the gridiron.

Plainfield had the kickoff toward the western goal and sent the ball well down in the field. From the start it was evident that the teams were pretty well matched. Superior interference by the Alis boys more than overcame the greater weight of their opponents, however. The Alis boys took the offensive at once and forced the play in Westfield's territory. Taylor, at left tackle, did some great work breaking through Westfield's line and spoiling play after play. The Westfield backs showed a tendency to fumble that proved very disastrous to them.

The first half was nearly over when Fred Overton was sent around left end under strong interference. He covered fifty yards before he was downed on Westfield's five yard line. Harry Cuming then went through guard for the first touchdown. Dumont missed the goal. Score, Alis 5, Westfield 0.

At the opening of the second half, Westfield kicked out of bounds. Another trial sent the ball to Overton who advanced fifteen yards before he was downed. Then Overton, Cuming and Phillips made various gains and the ball was advanced into Westfield's territory. The excellent interference made the end plays effective and the advance was steady despite Westfield's desperate struggles. At the fifteen yard line, Woolston circled the left end and dodged over the line for a second touchdown. Dumont kicked a difficult goal. Score, Alis, 11; Westfield, 0.

Again the ball was advanced into Westfield's territory. Cuming ran for forty yards. Then Plainfield lost ten yards for off-side play. Westfield obtained possession of the ball but failed to gain. The play was then in the vicinity of Westfield's thirty-five yard line. A Westfield back fumbled and Woolston broke through the line, picked up the ball and was going down the field before he was noticed. Another touchdown was the result. Dumont missed the goal in the darkness. Score, Alis, 16; Westfield, 0. The game was then called on account of darkness.

The teams lined up as follows:

Baptized Seven New Members.

Special services were held all day yesterday in the Mt. Olive Baptist church, and in the afternoon Pastor Jackson baptized seven new members as a result of the special services that have been held in the church of late. In the morning Pastor Jackson preached an excellent sermon and in the evening he preached again. All of the services were attended largely and a large amount of money was raised for the benefit of the church.

THE COLORED VOTERS

URGED TO STAND BY THE REPUBLICANS TOMORROW.

Assemblyman Murray and ex-Judge Codington Addressed Them—Two Colored Men on City Executive Committee.

The colored Republicans held a mass and ratification meeting Saturday night in the hall over Boehm's store on West Front street under the auspices of the State and county committee, aided by the city executive committee. The speakers of the evening were Hon. Roger F. Murray, Hon. W. R. Codington, Rev. E. E. Jackson and P. W. Ross.

E. W. Brown was chairman and called the meeting to order. The first speaker was Rev. E. E. Jackson, of the Mt. Olive Baptist church, who gave a strong address upon the need every voter has to stand by the old party tomorrow. The clergyman's speech was listened to with attention and was highly applauded.

Hon. W. R. Codington and Hon. Roger F. Murray both occupied seats in the front of the hall and responded to the calls for a speech. Ex-Judge Codington spoke of the different candidates in the field on the Republican ticket and urged their election. Mr. Murray declared himself a friend to the colored man and said also that the party which made them free was the party to stand by them forever afterwards.

Mr. Murray had just left a meeting of the city executive committee a few moments before he spoke, and told his hearers that at that meeting a resolution had been presented and acted favorably upon that hereafter the city executive committee enroll among its members at least two men from the colored voters of the city. This statement of Mr. Murray's met with approval, and the colored voters will chose their representatives at once.

The last speaker was P. W. Ross, of Scottsville, Va., a school teacher who is visiting friends in town. Mr. Ross had prepared a long address but owing to the lateness of the hour, spoke only a few words instead.

REVIEWED CHURCH WORK.

Rev. J. W. Richardson Yesterday Noted the Progress of Christianity.

Rev. J. W. Richardson, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, preached an anniversary sermon yesterday morning to his people in which he went over a part of the history of the church during the past twelve months. The Spiritual work in the church has resulted in the addition of fourteen members by baptism and eleven by letter. The sum of $3,649 was raised for general expenses and $993.93 for benevolences. Only seven out of thirty-two churches in the East New Jersey Association showed a better record than this church. During the year the pastor officiated at four funerals, solemnized six marriages, preached 120 sermons and made 505 pastoral calls.

A REPUBLICAN MEETING.

Borough G. O. P Met in Spencer's Hall—Candidate Cooper on Hand.

A Republican mass meeting was held last Saturday evening in Spencer's Hall on Somerset street, and was largely attended by many old-time supporters of the party. Former Mayor Charles Place was chairman of the meeting, and addresses were made by Assembly nominee E. E. Cooper, Lawyer Robert Clark, H. D. DeMott, H. N. Spencer and many others. The audience was also favored with several vocal selections by Lawyer Clark. Chairman Place also made a good address and everyone present was urged to stand by the Republican ticket and work for it. The meeting aroused plenty of enthusiasm and everyone had a good time.

OSCAR AGAIN IN TROUBLE

THE LOVE-LORN YOUNG MAN NOW ACCUSED OF THEFT.

Rented a Room in Bayonne, and the Landlady Alleges That He Stole a Diamond Ring—Now Reposes in Jail.

Oscar Vaughn, of the borough, butcher's clerk, comedian and night-watchman, is locked up in jail again, this time charged with stealing a diamond ring from a lady in Bayonne City. Vaughn will be given a hearing today.

The arrest was made Saturday. Chief Grant received a telephone message during the afternoon from the Chief of Police in Bayonne City asking if he knew a young man here named Oscar. The Chief racked his brain for an Oscar, and thought of Vaughn.

"Has he a bad arm" asked Grant. He received an answer in the affirmative, and then concluded it must be Vaughn.

A little questioning drew from the Bayonne City Chief of Police the following story. Vaughn had come to town early Saturday morning and began a search for lodgings. He went to one address and engaged a furnished room for a week. He told the landlady that he would go to the depot after his valise, and would also get a money order cashed, then he would pay her a week's board in advance.

Vaughn talked so smoothly that the landlady agreed to all this, and left him alone for awhile while she looked after something down stairs. During her absence Vaughn went out. Shortly afterwards the lady went upstairs and claims a diamond ring worth $100 was gone. The police were notified at once. Vaughn wore a blue uniform when acting as watchman in the borough, and had that on Saturday. Therefore he was an easy mark for the police who soon had him in a cell.

Vaughn denied all knowledge of the theft, and gave a ficticious name, but admitted that he was from Plainfield. The police say the ring was found on him.

LITTLE MONEY LEFT.

Appropriation for Improvement is Nearly Exhausted.

The year is rapidly drawing to a close, but the fine weather will last long enough to permit the street committee to do considerable work on the streets yet this year if it wasn't for one thing—the appropriation is about exhausted. A little is left, but only sufficient to pay for the hire of a few men in the repair gang.

The people living in the West End have been complaining to the Council and especially to the street committee because more work has not been done on their streets this year—such as Plainfield avenue and West Third street. Last winter West Front street from Grant avenue out was a genuine boghole. The street committee promised to repair that street and put it in good shape this year and they have done so. Now they make a similar promise to the people in the West End, and will strongly recommend to the Council that this work be done with next year's money.

Good Time for Old People.

Tomorrow will occur the annual harvest home reception of the Baptist Home Society of New Jersey. Several members of this denomination from this city will be in attendance at "The Home," No. 285 Roseville avenue, Newark. The old folks have delightful accommodations there, where they can spend their declining days in comfort and happiness. These yearly gatherings of their friends are a source of great enjoyment to the aged inmates. The reception is a very informal reunion and extends from 11 o'clock to 4 p. m., with a luncheon served to any visiting friends at 25 cents each.

Last Call for Colored Men.

CORNER-STONE OF NEW CHURCH EDIFICE LAID.

An Auspicious Occasion For Calvary Baptist Society.

OWN HOUSE OF WORSHIP.

STONE SQUARE LODGE TOOK AN IMPORTANT PART.

Preliminary Services Held in Reform Hall Where Rev. John Harris Preached a Sermon, and on the Site of the New Edifice Preached the Dedicatory Sermon—Stone Laid by Colored Masons.

The corner-store of the new Calvary Baptist church was laid yesterday afternoon with appropriate exercises and the affair was attended largely by colored folks from this city and other nearby places. There was also present a delegation from Stone Square Lodge, No. 26, F. and A. M., and they assisted in the laying of the store.

The services commenced at 2:30 o'clock in Reform Hall and were in charge of Rev. Scott Wallace, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church, and after the devotional exercises, the sermon was preached by Rev. John Harris, pastor of the colored Baptist church at Orange. The sermon was full of good advice and suggestions to those present.

The members were congratulated for their earnest labors, and were told to push forward in the work of saving souls. Following the sermon a collection was taken, and the receipts were most gratifying to the pastor and officers of the church. In the hall the services were assisted with music by a choir of mixed voices.

All adjourned after this meeting to the new church, directly back of the hall, where the corner-stone was laid. At this time Rev. Mr. Mitchell, of this city, read the Scripture lesson, and Rev. Mr. Johnson, pastor of the Fillmore Baptist church, offered prayer. There was singing by the choir, and another collection was taken up. This time all present, including the crowd that assembled on the street, were asked to contribute to the cause, and there was a liberal response.

After the collection Rev. John Harris preached the dedication sermon. The corner-stone was then laid by the delegation from Stone Square Lodge, F. and A. M., under the direction of Mr. Douglass, who was in charge of the delegation. Among those who assisted were Rev. Scott Wallace, pastor; Rev. Mr. Groves, pastor of the Mt. Zion A. M. E church; Rev. Mr. Morris, of Belmar, N. J.; Rev. Mr. Matthews, of this city, and several others. A number of interesting and valuable documents were placed in the corner-stone, including the history of the church, deeds, etc. The services throughout were of great interest and marks a new era in the history of this body of believers.

THE RIGHT TIME TO STOP.

W. E. ELDRIDGE WILL RETIRE FROM THE BICYCLE BUSINESS.

He Thinks There is No More Money in It and Will Close His Numerous Stores, One of Which is in Plainfield.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Newark, Nov. 7—W. E. Eldridge, president and manager of the Eldridge Bicycle Company, in Central avenue, has decided to abandon the bicycle business. December 1st he will close up his branch stores located in Paterson, Jersey City, Elizabeth, East Orange and Plainfield, and after closing out the stock of these stores he will shut up his big Newark store and rest on his laurels. Mr. Eldridge, after a careful study of the future of the cycle trade, has decided that it will be more profitable to take this step than remain in the business another year. He thinks that in the future there will be little or no profit in selling bicycles.

After winding up his affairs he will probably make a trip around the world. In the days of the high wheel Mr. Eldridge was one of the most enthusiastic riders in this vicinity. He started in the bicycle business in 1891, the first year after the event of the "safety," as the present style of wheel was then called, and met with success from the start. He is one of the few retailers of bicycles to retire with what is commonly called a "small fortune."

The marriage of Miss Love, of the borough, to Christopher Wise, also of the borough, took place last Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the home of Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, who performed the ceremony. The couple were unattended, and after the ceremony they left at once for Brooklyn to spend their honeymoon. On their return they will reside at the home of the groom in the borough.

AN EXCITING RUNAWAY.

WAGON OVERTURNED AND DRIVER THROWN UNDER IT.

Luckily, the Reins Were Dragging Near Him and He Succeeded in Grasping Them so as to Stop the Fractious Horse.

E. D. Barrett, the East Fifth street plumber, is nursing an injured hand and shoulder as a result of an exciting runaway yesterday afternoon. Mr. Barrett was called to a house near Metuchen yesterday to do some work. He had just climbed into his business wagon when the horse, recently clipped and consequently frisky, started off on a run. The reins were out of Mr. Barrett's reach and he was carried off on a run.

The wagon met with some obstacle and was completely overturned. Mr. Barrett fell directly underneath and was dragged along in a moving prison. Luckily the reins were close by and he caught hold of them and finally brought the runaway to a stand. Then Mr. Barrett righted the wagon and climbed out.

The harness was somewhat broken while the wagon was also slightly damaged. The skin and flesh was scraped off of one of Barrett's arms and the bones bruised. His shoulder was also injured while he was generally bruised about the body.

DRUNKEN ESCAPADE CAUSES ARREST.

Theodore Wilson Accused of Breaking Into French's Mill.

One Saturday night last August Theodore Wilson was intoxicated. He was so drunk that when he got to French's mill on Somerset street he imagined that it was his house and he tried to get in. Finding the doors all locked Wilson grew angry and broke open a window and climbed in.

When Wilson gained admittance he threw himself upon a pile of soft bags and fell asleep. Here he was found next morning. He was told to get out, which he did, but when P. M. French heard of the occurrence he had a complaint made by Isaac Giles, one of his workmen, and a warrant was sworn out for Wilson's arrest on a charge of breaking in with intent to steal.

But Wilson steered clear of the city Two or three times he was seen in the borough, but managed to elude the constable. Then he left town and stayed away until Saturday night, when, supposing the matter had blown over, he came back and was arrested at once by Roundsman Frederickson and Officer Mattox.

Wilson spent yesterday in the lock-up and was arraigned before Justice Nash this morning. There was so little in the complaint that the defendant was released on his own recognizance.

A Busy Contractor.

John H. Milligan, the Dunellen contractor, is unusually busy this fall. He has just completed the erection of a house in Metuchen, and has another one there under way. Saturday he began work on a residence in Bound Brook, and this morning started the erection of a new barn for Mahlon Vail, of South Plainfield, whose old barn was recently destroyed by fire.

The prize choristers at the Church of the Holy Cross for the month of October were Everett Sherwin, Kenneth Stuart, Louis Gardiner, Henry Kemph and Robert Sherwin. Each has the right to wear a silver medal during services in the month of November. Everitt Sherwin won the silver cross for improvement in singing.

PROPHETS NOW AT WORK.

DEMOCRATS AND REPUBLICANS ARE BOTH CONFIDENT.

Democrats Expect to Elect Crane By a Decisive Majority and Gain Control of the Legislature—Republican Managers Predict Voorhees' Choice and a Very Large Legislative Victory.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, Nov. 7—One of the shortest, sharpest and most exciting political campaigns that ever occurred in New Jersey is about to close, and none are prouder of the relief afforded thereby than the Gubernatorial candidates, whose mental and physical powers have been put through such a trying ordeal.

The Republicans, while sanguine of a victory, yet do not seem as enthusiastic as they were three years ago, when John W. Griggs was elected by such a decisive majority. They do not give figures in detail, but content themselves by saying that Voorhees will be elected by from 10,000 to 12,000 majority; that seven of the eight Congressmen will be Republican; that the same ratio will prevail with regard to the State Senate, and that there will be at the least 35 Republican members of the House of Assembly. They feel certain that Essex county will go Republican. That is the prediction, anyhow, of Franklin Murphy, chairman of the Republican State committee. One prominent Republican ventures the prediction that Essex county will give a majority for his ticket of not less than 3,500, and another goes as high as 6,000.

A Republican State Committeeman elects Mr. Voorhees by a majority of 7,100, according to the following estimate:

Republican majorities — Atlantic, 800; Bergen, 500; Burlington, 1,200; Camden, 2,500; Cape May, 200; Cumberland, 1,500; Essex, 2,500; Gloucester, 600; Mercer, 1,000; Morris, 800; Ocean, 900; Passaic, 2,000; Salem, 100; Somerset, 300; Union, 2,000. Total, 16,900.

Democratic majorities — Hudson, 6,000; Hunterdon, 800; Monmouth, 1,000; Middlesex, 800; Sussex, 200; Warren, 1,000 Total, 9,800.

The same prophet says that the only Democratic Congressman will be William D. Daly; the only Democratic Senator, Allan L McDermott and that the only Democratic Assemblymen will be 11 from Hudson, 3 from Middlesex, 3 from Monmouth, 1 from Sussex and 2 from Warren, a total of 22 altogether.

The Democrats have never been more confident of achieving a victory than they are this year.

And here is a Democratic prophecy; Democratic majorities—Bergen, 300; Cape May, 200; Essex, 1,500; Hudson, 7,500; Hunterdon, 1,200; Middlesex, 1,200; Monmouth, 1,500; Salem, 200; Somerset, 200; Sussex, 600; Warren, 1,500. Total, 15,900.

Republican majorities—Atlantic, 400; Burlington, 800; Camden, 2,000; Cumberland, 1,200; Gloucester, 500; Mercer, 600; Morris, 200; Ocean, 700; Passaic, 800; Union, 1,200. Total, 8,400. This estimate elects Crane by a majority of 7,500.

The Democrats predict they will elect Congressmen in the Third, Fourth and Seventh districts, and that they have a good fighting chance in the Sixth. They believe they will elect State Senators in Bergen, Morris and Hudson, and probably in Atlantic. They pretend to be sure of the following Assemblymen: Bergen, 2; Cape May, 1; Essex, 11; Hudson, 11; Hunterdon, 2; Middlesex, 3; Monmouth, 3; Morris, 2; Passaic, 2; Salem, 1; Somerset, 1; Sussex, 1; Warren, 2. Total, 42. Thus they give the Republicans only 18 Assemblymen. And even they incline to the belief that they may get a Senator in Mercer county.

Barring a landslide on one side or the other it would seem to an impartial observer that the result will be very close, and that the successful candidate for Governor cannot boast of a majority of more than 5,000.

Firemen Not Needed.

A quantity of wood burning in the oven of a stove in a house on Sycamore street opposite the Fillmore Baptist church, occasioned an alarm of fire to be sent in from Box 21, corner of Watchung avenue and East Third street, today noon. It was at first thought that the chimney was on fire. The department turned out promptly, but was not needed, as the fire was put out before they arrived.

A QUESTION OF MONEY.

No Longer Talk of Spanish Honor but How Much Islands Are Worth.

Madrid, Nov. 7.—Senor Sagasta said yesterday that the commissioners were not able to agree.

In political circles it is assured that peace will be declared this week.

An important politician here says, in reference to the question of the Philippines, that there exists an official note from Spain to the United States in which the former demands recognition of her sovereignty over the islands.

At heart Premier Sagasta is glad to get rid of the expense, trouble and drain of life which the Philippines have continuously been to Spain, and in his mind the future government of the country will have been rendered infinitely more easy when her ever-rebellious colonies have been disposed of.

Madrid, Nov. 7.—The government has received a new dispatch from the Spanish peace commissioners at Paris. M. Patenotre, the French ambassador to Madrid, and Premier Sagasta later held a long conference.

Washington, Nov. 7.—"It is no longer a question of Spanish honor; the position of the Spaniards is—how much money will you give?

This statement was made by a high official of the administration acquainted with the contents of the cablegram sent by Mr. Day, chairman of the American commissioners, regarding the reply he and his colleagues had received to their demands respecting the Philippines from Senor Rios and his associates.

According to the state department's information the Spanish reply is forty pages in length, and the president has directed that the entire paper be cabled to Washington in order that he might familiarize himself with the arguments used by the Spanish government in defending its position with respect to the far eastern islands.

It is believed, however, that the Spanish commissioners will suggest something like $200,000,000 as the sum which should be paid to their government, but the American commissioners will not agree to a sum greater than $40,000,000, the amount of the debt contracted by Spain for improvements in the islands.

Harvard 10; Pennsylvania 0.

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 7.—The first championship football game of the season resulted Saturday afternoon in the victory of Harvard over Pennsylvania by the score of 10 to 0.

It was perhaps the most exciting game ever played in Cambridge, and in some respects the most remarkable. Harvard's first touch down came in the first play after the kick off. Coombs fumbled the ball and a Harvard player fell on it within the five yard line.

On the next play Donald shot across for the down. This happened within a few seconds of play, and gave Harvard the prestige of the first scoring. Although Harvard had a streak of Yale luck in that first kick off, the crimson fairly earned its victory by heady generalship, superior punting and cleaner handling of the ball.

Sixteen thousand people, including the fashionables of Boston, witnessed the great struggle on Soldier's field.

The Dreyfus Inquiry.

Paris, Nov. 7.—The Gaulois says the court of cassation has decided to hear the minister of war, M. De Freycinet, testigation into the Dreyfus case, and that the court will content itself with his statements, without insisting upon seeing the secret documents in the case.

The Fronde says the case against Colonel Picquart, who was charged with communicating to unauthorized persons the contents of important military documents, in his defence of Dreyfus, has been quashed and that he will be released from prison.

THE SIMPLEST CURE FOR INDIGESTION,

As Well as the Safest and Cheapest.

The new medical discovery, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, digest the food instead of making the worn out stomach do all the work, give it a much needed rest, and a cure of dyspepsia is the natural result.

You get nourishment and rest at the same time because these Tablets will thoroughly digest all wholesome food taken into the stomach whether the stomach works or not. A cure is certain to result because the digestive organs are given a chance to rest and recover their natural vigor and tone. The Tablets are then no longer required.

To show the manner in which the remedy acts on different people and how quickly and effectually it cures stomach troubles we present a few recent cases.

Mr. J. O. Wondly, of Peoria, Ill., writes: I was unable to eat anything but the plainest food and even that often distressed me, but since using one box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets I can eat anything and everything I want.

Mrs. Samuel Kepple, of Girty, P., writes: I have been entirely relieved of my stomach troubles by your Tablets. I suffered three years with sour stomach and gas at night. I am thankful for them.

Mrs. A. E. Bowen, Barnard, Vt., writes: I think Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the best thing for dyspepsia I ever took. I will recommend them to anyone troubled as bad as I was.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will not disappoint because they cure Dyspepsia surely and lastingly by causing the food to be properly assimilated, and cure constipation by producing the proper quantity of bile. Sold by all druggists at 50 cents per package. Send for free book on stomach diseases to Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich.

TERESA LOST IN A GALE

CREW FAILED TO SAVE HER

Full Particulars of the Disaster Contained In Commander Harris' Report. After Many Hours of Hard Work in a Terrific Gale The Crew Abandon the Ship Then Fast Sinking.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 7.—Full particulars have now been received in regard to the sinking of the Spanish cruiser Maria Teresa off San Salvador, Bahamas, on the morning of November 1.

The news of the disaster came with a depressing shock to everyone connected with the navy department.

A thrilling story of the loss of the Teresa is given in the official report of Lieutenant Commander Harris to the secretary of the navy, received by telegraph at the navy department late on Saturday evening. It is dated aboard the wrecking steamer Merritt, fifty miles off Charleston, on November 4, and says:

"I have the honor to make the following report of the loss of the Infanta Maria Teresa: On November 1, at 1 a. m., I found that it was blowing hard and went on the lower bridge. We had left Watling's island light abeam at 10 o'clock and up till midnight the weather was pleasant and all went well with the ship, although we had trouble in keeping the pump in the forward fire room from being choked with coal.

"The wind continued to increase in force until perhaps three a. m., when it reached its height, although there were times all day when it blew as hard as ever. The direction was about northeast. The sea continued to rise until about six p. m. There was a heavy sea all the following day. Pumps were reported every hour.

"Soon after I came on deck I relieved the second mate, Mr. ohnson, so that he could go below to fight the water. About half past three the first mate, Captain LeCato, came up and he also went below to work. Captain Chittenden, who was on deck almost as soon as I, gave his attention to the pumps, and especially to priming the centrifugal pump in the forward fire room.

Captain Chittenden Hurt.

"There were many new leaks. When a heavy sea struck the sides the plates leaked at the bitts and seams, showing that after the fire they had resumed their former appearance, but were not tight. There was at the mainmast an inch of thwartship vibration, and only half an inch longitudinal vibration.

"While making this examination, about half past four a. m., Captain Chittenden was thrown down and fell on the chain, hurting his side and back enough to temporarily disable him. He continued to give us valuable advice. At three a. m. we made signal to the Vulcan and Merritt to go to windward, which they did as well as they could. Up to one o'clock a. m., we were running the starboard main engines and had steam on the two central boilers and three of the short forward boilers, but the trouble in the forward fire room caused the steam to run low and we lighted fires under the starboard after boiler and stopped the engine so as to run the steam up for the pumps.

"The pump for keeping the water from the forward compartment was driven by a belt, and when the sea broke over the bows, the belt became wet and slipped. As soon as the water was up to the floor place in the forward fire room the rolling of the ship swashed into the coal bunkers and carried the coal out choking the pumps, and carrying the floor plates about, which made it difficult and dangerous to work there.

"About eight o'clock I called for volunteers to hoist coal and water into the ash hoist. Everybody responded, and the work was continued as long as it seemed of any use. About half past three a. m. it was reported that water was coming into one of the starboard forward coal bunkers and running into the fire rooms. When the water came from we do not know. At about two o'clock the 11-inch gun in the after turret ran out and in, twice. When it recoiled the second time something gave way, and it settled to extreme elevation and remained stationary.

"About half past eleven o'clock we signalled the Vulcan to ask the Merritt if we could be turned safely to run safely for the lee of Watling's island. To this Captain Wolcott replied 'No.' and as Captain Chittenden thought we would sink if we tried to turn, this idea was given up.

Both the Vulcan and Merritt could with difficulty keep up head to the wind and the sea was running so high that the Vulcan's bitts started or the two lines parted. The ship would fall into the trough of the sea. At one p. m. Captain Chittenden asked me to signal the Vulcan to cast off the Merritt's tow lines and have the Merritt come alongside.

"I then assumed command, told the men what was to be done and assigned them to stations. I told the chief engineer to start the engine to aid the Vulcan in keeping our head up. He did so, but it could not run but a short time with the steam we had. We signalled the Vulcan:

Wanted to Stay Aboard.

"'We are about to abandon ship. Try to keep us head to wind.'

"I ordered Captain Lecato to take charge of the lee surf boat, and when it was lowered to the rail ordered Cap. Chittenden into it against his repeated protests. He was placed in the boat with his son. This boat was unable to reach the lines we had astern, but the Merritt picked it up, and after taking Captain Chittenden aboard, towed the boat to our lee quarter, and repeated this manoeuvre each trip, forming a lee for the boats to come here and then towing them back. She was splendidly handled.

From two until five the work of transferring the crew continued. Captain Lecato made two more trips, when his arm being disabled his place was taken by Mr. Johnson, who also took two boat loads. The life raft was got over and capsized, but was righted.

"It was put in charge of James Bashford, ordinary seaman of the Illinois naval militia. He and his crew took six Cubans to the Merritt. The smaller surf boat, stowed inboard on the lee side, was then gotten out and I put in charge of it Charlesh A. Dunne, quartermaster first class. I gave him nearly all the good seamen left for a crew. It was launched very handsomely and made two trips.

Oil Used on Waters.

"In all these trips we poured oil from the ship on both sides and the Vulcan also used oil to make it smooth where the embarking was done. I doubt if we could have worked without it. The ship labored more and more heavily.

"Before I left the bridge she rolled her sponsons under, which I should estimate to be thirty degrees, and her patching was enough to show her rudder, propellers and perhaps twelve feet of her keel. She was about four feet by the head. She fell into the sea very heavily and shuddered as she rose. There was no water aft.

"The Vulcan did her best to keep our head up, steering starboard and going to full speed while the sea beat the Teresa's head to port. Throughout the day the Vulcan did everything possible and we were constantly signalling.

"With the exception of three men who got drunk and gave much trouble, all the crew behaved well. Every man did his duty and my orders were instantly obeyed by wreckers and men of the navy.

"When the fires were low I called for volunteers, and the donkey boilers were at once fired up. Twice I asked C. F. Smith and James F. Brien, chief machinists, to oil the steering engine, and it ran till we left. When I took Dunne from the helm to lower the small surf boat his place was taken by William C. Morehoff, machinist, second class, who steered the wreck until we left the bridge together, when he lashed the wheel amidships.

"Willard Crossett, bugler, was signalman and was as cool as possible. He made no mistakes and was very useful to me as a messenger. About half past four he made signal, 'Hang to the wreck until you are sure she is sinking.' To which the Vulcan replied: 'We will hold on until she sinks or parts the tow line.' The last signal he made was: 'These two boats will take all.' After that I had to go aft to force the two drunken men overboard, and about five we were all off.

"The boats were hauled under the steam as near as it was safe, where the oil and lee of the ship made it smooth, and were held by one line, while another line, with a ladder attached, floated the stern on this line. Two double bights were stopped on the right side to go over a man's shoulder. The end was slacked from the ship and when the two men jumped they were hauled into the boat.

"A very fine fellow named Olsen attended to this. When all had gone but he and me, he cut the line and we jumped together. It was perhaps half past five when we reached the Merritt.

"While she was getting in the surf boats the Vulcan slipped the hawser of the Infanta Maria Teresa. I expect that the wreck, dragging off to port, brought all the strain on the port bridle, and started the bitts. When the boats were in, the Merritt, at my request, started to speak the Vulcan, but was unable to reach her, and she apparently did not hear our whistle. The Merritt then returned to find the wreck, but could not do so. The search continued until one p. m. the following day, when she headed for Charleston.

"IRA HARRIS,
"Lieutenant Commander, U. S. N.

The greatest regret was expressed in official circles regarding the loss of the Maria Teresa. Secretary of State Hay said that he was very sorry indeed to hear that it had been found impossible to bring the vessel to the United States, when everybody was so much interested in her.

Acting Secretary Allen of the navy said the loss was much greater than any intrinsic value represented in the ship. She was the link that connected the great naval victory with the United States. It was a sentiment bred in this country that succeeded in raising her and it was the wish of the whole country that she might be refitted and added to our navy.

McKinley to Vote in Canton.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 7.—The president expects to leave for Canton today, where he will cast his vote. He will be accompanied by Assistant Secretary Cortelyou, and with the departure of the chief executive almost the last high official connected with the government will have left town.

It is probable that more government officials and employes have gone home to vote this year than for many years past.

Any number of clerks have taken advantage of the leave or absence granted by Secretary of War Alger and Secretary of the Navy Long to all who wanted to go home and vote.

The same rule applies to the treasury, postoffice and other departments, although official orders to this effect have not been officially issued by them.

The two congressional committees have been busy issuing railroad tickets to men who were unable to pay the fares to their homes, and several hundred voters were taken care of in this way.

It was stated yesterday that the advance sale of cut rate election tickets had been larger this fall than for the past ten years.

Killed In a Colliery.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Nov. 7.—Seven men were killed and three fatally injured at the Exeter colliery of the Lehigh Valley Company, in West Pittston, near here, Saturday. The accident was due to the alleged carelessness of David Price, engine driver, who, acting in disobedience to positive orders, caused three cars to run into the top of a shaft. These cars, loaded and weighing eleven tons, fell down the shaft, a distance of three hundred and sixty feet, and crashed with frightful force upon the carriage carrying ten men.

Williams Has Yellow Fever.

Havana, Nov. 7.—Colonel Williams, the chief quartermaster, is now pronounced to be suffering from yellow fever.

He was removed Saturday morning from the Pasaje Hotel to a house at Vedado, near the Trotcha Hotel, rented by the American commission as a fever hospital.

Major Almy takes charge of Colonel Williams's duties during the latter's sickness.

ANGLO-FRENCH DISPUTE

Salisbury's Declaration not Quite Satisfactory.

WAR PREPARATIONS GO ON

Feeling in London That France Must Now Withdraw from the Bahr-el-Ghazal Region. Probable Character of the Final Arrangement. Warlike Feeling in London.

London, November 7.—The Marquis of Salisbury's declaration on the subject of the withdrawal of the French mission from Fashoda, made at the Manison House banquet in honor of General Lord Kitchener, is not regarded here as being wholly satisfactory. The entire absence of any reference to the extraordinary naval preparations is considerably commented upon, and it is remarked how careful the British premier was to explain that the evacuation of Fashoda was only in the nature of oil on troubled waters, and that British diplomacy had not yet weathered the storm which the Marchand mission had conjured. It is recognized that the French premier, M. Dupuy, and his colleagues intend to carry out what they have promised, but a factor which must be reckoned with is the fact that there are influences at work in Paris which render the existence of any ministry precarious and which might at any moment, in the event of certain contingencies, provoke a general upheaval.

In such an event the Fashoda business, which has been more or less carefully kept in the background would be rushed to the front, in order to distract attention from other things, and would be used as a rallying cry for all parties and classes of Frenchmen.

The English papers point out that the evacuation of Fashoda is only an installment of the satisfaction expected by Great Britain, and that France has yet to swallow the pill of withdrawing from the Bahr-el-Ghazal region.

Under these circumstances the debate in the French chamber of deputies on Fashoda next week is eagerly awaited, as the French government is then expected to explain its intentions regarding the remainder of the French posts in the Nile valley, established by Major Marchand.

In diplomatic circles a reassuring impression has been made by M. Dupuy's declaration of yesterday evening that the French government's policy will be based on well understood interests and that its efforts will be measured by the value of the objects in view.

This is held to imply that the present government will show a conciliatory attitude on the remaining points in dispute.

It is understood that General Kitchener has prepared and placed before the Marquis of Salisbury a scheme defining the frontier of Bahr-el-Ghazal, and the positions he regards as vital to the proper protection of the Soudan and Egypt.

An indication of the probable character of the final arrangement of the question is found in a map drafted by Major Marchand himself, which has reached Paris, and in which he sketches his route from the river Oubangui as far as ort Dessaix.

This map demonstrates that the town of Tambura, which is close to the recognized frontier between the French and Egyptian possessions, is in navigable communication with the Nile. The French officer established five other posts on the Egyptian side of Tambura. These the British premier insists France must abandon, but she can retain Tambura and the country westward of that place. Thus France will have an unobstructed water run from the Congo to Lower Egypt, without encroaching upon the Bahr-el-Ghazal province.

British Ultimatum to Khedive of Egypt

The attitude of the Marquis of Salisbury toward the commercial side of the question is explained by the London Times, which, after reiterating Great Britain's determination not to allow the French a foothold in the Bahr-el-Ghazal province, says:

"A French outlet to the Nile, for commercial purposes, is secured by our general commercial policy and may be doubly assured by a treaty, provided she grants to Egypt reciprocal commercial facilities in the French Congo."

The attitude of the sultan of Turkey and the Khedive of Egypt on the Egyptian question is being closely watched and it is said the British foreign office has received proofs of attempts upon the part of France to influence both of them against Great Britain. The intrigues at Constantinople, it is added, were greatly checked by the present relations between Great Britain and Germany and the British diplomatic agent in Egypt, Lord Cromer, has taken the khedive in hand and is understood to have put before him a sort of ultimatum, which may have involved his disposition in favor of his brother, whereupon the khedive became submissive and indicated as a token of his submission, his willingness to visit England and pay his respects to Queen Victoria, a duty which he had hitherto evaded, although he had paid prolonged visits to several European capitals.

A majority of the people here have been convinced that war between England and rance is inevitable sooner or later, and many expressions of regret have been heard at the military and other clubs that the conflict apparently is not to take place in the near future, as it is the general belief that the army and navy are in a perfect state of preparedness. The general feeling in the country is such as would indorse any warlike action upon the part of the government. In any case, work at the arsenals and dock yards actively and silently continues and information on the subject has been curtailed to an unprecedented point. All the officials have strict orders not to talk. The British admiralty has suspended its daily announcements of the movements of British ships abroad and the naval men express the opinion that such far reaching preparations mean something far more than a naval demonstration.

The whole reserve squadron has assembled at Devonport and is now completely fitted out and ready to sail at a few hours' notice.

DAVID A. WELLS DEAD.

An Account of His Career as a Public Man and a Writer.

Norwich, Conn., Nov. 7.—David Ames Wells, the noted economist, died at his home in this city Saturday afternoon. His death was not unexpected, though until Friday it was thought that he might rally from his illness. Mr. Wells had experienced a general breaking down of the system for upward of two years, but he was about during the summer and was able to drive out until two weeks ago. Then he contracted a slight cold. For twenty-four hours he had been in a comatose state.

David Ames Wells, the distinguished economist, was born in Springfield, Mass., June 7, 1828. He was graduated at Williams College in 1847, and was for a time associate editor of the Republican. While in that office he first suggested the idea that the printed sheets of books and newspapers might be folded by machinery; he subsequently became associated in the invention of the first machine devised for that purpose.

He then entered the Lawrence Scientific school, where he was a special student under Louis Agassiz, and from which he graduated in 1851. He continued at Harvard for a time as associate professor, meanwhile publishing with George Bliss the "Annals of Scientific Discovery." During 1857-'58 he was a member of the publishing firm of G. P. Putnam & Co.

Plague and Smallpox in Cuba.

Santiago de Cuba, Nov. 7.—Dr. Woodson, medical inspector of the military department of Santiago, who arrived recently on the United States cruiser Cincinnati, after visiting Holguin, Gibara, Baracoa, Sagua de Tanamo and Guantanamo, reports that on his arrival at Gibara with Col. Hood's regiment, he discovered more than half of the population suffering from plague and smallpox. There were also many cases of typhus and dysentery. He went immediately to work and systematically isolated the houses, insisting on the regiment (the Second Immunes) being encamped in a healthful locality near the sea.

Greatest Whaling Catch for Years.

San Francisco, Nov. 7.—Four more whalers, with catches aggregating in value $750,000, have arrived from the Arctic. The steamer Norwhale was the first to put in an appearance. She was 14 days from Fox Island and had in her hold 42,600 pounds of whalebone and 548 barrels of oil. The Kariuk, 13 days from Unalaska, brought 5,000 pounds of bone and four bear skins. The Grampus had in her hold 40,000 pounds of whalebone and the whaling bark California, from the Behring sea, brought 1,600 barrels of sperm oil. This is the greatest catch for many years.

McKinley Receives 4th Ohio.

Washington, Nov. 7.—The 4th Ohio, which passed through this city Saturday on its way home from Porto Rico, got the unusual compliment of a reception at the White House. Headed by Colonel Colt and staff, dismounted, the regiment first passed in review, marching in columns of fours.

After the review arms were stacked in a nearby street and the soldiers filed through the White House doors, moved to the left and entered the east room. Marching in single file, the men passed by the president, who shook hands with each one.

Chinese Affront to Russia.

London, Nov. 7.—A dispatch from Shanghai says a telegram from Tien-Tsin reports that 40 Russian sailors, an admiral and M. Pavloff, the Russian charge d'affaires in China, have been detained there, permission to proceed to Pekin not being forthcoming, and that there is strong official opposition to their going to the capital.

This, it is stated, is a forerunner of a probable affront to Russia.

Against Ocean Racing.

Berlin, Nov. 7.—The German government officials have ordered an investigation into the reported ocean racing between the White Star line steamer Teutonic and the North German Lloyd steamer Kaiser Friedrich on their last trip to New York.

As the Kaiser Frederich belongs to a subsidized company the government will also be interpellated in the reichstag on the subject by Herr Richter, the Radical leader.

The Kaiser at Beyrout.

Beyrout, Nov. 7.—The emperor and empress of Germany arrived here Saturday, but they remained on board the imperial yacht until to-day, when they started for Damascus.

The heat is tropical. Before embarking at Jaffa, Emperor William promised his protection to the German colonists at that place, who cheered his majesty enthusiastically.

To Abandon the Colon.

Santiago de Cuba, Nov. 7.—Captain Chester of the United States cruiser Cincinnati, and a board of officers having visited the wreck of the Spanish cruiser Cristobal Colon and spending several hours at the scene, finally decided that work on the sunken warship should be abandoned, as in their opinion there is no possibility of a chance of raising her.

Schley Sails for Home.

San Juan de Porto Rico.—Admiral Schley and his staff will return to the United States on the cruiser Newark, which will sail to-day and will be in New York on Friday next. Judge Russell will also sail on the Newark. Admiral Schley bears with him the full report of the American evacuation commission.

For President of Oberlin.

Chicago, Nov. 7.—The Rev. John Henry Barrows of this city has been offered the presidency of Oberlin College. Dr. Barrows, who is now in Oberlin, has not yet decided whether to accept or not. Dr. Barrows is one of the leading Presbyterian clergymen in the West.

Prince George to Govern Crete.

Paris, Nov 7.—The appointment of Prince George of Greece as head of the new administration in Crete is imminent. His title will be commissioner general of the European powers in Crete.

EXPLOSION IN CAPITOL

Supreme Court Room and Library Badly Damaged by Fire.

VALUABLE RECORDS LOST

Lower Part of the Building Wrecked by Concussion. Gas Escaping from a Large Main the Cause of Explosion. Valuable Works of Art Destroyed. Damage Cannot Be Estimated but Will Probably Reach 200,000

Washinton, Nov. 7.—An explosion and fire at 5.13 yesterday afternoon wrecked the supreme court rooms and the rooms immediately adjoining it on the main floor of the United States Capitol. The damage is extensive. The entire central eastern part of the great marble pile from the main floor to the subterranean basement practically is a mass of ruins.

The force of the explosion was so heavy that the coping stones on the outer walls, just to the east of the point where the explosion occurred, were bulged out nearly two inches; windows in all that part of the building were blown out, and locked doors were forced from their hinges at least 150 feet from the scene. Fire followed the explosion so quickly as to seem practically simultaneous with it.

The explosion shook the immense structure to its foundations, and was heard several squares from the Capitol. It occurred in a small room tightly enclosed by heavy stone walls in the subterranean basement, immediately below the main entrance to the old Capitol building.

In this room was a five hundred light gas metre, which was fed by a four-inch main. Little gas is used in that part of the building, but at the time of the explosion the gas had not been turned off at the meter.

The meter itself was wrecked, and the gas pouring from the main caught fire.

The flames originating from the explosion darted up the shaft of the elevator, which had been completely destroyed by the force of the explosion, and communicated with the record room of the supreme court, the office of the marshal of the court, and the supreme court library.

Before the flames could be subdued the priceless documents in the record room had been almost totally destroyed and serious damage had been done in the marshal's room and some minor rooms.

The library of the supreme court, immediately beneath the supreme court room, was damaged badly by fire, water and smoke, practically destroying the great collection of law reference books. The library contained about thirty thousand volumes and was used not only by the justices of the supreme court, but by members of Congress and lawyers practicing before the supreme court.

Justice Harlan said last night that the library was extremely valuable, many of the works it contained would, he thought, be difficult to replace. Librarian Clarke, after a cursory examination, made by the light of lanterns, expressed the opinion that many of the books could be saved, although they had been drenched by water from the stream poured into the library for two hours or more after the explosion.

The most serious damage in the opinion of the justices of the supreme court is to the records stored in the subbasement.

These included all the records of the supreme court from 1792 to 1832. The room contains records of cases and opinions handed down by the fathers of the judiciary of the government.

Apparently the documents in this room are either totally destroyed or so badly damaged by fire and water as to be useless.

Justice Harlan said that while the loss of the records was irreparable, it was fortunate that the later records of the court, which were kept in the office of the clerk on the main floor, were not injured.

James McKenny clerk of the supreme court, expressed the hope, after making an examination of the old record room, that some at least of the documents could be saved.

The supreme court room was damaged principally by water and smoke, the fire not reaching that point. Adjoining the court room, however, both the marshal's office and the senate barber shop furnished food for the flames.

While many theories are offered as to the cause of the explosion, it seems beyond doubt to have been due to escaping gas.

At 5.07 Lieutenant Leison of the Capitol police detected an odor of gas in the corridors adjoining the supreme court room. Not being able to locate it, he proceeded to Statuary hall—the old hall of the House of Representatives—thinking the gas might be escaping from a burner there.

While he was searching the explosion occurred.

Only a few persons, principally officers of the Capitol police, were in the building at the time, but several of them had narrow escapes.

Among the losses which will be regretted most sincerely are those of the busts of Chief Justice Marshal and other distinguished members of the supreme court, which were arranged on small pedestals about the supreme court chamber.

In the smoke and ruin which followed the explosion these valuable works of art were either badly damaged or wholly destroyed, and with their destruction the country has suffered an irreparable loss.

The Capitol building has been damaged a number of times before by fire, but it is believed that last night's fire will prove to be the most disastrous in the history of the building.

On two occasions prior to this fires have been started by explosions of gas.

Seventeen years ago a large amount of damage was done to the same part of the building by an explosion of this kind, and in 1876 there was an explosion of gas that killed one man and came near killing another.

Trolley "Bluffing."

At the last meeting of the Westfield Township Committee the Elizabeth and Westfield Street Railway Company secured a six months' extension of time for the completion of their road, which makes the franchise in that place good until June 1st, 1899.

In connection with this action it will be remembered that Adrain Riker, of the Plainfield Street Railway Company, when he appeared before the Common Council two weeks ago, said that without the link between East Fifth street and the city limits in this city the proposed line of the Elizabeth and Westfield Street Railway Company would be utterly useless and would never be built.

In a very few minutes after that it will also be remembered Mr. Riker withdrew the application for this pivotal franchise, as he admitted it was. The impression that he wished to convey was that the company would abandon their plan of extending the city lines, and necessarily thereby, by his own confession, the project of a through county line.

Such being the case, what does the action taken by the Westfield officials mean?

It means, of course, that Mr. Riker's move in the Common Council chamber was nothing but a "bluff," and that the withdrawl of the application was but part of a policy by which they hoped to delude the people of Plainfield.

It is accepted as a common fact about town that the Plainfield Street Railway Company will renew their application for the franchise over Second street, and that very soon Perhaps they will do it this evening at the regular meeting of the Common Council. Their action in Westfield shows their true position.

The ideas of road improvement held by the Newark Call are strong and logical. They are as follows:

The development of good roads throughout Northern New Jersey has been remarkably rapid, and it should be encouraged as much as possible. The Legislature has spent a great deal of money on new armories, on public buildings and upon petty schemes in which members were interested; but notwithstanding the enormous income and the surplus of a million, it has cut down the State appropriation for roads. This was excused at the time by some scandals in the management of the funds; but the remedy for this should be the removal of the scandals, not niggardiness in regard to necessary improvements. If the State is to take a lot of taxes which should go to municipalities, let it at least spend its extra money to help municipal needs. In the last twenty years the number of those who live in the country and do business in the city has increased tremendously, and these people are especially in need of good roads.

After being without a theatre for over a year New Brunswick people are bestirring themselves now and talking about putting up a handsome and model playhouse. The cost of such a project is calculated to be $50,000, one-half of which the New Brunswickers will be asked to subscribe. Local pride rather than expectation of financial return for their investment is usually the incentive for the subscription to such an enterprise in a city the size of New Brunswick. If there are any who invest their cash in such stock with the hope of getting great returns they will undoubtedly be greviously disappointed. Such, at least, have been the experience in Plainfield and scores of other towns.

Forty-two States will hold elections tomorrow. Three States, Maine, Vermont and Oregon, have already held their elections. The following States will elect Governors: California, Colorado, Connecticut, Idaho, Indiana, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, New Jersey, New York, Nevada, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, North Dakota, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

Tomorrow being a holiday, Street Commissioner Gavett suggests that after depositing their votes, those who do not care for golf, football or a trip to Bound Brook over the new trolley line, should pay a visit to the sewage disposal beds and judge whether they are the oderless models of perfection claimed by some, the complete and dismal failures as portrayed by others, or something between the two.

The total Republican vote in this city last year was 1,562, and the total Democratic vote 631. It will without question be much higher on both sides this year. Assemblyman Murray received the highest majority—822. The Democrats were then without workers of any kind around the poles and the Republicans made only spasmodic attempts to get out their vote.

The Democratic and Republican candidates for Governor in New Jersey will keep up the fight to the very opening of the polls. Today Candidate Crane will push through Hudson county and speak at several meetings tonight. Candidate Voorhees will devote the day to Ocean county.

We await with some interest to see if the Plainfield Street Railway Company will get that ten thousand foot pole, which Mr. Riker so sarcastically spoke of at the hearing two weeks ago, to touch the trolley franchise with again.

Complete and authentic election returns of the city, county and State will be published in Wednesday's Daily Press.

The people will settle the claims of the politicians tomorrow.

It is said that life's side show costs more than the real circus.

The promises are good for fair election weather.

The Daily Press will be published tomorrow.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

A Plainfielder was fined $60 for bringing game into New Jersey that had been legally shot in New York. G-r-racious, what blue laws we have! —Westfield Republican.

* * * * *

Harry Green, who has lately taken up his residence in the borough, was on a hunting trip in New York State and returned last Saturday week with seven rabbits. Percy Ohl and Freeholder Lutkins made complaint to Game Warden Sebring and Green was brought before Justice Mattison who fined him $60 for bringing game unsealed into the State before the law was up. A law passed by a Republican legislature makes it a penalty of $20 fine for each rabbit exposed. If $120 could be omitted why could not all the fine have been done so? Twenty dollars of the fine goes to the complainants, $20 to the warden and $20 to the game society. There has been a great deal of indignant comment of this case by the citizens of the borough. A Democratic legislature will repeal this obnoxious law next winter. Of course, no sane person admits its constitutionality. — Borough correspondent in Bound Brook State Center.

—Tonight the City Council will meet in regular session and it is said that the trolley matter will be introduced for the consideration of the members.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

That delightful new play of Denman Thompson's, "The Sunshine of Paradise Alley," which is now in its third season of success, and which has been endorsed by the press, public and clergy, wherever seen, as clean and ennobling in its language, and containing nothing in its construction to jar the feelings of the most fastidious, will be given its first local presentation at Music Hall tonight. It is by the author of "The Old Homestead," and was written for the people who enjoyed that beautiful play. The original scenic and electrical effects will be used on this occasion, and the cast will include many of those who were in the original New York production.

"The Finish of Dr. Fresh," Davis & Keogh's new farce-comedy, is the excellent attraction at the Star Theatre, Broadway and Fourteenth street, New York, this week. The plot is founded upon new and original lines, while the situations and climaxes are said to be exceedingly funny. One of the scenes is a faithful representation of a manicuring establishment, with its bevy of pretty girls and its odd and sometimes eccentric customers. It is here that the plot is hatched, fun runs riot, and the audience is given a taste of the sweet morsels of gay life as it exists in the metropolis. The cast is a large and capable one, including such names as Al H. Wilson, George W. Day, Lew Carroll, John and Mollie McCarthy, May Montford, Katharine Klare, Stewart Sisters, Chas. B. Ward and Chas. Hagan.

In "The Sleeping City," which will be at Music Hall Friday night, is found the latest exposition of New York life. It is a story with high dramatic effect and unflagging interest. The scenes are realistic and the big features are a thrilling escape from Sing Sing and a burning asylum, which necessitates elaborate stage effects. The company presenting this play is said to be first-class in every respect. There are bright specialties, and everything is clean, clear-cut and up-to date.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, November 7.—For several years the leading church people of the village have been agitating a movement towards organizing a Young Men's Christian Association in town. One evening last week, at the invitation of Dr. J. Ackerman Coles, who had become deeply interested in the matter, representative men from the Baptist, Methodist and Episcopal churches met at his home, "Deerhurst," to formulate plans for the long-desired association. Dr Coles presented plans which made it possible to organize an association at once, offering the use of the old school building, rent free, to the association, and also offering to subscribe a liberal amount towards its support. It was decided to accept the doctor's generous offer and affect an organization at once. A. D. Beekon was elected president; George E. Hall, vice-president; A. D. Shepard, treasurer, and H. P. Robison, secretary. A board of directors was also appointed, and Sunday evening next a public meeting will be held in the Baptist church, when W. D. Murray, of Plainfield, a prominent worker in Y. M. MAKING IT PLAIN.

Values crowd each other as the season advances; they clamor for a place in print; perhaps one in twenty gets it. Last month we broke a record, and the next 'twill be the same. We own the goods to do it with; we have the nerve to cut prices right through every department, not on half-a-dozen articles for baits, but every dollar's worth of goods in the store. It means much to you from a money-saving standpoint.

PRICE BREAKS

In Silks among the manufacturers means Price Breaks here; you get the full benefit of it, and it means much. Over one thousand yards of Handsome Silks that were $1 to $1.75 the yard will go for 79c yd.

DRESS GOODS

We have too many of certain lots, a backward season is to blame for it, and when the values remain the same the prices are badly twisted. About 100 pieces of Skirt and Waist Lengths, were 40, 50 and 75c yd, now 25c yd. Fifty pieces of Fancies, were 50 and 75c yd, now 29c yd. Twenty-five pieces of Imported Novelties, were 75c yd, now 49c.

WHITE QUILTS.

About one hundred of them manufacturers samples, full size, handsome quilts, staple as wheat, but they go to you at half value—were $1.25 to $3, now 69c to $1.75

A NEW DEPARTURE.

YOUNG WOMEN TAUGHT TO BE ATTENDANTS ON THE SICK.

It Does Not Interfere with the Trained Nurse—Eight Weeks Constitute the Course—An Immediate Call for the Pupils as Soon as They Graduate.

The Young Women's Christian Association, of New York, graduated its first class of trained attendants a short time ago, and requests for their services poured in so fast from the doctors that every graduate was placed immediately.

Miss M. D. Nesmith, who is in charge of the class department, was seen, and spoke enthusiastically about what she called "a new occupation for women." "The purpose of this department," she said, "is the training of women to be attendants in the care of convalescents, feeble or elderly persons and sub-acute and chronic cases. There are many intelligent women who are unable to give to study the length of time required to become a trained nurse, and there are many families who, for economic reasons, are obliged to do without trained assistants in times of illness. It is to enable such homes to obtain better aid at a moderate compensation and to offer an honorable means of livelihood to women that this work is established. It will in no way interfere with the regular nurses' occupation, because one is a trained nurse, the other a trained attendant.

"The course of instruction embraces a period of eight weeks," she continued, "and is devoted to practical nursing among the poor and class work, including forty lectures." The course of study is personal hygiene, sickroom hygiene, methods of ventilating, sweeping, dusting, care of utensils, temperature of room, bed-making for bed patients and for convalescents, lifting, moving, arrangement of pillows, care of patients, frequency of bathing, care of teeth, hair and nails and prevention of bedsores. The attendants are taught all about footbaths, when, and how to use hot-water bags, hot bottles, flannels, salt bags, poultices, mustard plasters, stupes, iodine and liniment, and particular attention is given to the preparation and serving of food, the temperature of the body, and to r[illegible] aloud. Writing notes and [illegible]ks are a part of the last [illegible]e.

"[illegible]rs want our graduates," [illegible] said, "and we are hope[illegible] future. Our attendants [illegible] accept more than $7 a week and their board for the first year, nor more than $10 and their board for the second year. Diplomas permit them to register in the employment bureau of the association. We have had several telephone messages within the last few days from physicians who wanted attendants, and we were unable to supply them."

VERY TALL KNEELING

Explained Why "Little Mack" Disobeyed His Officer's Command.

One of the officers of the rebellion had a private in his company whom the boys jestingly named "Little Mack," because of his bigness. He was the tallest man in the company, about six feet three inches, and one of the bravest in the regiment.

On one occasion, when the men were ordered to kneel down behind a stone fence in preparation for an expected assault, the officer, who was preparing a surprise for the enemy, on inspecting the line was astonished to see one large serene face above the top of the fence. He shouted out angrily: "There you—you man with the head up—kneel down, sir." The man did not move, and again the officer thundered: "Why don't you kneel down sir?"

Oblivious to any danger and blind to the significance of his head being exposed, Little Mack answered: "I am kneeling down." "Then," shouted the officer, "put your head down, or you'll have it shot off, confound you." Thereupon Little Mack curled down behind the fence, grieving because the captain had howled at him.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Protection for Depots.

"It's perfectly disgraceful," she exclaimed.

"What's the matter?" inquired her husband.

"Here's a description of a woman who gets up in public and declares herself an anarchist."

"Well," was the rejoinder, "maybe it's all for the best. I believe I'd like to see women crowd the males out of the anarchist business. When they throw bombs they would not be so likely to hit anybody." Boston Traveler.

His First Duty.

"What is the first duty of a war correspondent?" asked the managing editor of one of the "new" journals.

"To have his picture taken showing how he looks when equipped for his work in the field."

The answer was so satisfactory that the only question that remained to be answered was whether he should be sent to Cuba or China.

A MOTHERS SOLICITUDE.

How She Wanted Her Son to Qualify for a Pension.

"The interest of parents in their soldier sons is exhibited in various ways," said a clerk in the Adjutant General's office to a Star reporter, "and while some of these exhibitions are grand and beautiful, some are otherwise, and I am sorry to say that the otherwise kind are painfully frequent. A recent case will explain what I am getting at. A young soldier applied to the War Department for a discharge. He, like thousands of others, had seen no service, except camp service, and, tiring of this, there being no immediate prospect of service in the field, he applied for a discharge. The fond parent, in this particular case a widowed mother, hearing of the son's application for a discharge, came to this city and objected to the discharge giving a half a dozen good reasons for her objection, which, boiled down, meant that the son was a ne'er-do-well and that about the only job her boy ever held was his job in the Army, since May last. When told that the War Department was not particularly anxious to keep soldiers in the service who only stayed in it as a means of livelihood, where they could get their food and clothing, and that there was a strong chance that the discharge would be granted, she begged that the son be kept in the service long enough to get a hospital record, and that, while he was not sick now, and had not been, she had every reason to suppose that he would be, for lots of stronger men had succumbed to camp diseases, and in the natural course of events her son would share the same fate if his exposure continued, though she did not expect or desire that he would be seriously affected, as he had never made effort enough in his life even to get a serious illness. 'Discharge him now,' said the mother, 'when he has not been in the hospital an hour and therefore has no hospital record, and it will be almost out of the question for him ever to get a pension!" At this the official she addressed closed the interview by saying that the son would undoubtedly be discharged, and that the government was not engaged in making hospital records for the accommodation of worthless soldiers or speculative parents."—Washington Star.

PITS IN THE PHILIPPINES.

A Fondness for the Rooster Which Takes the Place of Dogs and Cats.

Speaking of roosters, they are the native dog in the Philippines. The inhabitants pet and coddle them, smoth down their plumage, clean their combs, or pull out their tail feathers to make them fight, to their heart's content, and it is a fact that these cackling glass-eaters really seem to show affection for their proprietors in as great measure as they exhibit hatred for their brothers. Every native has his fighting cock, which is reared with the greatest care until he has shown sufficient prowess to entitle him to an entrance into the cockpit. In case of fire, the rooster is the first thing rescued and removed to a place of safety, for babies—common luxuries in the Philippines—are a secondary consideration and more easily duplicated than the feathered biped.

It is almost impossible to walk along any street in the suburban part of the town without seeing dozens of natives trudging along with roosters under their arms, which are being talked to and petted to distraction. At every other little roadside hut an impromptu battle will be going on between two birds of equal or unequal merit, the two proprietors holding their respective roosters by the tails in order that they may not come into too close quarters. The cock-pits, where gatherings are held on Thursdays and Sundays, are large enclosures covered with a roof of thatch sewed into a frame-work of bamboo; they are open on all sides, and banked up with tiers of rude seats that surround a sawdust ring in the center. Outside the gates to the flimsy structure sit a motley crowd of women, young and old, selling eatables whose dark, greasy texture beggars description, while here and there in the open spaces a couple of natives will be giving their respective roosters a preliminary trial with each other. As the show goes on inside, shouts and applause resound at every opportunity, and at the close of the performance a multitude of two-wheeled gigs carry off the victors with their spoils, while the losers trudge home through the dust on foot.—Chicago News.

The Catcher Caught.

A clergyman addressing those who go to church to stare about and then complain that others stare at them, lately said:

"When I was a boy we had a schoolmaster who had odd ways of catching idle boys. Says he, one day: 'Boys, I must have closer attention to books; the first one of you that sees another boy idle I want you to inform me and I will attend to the case.' 'Ah,' thought I to myself, 'there's Joe Simmons, that I don't like; I'll watch him, and if I see him look off his book I'll tell on him.' It was not long before I saw Joe look off his book, and immediately I informed the master. 'Indeed,' said he, 'how did you know he was idle?' 'I saw him,' was the reply. 'You did; and were your eyes on your book when you saw him?'

"I was caught, but I didn't watch for the boys again."—Chicago Times-Herald.

A PUGILISTIC DOMINIE IN RAMONA.

A Novel but Effective Manner of Saving Souls.

California has a minister who occasionally varies his routine of sermons and prayer-meetings by putting on the boxing-gloves and knocking down any local pugilist who cares to enter the ring with him.

The Rev. Mr. Wilson, of Ramona, Cal., bears the unique distinction of being the only educated minister who has gone into pugilism and knocks out big prize-fighters for the purpose of winning souls to salvation.

Ramona is a rough mining town of only a few thousand inhabitants, and up to a few months ago did not possess a single clergyman of any denomination amony its citizens. The only attempts that were ever made to convert the people of Ramona to any kind of religion were irregular and infrequent trips made into that neighborhood by traveling ministers who hadn't previously been warned of the unsual toughness of the majority of its citizens, so that these stray visits were never repeated by the same clergyman.

But the citizens of Ramona have nearly all experienced a change of heart since the advent of Rev. Mr. Wilson. Mr. Wilson is a thoroughly refined young minister who belongs to one of the best families of San Francisco. He had never seen a boxing match in all his life, and scarcely knew what boxing-gloves looked like, although he had the strength of an ox and an arm like steel. It was as an ordinary traveling preacher that the Rev. Mr. Wilson first ventured into Ramona. The first day he was there the whole talk of the town was about the big prize-fight between Corbett and Lanky Bob, and when Mr. Wilson tried to get a crowd together for a prayer-meeting they only broke up into knots to talk about the fight.

This gave the daring young minister an idea and he at once set about securing a course of lessons in boxing from a local pugilist. In a few weeks word was sent around the town that the Rev. Mr. Wilson was ready to knock out any miner of his weight who cared to put on the gloves with him after the prayer-meeting that evening, but that no one would be admitted who had not come in time to attend the prayer-meeting.

This announcement had the desired effect. That night the music hall of Ramona was jammed to suffocation at the time services were to begin and three times as many more men were clamoring for admittance. That decided the success of the pugilistic preacher's prayer-meeting and every week since that time the popularity of the clergyman has been on the increase, as at none of the weekly meetings which have followed the first has there been found a single fighter in Ramona who could stand up before the onslaught of the mighty man of God for four rounds.

Mr. Wilson has not only succeeded in building a little brick church—which is the first regular house of worship in Ramona—but he has also started a weekly paper called the Sentinel. After his sermon on a recent Sunday a local bully named Dave Putnam, about whom an item had appeared in the last issue of the Sentinel, walked up the centre aisle of the church and demanded that the minister take back what he had published about him. The pugilistic preacher-editor declined to do as was demanded, so Putnam pulled off his coat and prepared to "wipe the minister off the face of the earth," as he termed it. The bully was a great deal heavier than the clergyman and his record as a prize-fighter was so good that the congregation sprang to his rescue. But the assistance was unneeded. The preacher sent the bully to the floor with a single blow on the jaw, and as Putnam tried to rise, smashed him on the nose and threw him out of the church. This was the last attempt that was made to whip the pugilistic preacher.—New York World.

A TENDER COURTSHIP.

Ceremony Was at a Discount Way Down in Tennessee.

Haweis, in his reminiscences, tells of an extraordinary courtship in Union county, Tenn. "I was in the 'frog-pond' district of the country, when a young man rode up in front of the cabin where I was stopping and spoke to a girl who was dipping water from a spring. 'Howdy, Sal?' 'Howdy, Tom?' 'Come jump on the hess an' go to Erwin with me.' 'What fur?' 'Ter git married.' 'But yo' hain't done co'ted me yit.' 'I know I hain't, but I've been too pestered with work. I allus intended to marry yer, though.' 'But I ain't got no clo's,' remonstrated the girl. 'Well, we'll ride on yon side of Erwin to Sister Mag's in the cove, and I'll git yer a dress.' 'Sho'ly, Tom?' 'Sho'ly, Sal. 'What kin' of a dress?' 'Best thar is in Lowe's sto'.' Not another word was said. She dropped the bucket and jumped upon the horse, shouting to her mother, 'Mam, me an' Tom is goin' ter git married at Erwin. We'l be by here in tha mornin'.' The mother started as if to call her back, but the horse was galloping down the lane, and she went and carried off the bucket of water without comment."

Reading Character.

Dribbler—"In my opinion a man who writes an illegible hand does it because he thinks people are willing to puzzle over it. In other words, he is a chunk of conceit."

Scribler—"Not always. Sometimes a man writes illegibly not because he is conceited, but because he is modest"

Dribbler—"Modest! What about?"

Scribbler—"About his spelling."

Aus der Rheinpfalz.

Speyer. Aus dem Jahresbericht der Diakonissenanstalt, die unlängst hier ihr Jahresfest feierte, ist zu ersehen, daß die Thätigkeit des Instituts äußerst segensvoll war. Die Zahl der Schwestern beträgt zur Zeit 229. Auf den Stationen wurden 10,857 Kranke in 11,037 Tagen und 8952 Nächten verpflegt, in den acht Spitälern 14,023 Tag- und Nachtpfleger gezählt. An Geldunterstützungen wurden durch Schwestern allein 14,996 Mark gewährt. In der Ambulanz des Spitals zu St. Ingbert wurden 5673 Kranke behandelt, im Viktoriastift zu Kreuznach 870 Kinder verpflegt u. s. w. Die Jahreseinnahme betrug 122,082 Mark, die Ausgabe 98,791 Mark.

Württemberg.

Stuttgart. Neulich Früh wurde in zahlreichen Ortschaften Oberschwabens ein vier Sekunden andauerndes Erdbeben verspürt. In vielen Häusern wurden Gegenstände umgeworfen, ein erheblicher Schaden ist jedoch nicht angerichtet worden. — Anläßlich der Vermählungsfeierlichkeiten im königlichen Hause fand hier ein von der hiesigen Schützengilde veranstaltetes Festschießen statt. Auch der König betheiligte sich daran. Pokale wurden bei diesem Festschießen nicht herausgeschossen, nur Schützenthaler, die auf der Vorderseite die Reliefporträts des Brautpaares, auf der Rückseite das württembergische Wappen mit entsprechender Inschrift zeigen.

Heilbronn. Das Gerücht, Oberbürgermeister Hegelmaier habe in Folge seiner Erwählung zum Abgeordneten des 3. Württembergischen Reichstagswahlkreises die erbetene Erlaubniß erhalten, die Landwehrhauptmannsuniform wieder tragen zu dürfen, wird von keiner Seite widerrufen. Es scheint also begründet zu sein. In Heilbronn schmunzelt man nicht wenig. —Der Herbst fällt quantitativ so gering aus, daß die Hauptkelter der Stadt nicht geöffnet wird. Das war seit Menschengedenken nicht mehr der Fall, das ganze Quantum wird auf etwa 100 Eimer geschätzt, während in manchen Jahren 10,000 bis 12,000 Eimer geherbstet wurden.

Neresheim. Der erste Gewinn der Kirchberger Kirchenbaulotterie mit 15,000 Mark fiel einem Maurer Namens Karl Ziegler in Aufhausen zu. Der glückliche Gewinner ist Vater von neun Kindern und lebte bisher in den dürftigsten Verhältnissen.

Rottweil. Der hiesigen Getreideverkaufs-Genossenschaft hat der König einen einmaligen Beitrag von 6000 Mark verwilligt.

Ulm. Im Chor des hiesigen Münsters wird gegenwärtig der Fußboden aufgegraben, um die Heizkanäle durchzuziehen. Hierbei fand man einen kunstvoll gearbeiteten Zinnsarg, der nach der aufgravirten Aufschrift die Gebeine eines Töchterchens des Herzogs Friedrich Philipp von Württemberg enthält. Das Kind starb 1¾ Jahre alt hier und ist am 3. Juni 1633 im Chor des Münsters beigesetzt worden. Die Gebeine, ein Leichentuch von Seide und die Ueberreste einer kleinen Perlenkrone sind noch wohl erhalten.

Baden.

Karlsruhe. Wegen der hohen Fleischpreise beabsichtigen die der Städteordnung unterstehenden badischen Städte, eine Petition an die Regierung zu richten, zwecks Erleichterung der Schweineeinfuhr aus Holland und Frankreich.

Heidelberg. Schon seit längerer Zeit wird von einer größeren Anzahl von Einwohnern Handschuhsheims die Einverleibung dieses 3400 Seelen zählenden Ortes in die Stadt Heidelberg erstrebt, doch sind die Meinungen noch getheilt. Dieser Tage ging eine Petition für die Eingemeindung an das Bezirksamt ab.

Ladenburg. Unter großen Festlichkeiten beging kürzlich die Stadt die Feier ihres 1800jährigen Bestehens.

OUR NEW COLONIES.

SOME FACTS IN REGARD TO UNCLE SAM'S POSSESSIONS.

If Texas Had Seventy Million People, It Would Have Only the Density of Population of Our New Island Colony, Porto Rico.

While it is undoubtedly true that an enormous amount of development of one sort and another is possible in every one of the island colonies which yesterday were Spain's but to-day are ours, if anybody's, it is also true that there is much misapprehension regarding them.

For instance, there has been a great deal of talk about the undeveloped agricultural resources of Porto Rico, and more than one ordinarily level-headed American has dreamed dreams of fortunes to be made there by raising certain crops. But these dreams are generally regarded as delusive by the well informed, for Porto Rico is already over-cultivated, if anything. Certainly her soil is far more assiduously tended than that of any state in this Union. There may be some sections in a few of the older states that have reached a grade of agricultural development approaching that of Porto Rico, but they are few and small. And there is no comparison whatever between the high state of cultivation attained there and the agricultural development of the greater part of the available farming land in this country.

This statement is made primarily on the evidence of travellers in Porto Rico who speak with wonder of the thorough subjugation of the soil there, but it need not rest on their evidence alone. It is fully borne out by figures, which sometimes lie, but are perfectly trustworthy in this instance. Porto Rico, with an area of only 3,550 square miles, less than one-thirteenth the area of the state of New York, has a population of about 800,000, or 225 to the square mile, and most of this population is agricultural at that. The United States, with an area of 3,609,990 square miles, has a population of about 74,500,000, or only 21 to the square mile, a much larger proportion case in Porto Rico.

There are, in truth, only two states in our Union that support a larger population to the square mile than Porto Rico. These are Massachusetts and Rhode Island. Massachusetts, with an area of 8,315 square miles, has a population of 2,238,943, or 269 to the square mile. Little Rhode Island, with 1,250 square miles, has 345,506, or 276 to the square mile. But neither of these states is chiefly agricultural—in fact the bulk of the population in both is supported by the mills and factories in the cities and towns. The farms of neither Massachusetts nor Rhode Island are cultivated with anything like the care bestowed upon the Porto Rican acres, nor will they be until the United States is desperately crowded, much more desperately, perhaps, than it will be in the lifetime of anyone who reads this article.

No state besides these two approaches Poro Rico in density of population. New Jersey, largely a manufacturing and suburban community, supports 184 persons to the square mile; Connecticut, chiefly by manufactures, supports 149 to the square mile; New York supports 132, vastly more than half by commercial and manufacturing enterprises, and Pennsylvania, with the third largest city in the Union, and her myriads of miners, 116.

These figures are enough to show that the enterprising American, desirous of winning wealth by agricultural pursuits, would find far more room for his ambitions in some of the most thickly populated states of the Union than in Porto Rico, to say nothing of California, with its vast territory, embracing 158,360 square miles, whereon dwell about 1,300,000 souls, or eight to the square mile; or Texas, extending over 265,780, with 2,236,000 inhabitants and about the same density. There is, in fact, a better chance for agricultural expansion in Michigan or Missouri, or Illinois or Indiana or any other state in the country except those which are too arid or too mountainous to cultivate profitably.

It is a little different with Cuba, and yet the population of that fair island, though not to be compared as to density with that of Rhode Island, Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey or Connecticut, is still greater than that of the United States as a whole. Before the beginning of the insurrection, which was followed by the Spanish-American war, Cuba had a population of more than 1,500,000, which was supported on 43,220 square miles, or about 34 to the mile. Allowing for all probable decrease, Cuba must still contain 1,000,000 souls.

This, however, is by no means dense enough to preclude a great degree of agricultural expansion, especially as the soil of Cuba is wondrously productive; there is no arid area and nearly every square foot of territory can be cultivated. Aside from climatic drawbacks, Cuba should, and, in spite of them probably will, furnish a field for the agricultural exploitation of much American capital. It is within the knowledge of the writer that the promoters of at least half a dozen schemes of this sort are now endeavoring to float stock and bonds in New York to carry them on. Some who invest will probably make money, but there isn't the slightest doubt that others—particularly among those who make primary investments, will lose their funds with neatness and dispatch.

Still another sort of condition exists in the Philippines, where with an area of 114,326 square miles, the population is about 9,500,000, or 83 to the square mile.

This is really denser than it seems, since the proportion of arable acres in that group of oriental islands is much smaller than in either Cuba or Porto Rico. The density in the Philippines is almost the same as in Delaware, where the area is 2,050 square miles and the population 168,493, or about 82 to the mile. Yet, should the Philippines finally fall under our dominion, there will undoubtedly be some cultivation of their soil by American capital, though it is highly improbable that laborers from America or any other country of a temperate climate can be employed on the plantations because of the climate.

The same will undoubtedly hold good with regard to the West Indian islands. Thus, while American capital may be profitably employed in the agricultural development and surely will find a place in the commercial development of the Spanish islands, they will afford little or no outlet for the surplus labor of this country. American managers will undoubtedly direct whatever American enterprises are established in any of the islands and a few Americans may find employment as clerks, but even they will be few, since men of native birth, who can stand the climate better, may be hired for smaller wages in both Cuba and Porto Rico than Americans would demand, while in the Philippines the Chinese—in some respects the finest clerks in the world—may be had for stipends that would seem pitiful to the most modest occidental. But this is trenching on a problem which is sure to be taken up by the labor organizations of the country and over which more than one pitched political battle is certain to be fought.

The total population of Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines is 11,800,000, or a little more than one-seventh as large as the population of the United States and almost identical with that of New England and the State of New York combined. The population of the Philippines is about once and a half as large as that of New York.

The total area of the Spanish islands is 161,096 square miles, about one-twenty-second of the area of the United States, which is 3,602,990 square miles, a little more than the area of California, while the entire Philippine archipellago, with Cuba and Porto Rico crowded alongside, would have ample room in a sea as big as Texas, with more than 100,000 square miles to spare for water space.

TROUT FISHING.

Live Bait, Used Instead of Flies, Lures Them to Deeply Cast Hooks.

A party just returned from a fishing trip in the trout region of upper Ontario reports excellent luck there. They made their headquarters on the York branch of the Modawaski River, a section of the province which is still unsettled. The river connects innumerable lakes, and is fed by all sorts and sizes of brooks and streams. Dense forest lands prevail, and the conditions generally are ideal for trout. Elephant Lake, one of the largest sheets of water in the region, with Elephant Creek, its biggest feeder, are places of refuge for the fattest of brook trout in the warm season. Elephant Creek is full of deep holes and the water in it is always cold, coming from countless springs and being shielded from the sun by the forest banks.

Here it was that the Americans got most of their fish. A six-mile paddle from camp brought them to the creek. Singularly enough all rules of trout fishing were set at naught. The fish took the bait as well in the hot sun of high noon as in the early morning or evening hours. Noises of various kinds, such as are ordinarily tabooed by trout experts, seemed to make no impression on the trout of Elephant Creek. They took the worms or grasshoppers in eight to ten feet of water readily, despite hilarity and loud talking on the surface.

The fishing was done from canoes, two men to each canoe, the boats being either anchored or held in position by grasping the bushes along the shore. Ordinary ground worms proved to be the best bait, with an occasional small grasshopper as a change of diet. One of the fishermen used a fly—a "Silver Doctor"—as well as live bait, attaching the fly about eighteen inches above the hook with the worm. In several instances he hooked two fish at one time, a trout taking the fly in deep water after another had been struck below on the worm-baited hook. The trout ran from eight ounces to a pound and a half in weight, the larger ones invariably making a stiff fight for liberty.

The big fellows seemed to flock together. In one instance twenty trout were taken out of one hole in Elephant Creek within half an hour, only one of which weighed less than fourteen ounces. The water at that point was twelve feet deep and was sheltered by a big mass of fallen dead timber. It was a difficult spot to fish in because of the constant danger of entangling the tackle, but great care was exercised and not a fish was lost once he was hooked.

In other places only the smaller trout could be hooked. They made the best pan fish, even if the sport of catching them was less exciting than their bigger brothers furnished.

Trolling in the deep channels of the lake resulted in a few strikes of grandfather trout, averaging two or three pounds in weight. They were caught in from forty to sixty feet of water and invariably gave a hard battle when reeled to within a few feet of the surface. Eight-ounce bass rods were used for the trolling, with tiny spoons weighted with shot for the bait. These big fellows were dark in color and their spots were not nearly so brilliant as those of the smaller trout caught in the streams.

The daughters of a South African Kaffir patriarch are a source of wealth to him, inasmuch as at their marriage they bring him from ten to twenty head of cattle. The mother likewise gains, for she invariably receives a cow from her son-in-law-elect.

THE ARTIST'S PUPIL.

It was the Lady Clara Curzon's first London season. Six months before, she had romped in the nursery adorned with a pinafore and pigtail but now she was bursting the bud and developing into a society rose of the fairest blush. To effect this development her mother, the Duchess of Bracering, a celebrated beauty in her time, had sacrificed much, though, like the Spartans of old, she concealed the troubles which gnawed at her vitals with quiet dignity and considerable tact. Every one hazarded that a break-up of some kind must sooner or later take place, for the ducal estates were heavily encumbered, and the financial position of the noble family was becoming more and more rotten at the core. Of this little Lady Clara knew nothing. Her buoyant young heart was entirely free from the weighty considerations which engaged her unfortunate parent. The pinafore and pigtail had been good enough for her, and beyond a childish appreciation of fine feathers, she had treated her court attire with little respect. She had inherited romance—an affliction worse than the gout, her mother said—from wayward ancestors who had wedded where eyes and heart and not reason had dictated; hence the fragile state of the family purse from which the duchess, herself veined with spotless tracings of effete blue, had now to suffer.

"I mean to marry some one who is talented and artistic," Lady Clara announced, when suitors were talked of. "not a popinjay who will divide his affections between me and a racing stable."

She echoed this from her friend Eldred Raymond, a clever girl whose poems had entitled her to a prominent position among the select coterie known as "Souls."

The allusion to the racing stable poked at a jaunty young duke who was first favorite in her mother's calculations. Second in the running came a millionaire, son of a prosperous manufacturer, whose name was ignored by Lady Clara, in spite of its oft-repeated emblazonment on boardings and advertisement sheets. The youth himself, who was not "in society," was privately known to the Duchess of Bracering, in consequence of certain mortgaging transactions wherein the aristocratic signatures of the lady and the clerklike autograph of his father sat cheek by jowl. Mr. Blakewell junior was in fact a solicitor, though a sleeping partner in the paternal concern, and he was professionally aware of one or two harrowing details in the Bracerings' financial history. Painfully aware, too, because alas! he had, like the cats who look unreservedly at kings, taken in every beautiful line of Lady Clara's young beauty; because he had gazed on her from afar—at the opera, the Savoy, Niagara; because, wherever money could carry him, there he had been for the express purpose of feasting his eyes on the one object he had ever looked upon to love.

When, therefore, the contumacious Clara twisted her pert little nose at the horsey duke, her parent's distressed thoughts rebounded to the manufacturer, for his calling of the law she looked upon as merely a seemly veil to cover the aggressive complexion of the world-famed trade.

"You might marry a wealthy parvenu who would set the old house on its legs again," the lady ventured to hint. "Remember that your face is your only fortune, my darling."

"And a very nice face, too. I mean to marry some one who'll appreciate it—paint it, or sing odes to it—anything but plant it at the head of a table like an idealized 'Aunt Sally' for people to fling compliments at;" and Lady Clara danced off with Miss Raymond to sit for a picture that Selwin Forrest, A. R. A., was in act of retouching.

Between the artist and Eldred, Lady Clara's views were taking a Bohemian turn, highly disconcerting to her unhappy mamma, and, during the Duchess' next interview with the solicitor, she made haste to bemoan her daughter's vagaries. She has almost promised an introduction, and in the present state of affairs was duly aware that the manufacturers' son stood little chance, and, moreover, that any attempts at coercion might make the already restive little filly totally ungovernable.

"It was the greatest mistake having her portrait painted," she groaned; "my child has picked up the studio jargon, and raves about 'values,' and all that kind of rubbish."

The solicitor blushed deeply; he understood his client's timely hint—the almost apology for his disappointment that lurked in her speech.

"If Lady Clara should change," he said, passing his fingers through the crisp crinkles of his hair, and looking earnestly across the table.

"I should be happy to ask you to Ringtowers, to introduce you—"

"As a friend?" he questioned.

"As a friend," the lady echoed.

"And if"—he blushed again—"if," he stammered.

"If," said the Duchess, composedly, lifting her eyes from a—to her—odious box that contained some documents relating to family debts, "if then you succeeded in winning my daughter's friendship, affection, well, you would have my good wishes."

She held out her hand, and the young man—he was romantic and in love—bent and kissed the thin gloved fingers.

"Thank you," he said simply.

"But she won't change," the Duchess said, in parting; "my suggestion was purely hypothetical. She is on guard; the bare suspicion of trade or money sets her off at a tangent."

* * * * * * *

Some weeks later the august lady condescended to eavesdropping. She was driven to it by the marked change in her daughter's manner, by the lengthy confabulations which invariably took place between the girl friends after their periodical visit to the studio—visits which seemed to have been repeated unnecessarily often of late.

"He said he admired my picture from the first day it was outlined in charcoal," Lady Clara was explaining to her chum; "he tried to copy it before he knew me."

"Mr. Forrest ought not to have introduced him. Your mother would be horrified."

"But he didn't; I remember well, it is just three weeks ago—the day you weren't well enough to go with me. Mr. Forrest apologized, explained that his pupil ought not to be there, had made a mistake in the day, and he was sending him away. Then I said there was no reason why he should go, and so Jock stayed and painted in a distant corner."

"And how did you know his name was Jock?"

"Oh, because I heard him called so. You know the picture 'Jock o'Hazeldine'? He sat for it to oblige Mr. Forrest. He is my Jock, now—I am sure of it; if only we were alone, we might tell each other all that our eyes have been saying."

"Oh, eyes talk quite enough," said Miss Raymond; "too much, I should say, from what I saw this morning."

The eavesdropper did not wait to hear more. She rushed down stairs, intending to write to Mr. Forrest and make a pretext by which the sittings should be abandoned. But, pen in hand, she changed her mind. Any such action would prove the eavesdropping; she must act openly and surprise the situation. The next morning nearly an hour after her daughter's departure for the studio, the ducal carriage arrived at the artist's house. The irate parent sped through the doorway, and made straight for the studio. She meant to confront the wretched upstart who had undermined her daughter's heart and give the painter—old enough, she had thought, to be trusted—a lesson to be remembered.

As she swept into the room, her angry eyes focussed the tableau in an painter at his easel; Eldred by a stove; draperies—on the model's throne; the instant. Her child—exquisite in lawn reading; and hunched up on a low stool, with his velveteen clad back turned, and his knees supporting his water-color block, the hateful pupil.

At the burst of the opening door the painter and Lady Clara simultaneously looked up, and the latter grew pale to the lip. She saw the pent storm on her mother's eyebrows, and, by an unreasoned impulse, jumped from the throne and placed herself before the object of her adoration with an air of protection—of defiance.

Suddenly Her Grace of Bracering stood transfixed, and the art pupil, who had hurriedly risen, blushed and bowed with difference.

Mr. Forrest came to the rescue.

"This gentleman is my pupil. As his time is limited, your daughter was good enough to say he need not discontinue his work on her account."

To Clara's amazement her parent smiled.

"Very considerate my daughter," she said; "her love of art overrides the convenances. Fortunately M. Blakewell and I are acquainted—though I was not aware of his talent," she pointedly added.

Then they shook hands.

"I was scarcely aware of it myself," Blakewell said, awkwardly, "till—till about three weeks ago. My friend Forest advised me to rake up my paints and go on with, some early work and with—with kind encouragement"—he threw a worshipful eye on Lady Clara—"I"——"

"The object of my visit," the dutchess interrupted, "is to say that we are onexedly called to Ringtowers; we leave to-night."

Clara's face, which had partially cleared, became gray with consternation.

"But Mr. Forrest's picture," she cried, tremulously.

"It can be brought down there if he likes."

"Thank you," the artist accepted, uneasily.

"And Mr.—Mr."—Clara began, with big tears magnifying her eyes—"what will he do?"

"Oh, Mr. Forrest is welcome to bring his pupil with him. Mr. Blackwell, will you accept Lady Clara's invitation to Ringtowers?"

The best husband on earth is none too good.

SPORTING.

ON THE GRIDIRON.

Street Commissioner Gavett and H. C. VanEmburgh have kindly surveyed the football for the players tomorrow. Dr. J. T. Fritts will be the attending physician and the ambulance will be within easy call.

The Alis third played an exciting game of football with the Bryant School team Saturday morning and defeated them 16 to 5. Phillips, the young captain of the Alis third, distinguished himself by his brilliant running and tackling.

The eleven of the Norwood Athletic Club went to Westfield Saturday morning and defeated the Westfield Grammar School team there by a score of 6 to 0. Kendall Mason made the touchdown for the victors and Gardner kicked the goal.

The Alis second is now putting up a good game and doing excellent work for a junior team. At first the interference was rather ragged, but under the coaching of Fletcher Hallock, T. U. Smith and several of the big team, it has greatly improved.

Several hundred people gathered at Martine field Friday afternoon to witness a game between the Alis second and the second team from Pingry's School, Elizabeth. It was a return game, the Plainfield boys having defeated their rivals from Elizabeth on the latter's grounds by a score of 6 to 0. The Alis team was there on time, but the Elizabeth boys failed to appear. After waiting most of the afternoon in vain, Captain Harold Phillips, of the Alis second, learned that the Pingry eleven was not coming. The rest of the time was spent in practice.

There is every prospect that Plainfield will see a great football game tomorrow afternoon at Martine Field. It will be the first appearance of the season of the Plainfield team, for which the boys have been practicing for the past three weeks. The San Remo team of the New York Athletic Club, the visitors, are coming with the idea that they will have an easy thing with a team that has not played before this season, but they don't take into consideration the fact that the players have been carefully preparing for the event. The teams will be about evenly matched and an exciting game will be the result. It will begin at 3 o'clock. The admission fee for men will be 25 cents; 15 cents for ladies. Special arrangements have been made to have a grand stand, capable of accommodating several hundred people, erected close to the side lines. A small extra charge will be made for this. The stand will be erected under the supervision of Building Inspector T. O. Doane and will be perfectly substantial. The lineup of the two teams, with the weights of the players, is as follows:

PLAINFIELD.

GOLF.

The formal opening of the Park Golf Club will take place tomorrow, and it will be an auspicious occasion.

There will be playing on the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club links tomorrow for the championship Chapman cup.

At the formal opening of the Park Golf Club tomorrow a silver cup will be offered for the best score. There will also be a ladies' prize. The competition is open to all comers.

The delightful weather of last Saturday afternoon attracted a very large number of players to the links of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club who enjoyed the popular sport exceedingly. The feature of the day was the preliminary play for the Chapman cup for the championship of the club. There were sixteen entries, but only eight of that number qualified as follows: A. R. Fisk, 93; J. H. P. Wharton, 95; W. L. Glenny, 95; C. W. Fisk, 96; W. R. Richards, 96; Reeve Stockton, 98; H. D. West, 98; R. M. Shepard, 100.

The above players will meet on the links tomorrow morning and play the first round for the same cup, and in the afternoon the second round will be played. Next Saturday the finals will come off.

After Saturday's play an informal tea was given in the club house which was largely attended. If the weather is good tomorrow no doubt the course will be crowded all day by members of the club. The grounds are now in fine condition and improving continually under the direction of the greens committee.

EAT BEFORE GOING TO BED.

This Is a Good Rule for Thin People Who Wish to Grow Stout.

Here is good advice to thin people who want to grow fat. It seems contrary to all our early training, but is full of good common sense, and comes from a prominent physician. His suggestions follow:

"If you are thin and want to put flesh upon your bones, eat before going to bed for the night. Physiology teaches us that there is a wasting away of tissue while a person sleeps, as well as when he is awake, and this being so there should be continuous nourishment. Food taken at dinner or in the early evening is always digested at the time of retiring, and the activity of the process of assimilation continues until long after we are asleep.

"If the tissues are not nourished they are pulled down by the wasting process, and as a result sleeplessness ensues. On a full stomach, however, or with some food to sustain the system, there is a building up of the tissue.

"Man's the only creature I know of who does not deem it proper to sleep on a full stomach. The infant, in this respect, instinctively cries to be fed at night, showing that food is necessary during that time as well as through the day, and that, left too long without it, causes a discomfort which it makes known by crying.

"There is no need for rest in the digestive organs, provided the quantity of food eaten is not above normal during the twenty-four hours. Too long intervals between meals are bad for the stomach, from the fact that the cessation and resumption of work by the digestive organs tend to enfeeble them.

"A moderate working of the organs through the twenty-four hours is much more beneficial. I would advise those suffering from insomnia to take something to eat before going to sleep always. A glass of milk and bread, meat, or any digestible food will do."—New York Journal.

Anecdote of "De Brudders."

Every great language has its mock lingoes and clipped dialects. Darky English, like the grotesque blunder words of the supposed Mrs. Partington, nearly always has a phonetic suggestion that makes the speaker's meaning laughably clear. The fat old cook in Lynchburg, Va., who complained that her son "Sam's goin's on is conjurin' his institution and disriptin' us all," had the word "disreputable" echoing round somewhere in her head. She made herself understood and there was piquancy in her new verb. The Rev. Egerton R. Young describes one of his evenings in an African church in Florida, where the minister announced "de fus' chapter of the Epistle o' David,' and proceeded to read the First Psalm. One fiery young exhorter in the meeting, with exemplary good taste, confined his remarks to those of his own age.

"I's nuffin to say to-night," said he, "to disrupt de feelin's o' yous ole daddies an' mammies, but I's jes' goin' ter consummate dem sinners back dar by de do'."

At the close of one service a pastor called attention to the rain soaked and stained plaster in the recess behind the pulpit, which he had long tried in vain to persuade his shiftless parishioners to fresco, and he pronounced his ultimatum in this wise: "Bredren, de suvices in dis church will all be discontinnered ontil yo' fricassee de abscess."

The Mothers of Great Men.

It is an interesting historical fact that nearly every man of great deeds who also possessed a great character, had a mother of a strong, fine nature, with whom in boyhood and early manhood he dwelt in close sympathy even when at a distance from her. Probably the most disagreeable man socially of all celebrated men was poor Thomas Carlyle, whose disposition was nervous, melancholy and grumpy, but in the midst of his laborious life and severe mental industry he could always find time to write affectionate letters to his mother, full of respect, tenderness and consideration he never seemed to feel for much greater personages. If a mother's hand holds the leading strings of a man's life he will hold himself as securely as did Anthony Hope's "Prisoner of Zenda," with his motto, "The king can do no wrong."—Frances B. Evans in Ladies' Home Journal.

Aluminum Horseshoes.

Aluminum—according to United States Consul Atwell, at Boubaix, France—is now being used not only in the manufacture of bicycles, but the military authorities have for some time past made an effort to employ this metal, in place of iron, copper and steel, for all articles of equipment carried by infantry, in order to reduce the weight as much as possible. It seems, too, that, with the same object, the Russian minister of war has ordered aluminum horseshoes for the cavalry. In tests for this purpose a shoe of the new aluminum model is placed on one foot, the three remaining shoes being of the usual sort. It is found that the aluminum wears out less rapidly and is less affected by mud and moisture than the ordinary shoe and weighs about two and one-half ounces less.—Philadelphia Record.

"Did you accuse us of being lazy?" asked the Spanish soldier.

"I believe I said something of the kind," answered the war correspondent.

"Well, you formed your opinion too early in the fight. You didn't wait to see us run"—Washington Star.

IS POLYGAMY REVIVING?

The Presbyterians Allege That It Is, and the Press Sustains Them.

The revival of polygamy in Utah is a live question. Religious politicians are stirred as never since her admission to Statehood. Suppressed mutterings are heard all over the State.

The Salt Lake Bee says "As to the existence of polygamy in Utah, no one doubts it, and that it has increased since Statehood is known to all who have opportunities of observation. Not only have old family relations been resumed, but new marriages have been contracted and are being contracted almost daily. Those who protest that there is no polygamy in Utah assume that the people of Utah are a class of chumps. The Church apologists claim there have been no plural marriages since the manifesto. Maybe not; but men in the Church who have had one or more wives have taken other women to their homes and supported them as wives. No matter what it is called, the polygamy question is going to get a good stirring up. The Church leaders, of course, in the face of the manifesto, would not admit that polygamy is now being practised, and in order to keep out of trouble from man made laws they solemnly deny it. But they justify this deception on the ground that polygamy is commanded by God."

And the Springville Independent has this to say: "The arraignment cannot be safely ignored. It does not charge, as some of the press seem to infer, that polygamous marriages are not being solemnized. It does charge that authoriative persons are teaching that celestial marriages are an essential part of Mormon faith, that God is a polygamist and that Jesus Christ was the husband of three wives. Nothing of recent years in religous matters has succeeded in stirring up such a tremendous excitement, and it must be met an answered.

"You may hear a priest comfort the mourners at the funeral of a young man who has died without having entered wedlock, with the promise to seal a wife to him in heaven. And women go to the temples and are married to dead men."

BALKY HORSE CONQUERED.

With No More Formidable Weapon Than a Paddle.

"I have owned and used many horses," said a resident of Lewiston, "among which were several balky ones. I once owned a team, the best one I ever had, that at times were stubborn and ugly and would not work. One morning when we were going out in the field with a heavy load we came to a steep pitch in the road, the nigh horse, as usual, flared up and then the other. We tried to start them by coaxing and by using the lash, but it was no use; they refused to move. At last I became infuriated and would have killed the horses with a good will, but it was of no avail. I left the team standing there that morning, went back to the house and decided to leave them there, when a thought struck me that proved successful.

"I took a wide board and, making it into the shape of a paddle, proceeded to the field. Once more we tried the horses, but it was no use; they were determined not to move. Taking the weapon which I had made, I struck first one horse, then the other a few blows, and to my great surprise they started at a rapid rate. After that I always kept the paddle-shaped weapon in my wagon and when they refused duty I merely had to show it to them. I have tried this same rule on many other horses and I never knew it to fail."

"What is your theory? It certainly cannot be the hardness of the blow?"

"My theory is that the animals are started from fright, caused by the jar of the board."—Lewiston, Me., Journal.

After the First Quarrel.

"Go!" she exclaimed, "and never speak to me again!"

He passed out into the unsympathetic night, but paused when he reached the sidewalk and drew something from one of his inside pockets. As he did so the beautiful girl, who was watching him from the vestibule, uttered a shrill scream and ran toward him.

"Albert!" she cried, "what would you do? Pray do not kill yourself! Throw your revolver away and let us forget our quarrel!"

"It isn't a revolver," he replied, as he caught her in his arms. "It is a monkey wrench I borrowed from you that day my wheel broke down. I have been wearing it next to my heart ever since."

Then they returned to the parlor and took up the thread of love's young dream where it had been broken.—Chicago Daily News.

Cholly's Predicament.

Farmer—Hey thar! Git a move on! Ther bull will ketch you sure!

Cholly—Aw, but I cawn't! I've spwained me ankle!

Farmer—Well, use yer cane, an' ye kin git ter ther wall!

Cholly—Weally, I couldn't, don't yer know! It's such beastly bad form to walk with your stick, don't yer know!—New York Ledger.

Why Willie Stopped Smiling.

The salesman was showing Willie the new styles of golf stockings, and said: "You have just the legs to display this pattern."

"Yes?" murmured Willie, with a complacent smile.

"They are long and the same size all the way up," continued the clerk and the smile faded away—Spokesman Review.

OPENED WITH A DEFEAT

BASKETBALL GAME WON BY THE BOWERY TEAM.

Game Witnessed by Large Audience—Visitors Quicker Than Home Team—In Second Half Home Team Went to Pieces.

The basket ball season in Plainfield opened last evening with a defeat for the team of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. The visitors were from the Young Men's Institute of the Bowery, New York. They played a fine game and defeated the Plainfield boys by a score of 24 to 14. The game was witnessed by several hundred people.

The first half was decidedly interesting. Both teams played well and although the visitors were a trifle quicker than the home team, the latter put up a strong defense. The score stood 6 to 6 at the end of the first half. In the second half, the Plainfield boys went to pieces and the visitors scored rapidly. The local players failed to cover their opponents and seemed to lose heart. Their team play disappeared and the visitors had things pretty much their own way. The final score stood 24 to 14.

The teams were as follows:

PLAINFIELD Y.M.C.A.		YOUNG MEN'S INSTITUTE.
E. Moraller	right forward	Schwartz
Bonny	left forward	Mamneman
Egan	centre	Grimm
M. Moraller	right guard	Whitnebel
Smith	left guard	Dubner

Score—Plainfield, 14; Young Men's Institute, 24. Goals from the field—E. Moraller, Egan, Smith (3), Schwartz (3), Hamneman, Grimm (6), Whitnebel. Goals on fouls—E. Moraller (3), Smith, Hamneman (2), Dubner (2). Fouls—Plainfield, 6; Y. M. I., 8.

Run Down by a Wheelman.

Miss Alys Marie Chandor, of East Fifth street, was run down by another wheelwoman at the corner of Watchung avenune and East Fifth street, yesterday afternoon. Miss Chandor was knocked from her wheel and badly bruised by the collision while the front wheel to her bicycle was wrecked.

HURT IN A RUNAWAY.

Charles Mundy Thrown From a Wagon and Struck a Post.

Charles Mundy was thrown out of his wagon last evening and seriously injured in a runaway. Mr. Mundy lives at Springdale and came to Plainfield yesterday on business. It was about 9 o'clock in the evening when he star ed out Somerset street bound for home At Lincoln place he met a trolley car and his horse became unmanageable. The frightened animal reared and then started off on a gallop.

The wagon struck the curb and Mundy was thrown from the front seat. He struck his head against a hitching-post and was knocked insensible by the blow. He was carried to his own residence, where he is now. He was badly bruised and cut by the fall. The horse was afterwards caught and brought back to a neighboring stable.

His face was badly cut and scratched and his shoulder blade was broken. He says, this morning, that he is going out to vote anyhow.

Scholars Go Home Earlier.

With the introduction of the roll of honor into the Plainfield High School, Principal Ira W. Travell has inaugurated several other plans that will work for the advancement of the standing of all the pupils. Such of the pupils as are on both rolls of honor for standing and attendance will hereafter be allowed to return to their homes as soon as they have completed their recitations without waiting for the regular hour for dismissal. The arrangements of studies is such that a number of pupils will thus be allowed to go at 12:10 o'clock instead of 1 o'clock.

—A meeting of the Browning Circle of the Congregational church will be omitted this week on account of the sociable of the Ladies' Aid Society Friday evening.

LOVE SICK YOUTHS FOUGHT LIKE TIGERS.

Pugilistic Blows to Settle Which Was to Have the Girl.

BRUTAL DEVOTION TO HER.

BOTH OF THE SWAINS WERE STURDY FARM HANDS.

The Scene of the Battle Was in a Meadow and the Disputants Were Stripped to the Waist—George Young and Robert Howell Were the Jealous Admirers and Matilda Martin Was the Fair One Admired.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Bound Brook, Nov. 8—While the eleven young men that compose the Rutgers College football squad were dreaming of the encounter of the next day, Friday evening two powerful farm hands were struggling for mastery on the banks of the Raritan only a few miles away. It was a struggle far more sanguinary than the wearers of the canvass jacket ever dreamed of and ended with the defeated contestant in a pitiable state, so cut and bruised that he was hardly recognizable. Of course there was a woman in the case.

In the village of Middlebush, seven miles from here, there lives Miss Matilda Martin. Fair is she of face and form and her bewitching smiles have wrought sad havoc among the rustic swains for miles around. Among all her suitors, however, it was evident that George Young and Robert Howell were the favorites. Between the two the greatest rivalry existed.

George Young is employed on the farm of Peter Randolph which lies midway between this place and Middlebush. George is in the prime of life, a tall and angular man of powerful build. Howell is one of the trusted employes of John Baldwin, whose farm is in that neighborhood. Howell is short, but stout, and has long had the reputation of being handy with his fists.

In the schoolhouse at Weston, a local evangelist has been holding meetings Sunday and Wednesday nights. There the evening of Sunday, October 30th, Miss Matilda Martin went under the escort of her uncle. Thither also went Young, likewise Howell. The fair Matilda smiled on the brawny Young, but she showed the same favor to his rival. Both of the suitors laid in wait to accompany her home and thus came together. It was only by dint of great exertions that the Westonites prevented an open rupture, while the cause of all the trouble disappeared down the road with her uncle.

Since then, there has been open war declared between the rivals. Each had his friends through whom negotiations were started and as a result, it was decided that the men should meet some evening and settle by force of arms the question that had troubled them for so long.

Friday night was the time set for the meeting and the meadow by the Raritan river in the farm of Peter Randolph was the place selected. There they went together with some fifteen friends to settle the differences.

The question of weapons was raised. Young has long been famous for his handling of the flail and he wanted the battle fought with flails. Pitchforks were suggested but voted down. At last, Howell's proposition that it be a pugilistic encounter was favored and the confestant stripped to the waist.

A ring was made in the soft turf and lanterns placed about it to illuminate the scene. The seconds prepared themselves with the necessary paraphernalia and the battle opened.

For half an hour they fought with short breathing spaces between the rounds. The blood flowed and soon participants and ground were covered with gore. Blows were exchanged with vigor and made up in strength

BURGLAR GRASPED WOMAN BY THROAT.

A Borough House Entered in a Bold Manner.

PEARL ROGERS IS ACCUSED.

After Being Chased From Jeter's House He Waded Through the Brook and was Afterwards Found in His Home Feigning Sleep—Accused of Another Burglarious Attempt—Held for Trial.

The new home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jeter, on Belmont avenue, was entered this morning at 3 o'clock by Pearl Rogers, colored, whose home is at 426 East Third street, and it is evident that Rogers intended to make a haul. In default of this he committed assault, and got away only to be caught at his home where he was in bed.

Rogers has worked for Milkman Jeter, and is thoroughly acquainted about the premises. There is every indication that he entered the house through the kitchen door, for it was found open after his departure. He went upstairs, where Mr. and Mrs. Jeter and Misses Sally and Ida Jeter were asleep. He removed his coat, hat and shoes.

While in the room occupied by Miss Sally Jeter, he was detected. The latter is a sister-in law of Mrs. Jeter, and she sleeps with Miss Ida. They were awakened and saw a man standing at the foot of their bed. They asked what he wanted and the there was no response. Again he was asked what he wanted, but still there was no reply. Finally, the intruder rushed to the side of the bed and grappled Miss Sally Jeter. She had the bed clothes wrapped about her throat. This probably saved her from strangulation. She screamed and this awakened Mrs. Jeter, who got up and started for the other room. The man then ran into the hall where he met Mrs. Jeter and knocked her down with his fist. Her screams awakened Mr. Jeter, who sprang from the bed.

The desperado rushed downstairs with Mr. Jeter after him. He passed out of the back door and ran like a deer across lots In the meantime Mrs. Jeter screamed at the top of her voice. This attracted the attention of Roundsman Frederickson and Patrolman Saffron, and they followed in the direction from whence the sound came. They saw the man running and saw him wade the brook in reaching this city, but the officers lost him for the time being.

A little while later Sergeant Kiely and Roundsman Frederickson, in company with Mr. Jeter, went to Rogers' home on East Third street. They had his hat, coat and shoes. They found Rogers in bed. He pretended to be asleep when the officers entered the house, but he was aroused and made to dress. His clothes were thoroughly soaked, showing that he had been in the brook. He claimed he had no shoes to put on, but when the officers produced his shoes he was dumbfounded. Rogers was then taken to the city jail, where he was held until this forenoon. He was then taken to the borough for trial.

Miss Sally Jeter, whom Rogers attempted to choke, suffered greatly from shock. She fought Rogers as best she could. Rogers did not succeed in getting anything. This is not Rogers' first offense. He has served a time in State's Prison and is likely to do so again.

He was accompanied this morning by another negro, but he got away. His companion did not enter the house, but remained outside. He escaped before Rogers came out of the house.

An attempt was made to enter the home of Alexander Mair, who lives next door to Jeter, at 3 o'clock this morning. Mr. Mair was awakened by

THE COUNCIL HEARS OF COUNTY TROLLEY.

Receives a Communication From John Kean's Road.

POSITION OF THE CITY

IT AWAITS DEVELOPMENTS FROM BOARD OF FREEHOLDERS.

Councilman Barrows Resents the Action of the County Authorities and Says the City Should Fight Them at the Proper Time—Cases in Court That the City is Interested In—Other Matters.

The regular City Council meeting held last evening was void of any business of special significance, and it did not take the members a great while to transact that which came before them. Mr. Hetfield was the only member absent.

D. A. Moran & Co., of New York, asked the Council for particulars concerning the proposed issuance of the $2,500 bonds for storm sewer work. The Elizabeth City Horse Railway Company submitted several propositions to the Council regarding the proposed intention of that company to locate and operate an electric street railway between Elizabeth and Plainfield, in which they stated what they proposed to give for the franchise. Accompanying the propositions was a note testifying to the fact that the Board of Freeholders had granted certain priviledges and rights to the trolley company, and that the matter had been approved of by the Court. The propositions include the rate of fare to be charged, which is 25 cents a round trip between Elizabeth and this city. The franchise is for seventy-five years, and $100 a year is to be paid after the sum of $250,000 is given for the franchise. The cars are to run under fifteen-minute headway, and the road is to be sprinkled. School tickets are to be issued thirty-three for $1.

In connection with the above Mr. Barrows stated that all were cognizant of the fact that the Board of Freeholders were trying to give away Plainfield streets He had been in close touch with the Corporation Counsel and had been informed by him that the city could do nothing until a move was made by the Board of Freeholders. Mr. Barrows stated that he hoped the people of this city would be alive and interested in this matter. He thought that the people would live to see all of the streets taken away in a similar manner. He cited the small compensation to be received by the city from the county trolley people for what is given.

Following the reading of the above remarks, the Plainfield Street Railway Company withdrew their application for a franchise and on Mr. Barrows' motion the same was granted.

Corporation Counsel Marsh presented to the Council the report of the Court regarding the Martin Act Commissions' work, as published in The Daily Press in full. The report was filed. Mr. Marsh also reported on the cases now in the courts in which the city is interested. Regarding the case of Mrs. Milliken against the city, he said that it had been postponed on account of the illness of the plaintiff, and would come up at the January term of court. In the case of the city against Rev. P. S Gibson and Spencer Conway, regarding a bond given by the latter for the former, judgment had been given to the plaintiff. He reported on the case of the city against Champion, now in the court, and asked for the privilege of carrying the case to the Supreme Court if the city should be beaten in the court in which the case is now pending. This privilege was given. Mr. Marsh stated that the case of Joseph Carbone against the city is still pending. This case wase on a charge of Sunday selling, which was appealed.

On a motion offered by Mr. Barrows Monday evening, November 21st was

SCHOOL PROBLEMS.

Board of Education Asked to Submit Those in Plainfield.

The monthly meeting of the Board of Education was held last night but very little business was transacted. Messrs. Probasco, Jenkins, Abbott and Lounsbury were present, and so was Superintendent Maxson.

A communication from the International Board of Education with headquarters at Chicago was read asking the Plainfield board to appoint a committee of three to submit to the International Board three problems which are met with in their work. The communication was received and placed on file, but no committee appointed.

Mr. Lounsbury reported that the new flag pole had been erected in the Irving school yard, and Superintendent Maxson reported that the school children had contributed $47.30 towards the Lafayette fund which he had forwarded to the committee in Chicago. It was decided that the usual number of financial statements and reports be printed and distributed and that the same be published in the daily papers, then the board went into executive session.

County Work Not Satisfactory.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Rahway, November 8.—Captain Hubbard, Director of the Union County Board of Freeholders, hurriedly visited Rahway yesterday in response to a call by Freeholder Ehrlich, of Rahway, who does not at all like the way the work is progressing on the new Bridge street bridge, and wants some energetic steps taken to hurry up the contractor. Director Hubbard, with Freeholders Farrell and Ehrlich, started at once for the site of the bridge, the foundation for the main pier of which has not even been fairly commenced, although the cofferdam has been in position for some weeks, and all the materiel is on the ground.

Pastor's Reception Postponed.

Owing to the death of Deacon C. F. Haynes, the reception that Rev. J. W. Richardson was to tender to the Park Avenue Baptist church and congregation Thursday evening has been indefinitely postponed.

ELECTION DAY IS HERE.

REPUBLICANS AND DEMOCRANS ARE ACTIVE AT THE POLLS.

Both Parties Have Carriages and Workers Out—The City is Quiet—Many Are Taking a Holiday—Early Morning Vote Brisk.

Election day morning dawned bright and clear. The workers of both Republican and Democratic parties were out early with the opening of the polls ready to look after their interests. The city itself is quiet aside from the activity around the polling places.

The regular force of the Republican party was on hand with carriages at each polling place. Later in the day there will be a scurrying around to get out the voters who failed to put in an appearance during the morning. The Democratic party showed greater signs of activity than in several years. They too had carriages and workers at each ward.

The voting was fairly brisk during the first part of the morning and the election officers were kept busy. Many of the voters are home for the day, however, and the usual early commuter vote was small. Instead the commuters will vote at all hours.

The Republican headquarters was fairly active. It was located on East Front street, near Park avenue. The Democrats had their headquarters at the offices of Justice Moffett on North avenue. There was quite a gathering of politicians there during the morning.

Will Resume Sunday Evening Meetings.

The Sunday evening meetings for men that proved so successful in the Seventh-Day Baptist church last winter will be resumed once more. Sunday evening the men of the congregation held a business meeting in the chapel to talk over the arrangements for the meetings. Henry M. Maxson was chairman of the meeting and Frank Maxson was chosen secretary for the year. It was decided to hold a meeting every Sunday evening as last year and plans for the control of them were inaugurated and will be completed at another meeting.

CONDUCT OF THE WAR.

The Hearing at Chicago Begun. Camp Thomas Condition.

Chicago, Nov. 8.—General Dodge, Col. Sexton and Dr. Conner of the war inquiry commission, arrived in Chicago yesterday, and immediately began the examination of witnesses at the Auditorium Hotel.

A large number of witnesses are on the list, and it is not likely that the three members of the commission will be able to leave Chicago before Wednesday.

They will then leave for Detroit, at which place the investigation will be continued. From Detroit the commossioners will go direct to Washington.

Dr. Lewis Schooler of Des Moines, Ia., was the first witness to testify. From June 7 to July 17, Dr. Schooler was stationed at Camp Thomas as chief surgeon of the Second division, of the Third Corps.

Questioned by Dr. Conner, he said that during the time he was there the sanitary conditions in the hospitals were not very good; the sinks in the whole division were bad; owing principally to the character of the ground, and the discipline was rather lax. "At the opening," said Dr. Schooler, "there were practically no facilities for the care of the sick; we were short of medicines and had no apparatus by which the stewards could prepare the medicines that we had."

Terrorized by Negroes.

Wilmington, N. C., Nov. 8.—While no clash has occurred, rowdyism prevailed which came near precipitating a conflict Saturday night.

Three hundred negroes paraded the streets at midnight with rifles and other arms. They announced that their various orders had sworn death to the red shirts.

Lawless bands of armed negroes gathered in the northern portions of the city and an outbreak was momentarily expected.

A number of white women in that section were nearly prostrated with fear.

White men guarded the houses and the Wilmington light infantry and Naval Reserves rendezvoused at night at their armories.

Street cars were stoned by the negroes and white people were compelled to desert them and walk. The police were unable to preserve order.

The League Island Navy-Yard.

Washington, Nov. 8.—Lieut. Knapp of the navy has returned to Washington from League island, where he has been engaged collecting testimony to be used in the presecution of the government employes charged with complicity in the overpayment of workmen in the navy yard.

He is now preparing this testimony for the use of the department of justice, and it is probable that he will be retained to assist in the prosecution in court.

Lieutenant Knapp has also collected such part of the evidence as seemed to bear upon the connection of the naval officers in the League island yard with the illegal practices complained of, and this will be placed in the hands of Judge Advocate General Lemly, to enable him to pass upon the question as to whether or not a court martial shall be held, and, if so, who among the officers shall be charged.

The War-bond Awards.

Washington, Nov. 8.—Nothing further has been heard from Secretary Carlisle as to his proposed appeal from Judge Coxe's decision in the case of the subscribers for war bonds whose subscriptions were throyn out for noncompliance with the treasury regulations.

Secretary Gage, as a courtesy, held the matter open till the end of last week so that Mr. Carlisle could take an appeal on equitable grounds.

This resort will now be closed against him, though his right to take an appeal in law will still survive for a time.

The Peace Negotiations.

Paris, Nov. 8.—The Eclair, after reproducing all the six articles of the peace protocol, says:

"It is to be hoped that the United States will not maintain their first pretensions in regard to the Philippine islands. The question of the sovereignty over the Philippine islands is one, however, which interests Spain only; but Germany, from time to time, allows it to be thought that she is not indifferent to the fate of the islands, and the possibility of interference from this power will perhaps cause America to be less exacting."

Cotton Mills Started Up.

Fall River, Mass., Nov. 8.—The Borden City cotton mills Nos. 1 and 2, which had been closed for nine weeks on account of a sympathetic strike to help the weavers in No. 2 mill of the same corporation, opened their gates yesterday and are running with practically a full complement of employes. No union weavers went in, but nonunionists, old Border City employes, and those from other concerns which are curtailing this week, did.

It is expected that No. 2 mill will be started before the end of the week.

GEN. CHAFFEE TESTIFIES

Tells War Commission About the Cuban Campaign.

MEDICAL SUPPLIES SHORT

He Says Proper Food for Fever Patients Was Scarce. Medical Department Underestimated Probable Casualties at Santiago. Ambulances Unavailable.

Washington, Nov. 8.—Vice Chairman Denby of the war investigating commission, on returning to Washington in advance of the commission, took the testimony of Major Generals Lawton and Abner R. Chaffee.

General Chaffee's testimony was typewritten, and is now given out for publication.

General Chaffee was a lieutenant colonel in the Third cavalry, but in May last he was made a brigadier general, and at Tampa was placed in command of the Seventh, Twelfth and Seventeenth regiments of infantry.

When he arrived at Port Tampa he was ordered to embark his men on the Cherokee and Iroquois. He discovered that the capacity of the boats had been overestimated and it was found necessary to load three companies on the D. H. Miller.

There was a little delay at Port Tampa, caused by a report that Spanish ships had been seen in the channel north of Cuba.

General Chaffee remarked that he was ignorant of his destination when he left Tampa. The order of the commanding general of the Fifth corps directed him to take ten days' travel rations, sufficient to last until June 8. The delay in Tampa bay had not been accounted for, and when the transports arrived off Santiago on June 20, the supply of food was short in some instances, though the rations had not been entirely consumed.

General Chaffee said that he thought that all the transports going to Cuba were overloaded, but not harmfully so.

"Did the men actually suffer for rations?" asked Colonel Denby.

"No, sir," Gen. Chaffee replied.

"As to the medical attendance on the transports, how was that?"

"The regimental surgeons were there with their panniers. The men were well attended."

General Chaffee described the landing of the troops. The boats from the navy were to assist, but the only boats he saw were the steam launches and ordinary open boats. He thought the navy should have handled the boats. The surf was very high and beat the boats considerably. After a landing was made the troops went into camp. They had shelter tents.

"I also cleared a position for the artillery. On the 30th General Lawton, General Ludlow, Colonel Miles and myself went out over the roads, and on this occasion General Lawton assigned to each brigade commander the place at which he was to arrive that night. We all moved out and bivouacked for the night.

Early on June 24 he marched his command to the vicinity of General Lawton's camp and was ordered to go to the assistance of General Wheeler. He saw a dispatch from General Wheeler saying that he had met with a larger force than he expected and asked for aid. He pushed forward, but on arriving found the engagement over and the Spaniards in retreat. This was the battle of Las Guisamas.

"On June 28, 29 and 30," said General Chaffee, "I did considerable reconnoitering. Twelve hundred Cubans had reported for that service and outpost duty. There were men there who knew every trail in the country, and they were of great service to me. I opened the road toward Caney so that the artillery could pass. The road was simply a mule track at first.

"General Lawton gave instructions that my brigade should attack Caney from the eastward. On July 1 I sent the Twelfth infantry to my left and I conducted the Seventh and Seventeenth by a roundabout road, joining the Twelfth infantry about 7 o'clock. There were six block houses around Caney."

General Chaffee said that he had only one battery of artillery. That knocked a stone fort to pieces, but there was not sufficient artillery to demoralize the garrison.

"Why did you not have more artillery?" asked Colonel Denby.

"Well, it had not been landed," General Chaffee replied. "I suppose, perhaps it was my own fault. The place turned out much stronger than I had any idea of. I lost fifty officers and men killed and 146 wounded.

"When you took Caney, General, what did you find?"

"I found them dead and wounded. The Spaniards lost very heavily. What were not killed, wounded or captured seemed to have retreated to the ravines. We got 83 prisoners."

Referring to the American wounded he said they lay directly in front of the town. "A man could not raise his hand without it being shot," he continued. "The fire of the Spaniards was very accurate. The American wounded were taken just below the slope of the hill and attended by the surgeons. There was one regimental surgeon to a regiment and no ambulancees, but there were hospital corps men there with each surgeon. One surgeon to a regiment is not enough for a battle. In my opinion there should never be less than one surgeon to 400 men, which would be one surgeon to a battalion.

Colonel Denby inquired whose business it was to see that enough surgeons were provided, and General Chaffee said he did not know whether the medical director of the Fifth corps had been told that there was going to be a battle, or whether General Shafter had instructed the medical department to make provision.

Speaking of commissary supplies, the general testified that at no time was his brigade without food. Rice would make an excellent food for men in Cuba, he said, but it could not be taken into battle. His men had the field ration, which was supplied from day to day by the use of pack mules.

Referring again to the wounded the general said that he believed that every soldier of his brigade was properly attended to before nightfall. There was no hospital tent and the only shelter for the wounded was when the shelter tents were put up, two pieces pinned together making a tent.

Colonel Denby again remarked upon the absence of ambulances, and General Chaffee responded:

"It was not in the possibility of man to put an ambulance on the field that day. The condition of the roads was such that they could not be got there, and it was impossible to put wagon transportation on that field where I was. The roads had to be cut for three miles before wagons could have approached that place."

Speaking of the health of the army after the fall of Santiago, General Chaffee said:

"It is important to understand that the army was forced to operate in a sea of brush so high and so thick as to exclude the circulation of air. The men had to sleep in this brush and this was continually poisoning the men with miasma. After the surrender the soldiers fell sick very rapidly with malarial fever. There were over two hundred sick in the Seventh infantry, in which it was alleged that yellow fever existed, but this I do not credit. I believe that the anticipated sickness was much less than what actually resulted. Provision was made for about ten to fifteen per cent., when there was about forty or fifty per cent. ill."

At Montauk everything was being done for the sick. There were a number of men in all the regiments that were ill. These men were held in the camps of the regiments. Many grew worse in camp and as fast as provision could be made they were transferred to the general hospital. The hospitals were excellent, and every provision and care that was necessary for these men, I believe was given them."

In concluding, General Chaffee said he thought that the supply of medicines for the army in Cuba was inadequate. There was also a scarcity of the light food necessary for fever patients and convalescents.

"If I were to express my opinion in a nutshell on the whole situation," he declared, "I would say that the lack of medical supplies and of the necessary light food for fever patients was the only thing regrettable."

THE WRECKED WARSHIPS.

No More Government Efforts to Raise Them.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 8.—Captain Chester's decision to abandon the work of wrecking the Cristobal Colon marks the end of that undertaking on the part of the government. It is said at the navy department that the captain was directed to stop the work when in his discretion it was no longer profitable.

Because the contract with the wrecking company has been terminated it does not follow that all idea has been abandoned of saving some of the sunken Spanish warships.

The navy department is ready to engage with thoroughly responsible wrecking concerns, providing the latter absolve the government from payment unless the ships are delivered in a United States navy yard.

Already one of the largest wrecking concerns in the world, a Swedish organization, has opened negotiations on the subject. It is willing to undertake at once the raising of the Reina Mercedes, which lies in the channel in Santiago harbor, and it has indicated a disposition to undertake the raising of the Colon. This concern has large experience in this class of work and if no American concern able to do the work offers better terms, arrangements probably will be made with it on the basis of a cash payment for the ship delivered in the United States.

NEWS FROM HAVANA.

Damage by Floods in the Province of Mantanzas.

Havana, Nov. 8.—Owing to the constant rains which have fallen recently the streams in the province of Matanzas have overflowed, flooding more than one thousand acres in the Roque district of that province.

The land had just been newly planted with sugar cane and fruit trees, after three years of neglect, and the disaster has again plunged the inhabitants of that district into the deepest mistry.

The Yumuri valley has also been flooded.

Fine weather prevailed here Sunday but yesterday there were heavy showers.

The evacuation of the cities of Sancti Spiritus and Trinidad, in the province of Santa Clara, is expected to be completed on November 15.

Dispatches received from the Lucha's correspondent at Santa Cruz says that more than two-thirds of the Cuban delegates are expected to take part in the meeting of the assembly there today.

The arrivals here yesterday included the Yucatan, from New York; the Laughton, from Philadelphia; the Fanita, from Key West; the schooner Charles Schull, from Norfolk, Va., and the schooner Mary G. Crosby, from New York.

Bribery Charges Not Sustained.

Philadelphia, Nov. 8.—Walter N. Stevenson, a member of the common council from the 32d ward, whose accusation of attempted bribery in connection with the Schuylkill valley water scheme, made on the floor of the council in the early part of March last, resulted in the arrest of Peter E. Smith, whose trial and acquittal took place last week, has resigned his seat. In his letter he deplores the fact that he was "left to fight single handed the great force of evil;" says that he and his family have been persecuted and made to suffer instead of the guilty parties, and that his efforts to save the city from being dishonored and disgraced have convinced him that is "not in the house of his friends.'

TO-DAY'S ELECTIONS

Twenty-one States Elect Governors, Thirty-one Legislatures.

MANY SHARP CONTESTS ON

California Has an Interesting Fight on Hand for the Governorship as Has Colorado, Nebraska, Texas, Wisconsin, Michigan, Nevada, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Other States.

New York, Nov. 8.--To-day's election ranks next in importance to that at which a president is chosen. It not only determines the political complexion of the next Congress, now a matter of extremest doubt, but settles important contests in a number of states.

Twenty-one states elect governors, thirty-one select legislatures, and twenty-three of the legislatures to be named then will elect United States senators. The terms of thirty senators expire next March, but seven of these have already been elected and in the case of the remaining senator a legislature has already been chosen to name his successor.

Besides these elections, a number of minor officials are to be voted for and a number of issues are to be voted on.

Not a few of the states have governorship contests on which are quite as absorbing to the voters directly interested as is the Roosevelt-Van Wyck contest in this state. In far off California, for instance, a race of exceptional interest is in progress.

The battle is a hard one and there is no telling now what the result will be. The Democratic candidate is a brilliant and popular young man, Jas. G. Maguire, who has made a record in Congress. He is making a powerful fight.

He is opposed by H. T. Gage, the Republican candidate.

There is a considerable element of Populist voters in the state and these will vote for Maguire, the Democrats having fused with the Populists.

On the other hand the Silver Republicans have a state ticket in the field which will draw from the strength of the Gage ticket.

In the state election the issue of single tax, represented by Mr. Maguire, is one of the leading features of the contest. A full state ticket and a legislature is to be named.

In Colorado a very exciting race is on. Charles S. Thomas, who was one of the conspicuous leaders of the Bryan convention at Chicago in 896, is the Democratic candidate. He is opposed by H. H. Walcott, Republican.

Thomas seems to be leading, although the fight is close.

There are, however, eleven state tickets in the field, other prominent ones being the Teller silver ticket and the Populist ticket. A full state ticket is to be voted for.

In Connecticut George C. Lounsbury will be re-elected. Daniel N. Morgan is the Democratic candidate. A legislature to select a successor to General Joseph R. Hawley is to be chosen. There is little doubt of General Hawley's re-election

In Idaho the silver Republicans and the Democrats, who have a fusion ticket in the field, will probably elect the governor. The Republican candidate for governor is A. B. Moss, the fusion candidate Frank Stennenberg. The latter is a Democrat. The state ticket is divided between silver Republicans and Democrats. The Populist candidate is J. H. Anderson.

In Illinois a state treasurer, a superintendent of public instruction and trustees of the State University are to be voted for. There are six tickets in the field.

In Indiana a state ticket with the exception of governor is to be voted for. A state legislature is to be named to elect a successor to Senator David Turpie, Democrat. In Iowa a full state ticket, excepting governor, is to be voted for.

overnor James W. Leedy, who during his administration has been the means of giving his state a great deal of free advertising, is up again for re-election. He is a Populist of the most uncompromising variety, and heads a full ticket of Populists which has been indorsed by the Democrats.

M. E. Stanley is the Republican candidate for governor, and H. E. Richter the candidate for lieutenant governor. The Prohibitionists have a ticket in the field which is cutting considerable of a figure, and it is headed by former United States Senator W. A. Peffer, famed in Washington for his mighty beard. The Socialists have a ticket in the field headed by Caleb Lipscaub.

In Massachusetts Roger Wolcott will be re-elected governor. He is the Republican candidate, and Alexander B. Bruce heads the Democratic ticket. A state ticket is to be elected.

Governor Hazen S. Pingree is making the fight in Michigan as interesting as it always is when his unique personality is involved. He heads the Republican ticket and stands for re-election, which he will no doubt receive.

Justin R. Whiting, a Democrat, heads the fusion ticket, which is made up of Democrats, Populists and Silver Republicans. The "Middle of the Road" Populists have a ticket headed by Sullivan Cook.

An added feature of interest is furnished by the fight for the control of the legislature, which is going on between Senator Julius C. Burrows and A. B. Packer. Governor Pingree, who, despite ridicule and opposition, has gained a wonderfully strong hold on the voters of Michigan, is opposing Senator Burrows.

In Minnesota there are five state tickets, the Republican candidate for governor being Henry A. Eustis and the fusion candidate John Lind, a silver Republican. Fusion is between silver Republicans, Populists and Democrats. A legislature to select a successor to Senator Cushman K. Davis a member of the American peace commission, is to be chosen. The outlook is favorable to Republican success.

Int Missouri a legislature to select Senator Francis M. Cockrell's successor is to be elected. It will, no doubt, be Democratic. Supreme court justice, railroad and warehouse commissioner, and a superintendent of public instruction are to be elected.

William Jennings Bryan's state will elect a full state ticket, including governor. Indications point to the success of the fusion candidate, William A. Poynter, a Populist. The Poynter fusion ticket is made up of Populists, Silver Republicans and Democrats. The Republican candidate for governor is Manae L. Hayward, and the candidate for lieutenant governor is George A. Murphy. A full state ticket and a legislature is to be elected.

Nevada also elects a governor and a full state ticket. George Russell is the Democratic candidate for governor and W. C. Grimes for lieutenant governor.

New Hampshire also elects a governor and the fortunate man will be Frank W. Rollins, the Republican candidate. Charles H. Stone is the Democratic candidate. The Prohibition and People's candidates are Augustus G. Stevens and Gardiner J. Greenleaf respectively.

New Jersey has a close race in Progress. Foster M. Voorhees, who only lately resigned the governorship after having just been elevated to it from the lieutenant governorship, is the Republican candidate. Elvin W. Crane is the Democratic candidate.

Both sides claim that they will win out.

Interest is intensified on account of the fight being made for the control of the legislature, which is to elect a senator to succeed Senator James Smith, Jr.

John Kean is the only Republican canddate for the Senate so far.

Ohio does not elect a governor, but votes for a state ticket from the secretary of state down.

The fight in Pennsylvania is known to all. The return of Senator Quay to the senate and the governorship are involved. The race for governor is three-cornered. William A. Stone is the Republican or Quay candidate, and George A. Jenks is the Democratic candidate. Dr. S. C. Swallow, Prohibitionist and reformer, is the candidate of three parties on the platform "Thou shalt not steal."

The tremendous enthusiasm at first caused by his candidacy is said to have to some extent died away, but that it will poll a large vote on election day no one doubts. That the vigorous campaign that John Wanamaker is making against Quay will make votes for Dr. Swallow is certain.

In South Carolina William M. Ellerbe will be re-elected governor. He is the Democratic candidate and has no opposition.

South Dakota will also name a governor. Kirk G. Phillips is the Republican and Andrew E. Lee the fusion candidate. The latter is a Populist and the fusion is between Populists, Democrats and Silver Republicans. A full state ticket and a legislature are to be voted for.

Tennessee also votes for a governor. Benton McMillin, for many years a leading member of Congress, is the Democratic candidate for governor and will be elected. James A. Fowler is the Republican candidate. A legislature to choose Senator Bates's successor will be elected. Senator Bate will no doubt succeed himself.

Texas has a picturesque fight for governor and state officers. Joseph D. Sayers, for a long time one of the leading members of the Texas congressional delegation, is the Democratic candidate for governor, and J. H. Browning for lieutenant governor. The Middle of the Road Populists have made a vigorous campaign and claim the election of their ticket headed by Barnet Gibbs. Gibbs has made a red hot campaign, charging Democratic officials with misdoing and creating many sensations on the stump. The Populist element in Texas is very strong, but the Democratic ticket will unquestionably win. The Republicans have no ticket.

Wisconsin also elects a governor. E. A. Scofield, the present governor, is the Republican candidate for that position. Hiram W. Sawyer is the Democratic candidate, with ex-Congressman Peter V. Denster, the candidate for lieutenant governor. E. W. Chafin is the Prohibition and A. H. Worsley the Populist candidate for governor.

In Wyoming the fight is between the Republicans and the fusion forces. De Forest Richards is the Republican candidate for governor and H. C. Alger the fusion candidate. The fusion is between the Democrats, Populists and Silver Republicans, as in most of the western states where it exists.

In the other states in which elections are to be held the issues involved and the offices to be filled are of minor importance. In some of them state offices to be filled, in others legislatures to be named and in some constitutional enactment is to be voted on.

Burglar Shot Down.

Worcester, Nov. 8.—Sunday night a posse of citizens of North Grafton surrounded a gang of burglars who had broken into the postoffice, captured two and killed another. George Allen discovered the burglars, and, leaving his house through a rear window, alarmed Amos G. Getchell and William Getchell, constables, and other men.

They surrounded the postoffice and found three men on the outside of the building. Burglars and citizens opened fire with revolvers and finally the robbers fled. Yesterday morning the dead body of one of them, apparently a Frenchman, was found in a field near by. Entering the building two other burglars were seen and captured. Both were armed.

McGrath and Day, the captured burglars, were taken to Westboro and held in $10,000 each for appearance before the superior court.

Four Hours for Voting.

Washington, Nov. 8.—President McKinley left Washington at 20 minutes past seven o'clock last evening for Canton, Ohio, where he will vote today. He travelled in a special car and was accompanied by Mrs. McKinley, Assistant Secretary Cortelyou and General Russell Hastings, who is a guest at the White House.

The president will arrive at Canton at ten o'clock this morning and will leave for Washington on the return trip at two o'clock in the afternoon, arriving here at about 7.20 a. m. Wednesday. The president will receive election bulletins at all of the principal cities and towns through which his train will pass.

Railway Shops Burned at Sacramento

Sacramento, Cal., Nov. 8.—A fire that broke out in the extensive railroad shops of the Southern Pacific Company yesterday caused a loss of more than $200,000.

WILL PAY FOR ISLANDS

The Entire Archipelago Must Be Ceded to the United States.

NEW INSTRUCTIONS GIVEN

Officers Determined to Keep the Entire Group. Commissioners will be Permitted to Accept Responsibility for Improvements Made.

Washington, Nov. 8.—Spain's exhaustive argument against the cession of the Philippines to the United States has had the result of making the officials all the more determined to take the islands.

Instructions sent to Mr. Day, chairman of the American commissioners, will require him and his colleagues to renew to-day their demand for concession of the group to the United States, and they will make in their communication the first offer of money in payment for the islands.

It is understood that the president will consult to-day with some of his advisers concerning the amount to be named in the American communication but it is said that the sum to be paid will not under any consideration exceed the aggregate of the debts contracted by the Spanish government for improvements in the Philippines. All military debts and debts contracted in the name of other islands such as Cuba, will be barred, and the Spanish commissioners will be informed that they must recognize this fact promptly as possible.

Secretary Hay has received a full statement of the contents of the Spanish note. Its character was just what the officials expected—without any new arguments of importance. Senor Rios and his colleagues call attention to the action of their government in delivering a note through M. Cambon, the French ambassador, to President McKinley, which set forth the understanding of the Spanish government that in agreeing to the protocol its sovereignty over the Philippines would not be affected.

It is also claimed by the Spanish commissioners that this declaration was assented to by President McKinley. As a matter of fact the note had been delivered, but the president had declined to answer it either in writing or verbally to M. Cambon.

The Spanish commissioners have declared, it is said, that instead of the United States acquiring the Philippines this government should pay their government an indemnity for the attack on Manila after the peace protocol had been signed, and for the damage consequently done.

Rear Admiral Dewey's victory in the bay of Manila was unimportant and the possession of Cavite during the war was not such as to give the Americans control of the islands, and it is claimed, and the claim is fortified by argument and many legal precedents, that the American government has no moral right to demand the cession of the entire group of 1,400 islands, when it held only such a small bit of territory as that at Cavite and controlled only the bay of Manila.

All during the war Spanish troops were stationed on other islands and were not molested. The Spaniards indicated their willingness, however, to sell the islands and the authorities have no apprehension now that any rupture will occur, unless it be over the amount to be paid.

It is understood that after the Philippine question has been disposed of the commissioners will consider the determination of claims which have been filed by Americans against Spain and by Spaniards against the United States. It was thought that this government would bind itself to satisfy all American claims in consideration of the territory ceded to the United States, but this is incorrect. The Spanish commissioners have a heavy claim for filibustering against the United States to offset the claims filed by Americans for personal and property injuries, and the question of their disposition will have to be decided.

THE FIRE AT THE CAPITOL.

Damage Far Less Than at First Estimated

Washington, Nov. 8.—Investigation yesterday showed that the damage to the Capitol by the explosion and fire of Sunday night was very much less than at first thought. Mr. Elliot Wood, after an examination of the scene of the explosion, said that the foundations were not disturbed and that the necessary repairs could be made by the time Congress met. The cost of the repairs will not exceed $100,000.

The damage done by flames, smoke and water was confined mainly to the room occupied by the marshal of the supreme court and that used by the clerk as a store room for the old records. The extent of the damage to the records cannot be determined, but it is sentimental rather than substantial. All the decisions of the court from the beginning are in print and all the transcripts of record since 1832. The probabilities are that the records are only scorched.

The law library escaped with only damage to the binding of its volumes, which can be replaced for $1,000. No injury whatever was done to the busts of the chief justices which adorn the court room.

Cremation Movements in Canada.

Montreal, Nov. 8.—There is a prospect of a crematory being erected in Canada. The directors of Cataraqui cemetery, at Kingston, are discussing the matter, having had applications from various persons who consider cremation a much better way of disposing of bodies of the dead than burial. The late John H. R. Molson left $10,000 to go towards the erection of a crematory at Mount Royal cemetery in this city, but nothing has yet been done in the matter.

The Evacuation of Crete.

Canea, Island of Crete, Nov. 8.—The Turkish troops at Retimo having refused to leave that place, the Russian admiral in those waters, following the example of Admiral Noel, the British commander here, forcibly convoyed them on board a transport.

Sanitary Possibilities.

It has long been the contention by the most sagacious thinkers that the great advances of the future would be not so much in the curing of disease as in the prevention of disease. The safeguards prefigured in vaccination found in the germ theories of disease and the prophylactic methods deduced from it a promise of almost incredible marvels. Much has been done in this luminous path of human discovery, but it is only a beginning. But it is not so much in isolated and sporadic cases as in the prevention of epidemics that the immediate triumphs of preventive science were to be expected. It is in this light that comment on the life of the lamented Colonel George E. Waring, recently cut down in the prime of a splendid career, is of special interest.

This remarkable man, whose genius for sanitary engineering placed him at the head of his profession, was called by the city of Memphis after the awful scourge of yellow fever about 20 years ago to devise a new system of drainage with special reference to the prevention of epidemics. He was so successful that Memphis has been practically immune since that time. He achieved an approximate feat in New Orleans, though the riverine conditions of the city prevented the most complete application of the theory which underlay his plans. It is a distressing irony of fate that in his reconnoissance of the field preparatory to the campaign which he was detailed to undertake against the disease "by carrying the war into Africa" he should have been the victim of the fatal germ which ripened in his blood immediately on his return. It is understood, however, that his plan of reorganizing drainage and other conditions of municipal management in Havana and Cuban cities in general is complete. He considered the epidemic question as perfectly within reasonable control. Should his success be as great as it was at Memphis, it will be "a monument more enduring than bronze, a pyramid more stately than royal edifice." In such manner and by the perfecting of street cleaning methods, a branch of sanitary work which the object lesson of Colonel Waring's life has taught so vividly, the solution of the problem is properly defined.

The disappearance of the "black death" from Europe, where it once raged so fearfully at recurrent periods, and the reappearance of the analogous bubonic plague in Bombay and other Indian cities where conditions make city cleanliness almost impossible speak for themselves are facts laden with suggestion. In all regions of the world where it is possible to enforce scientific regulations by law it is reasonably sure that the day of effective safeguard against epidemic pests is not far distant.

In a pamphlet just issued by Professor Daniel G. Brinton of the University of Pennsylvania on the Philippines we find some interesting information about the language and literature of the Tagals, who occupy most of the island of Luzon. They are almost purely Malay in type. The race is characterized by a keen commercial sense and by an appreciation of the advantages of a settled order of things. The Tagalog language is highly developed and harmonious and far from difficult of acquisition. The characters are closely analogous to those found on Buddhist monuments in India, dating back 500 B. C. The literature abounds in poetry, and the gift of finent improvisation is common among the Tagals. The verses are imperfectly rhymed, but good in rhythm and accent. The Spanish padres pronounced this literature worthless, but one can easily fancy such a verdict as prejudiced. It will furnish a fresh field of research for American linguists and scholars.

The proposition of a wrecking company from the Pacific coast to raise the warship Maine, now submerged in the mud of Havana harbor, carries with it a good deal of sentimental interest. The United States seems to have considered the task hopeless, though the government grants permission to a private organization on the conditions of purchasing the wreck by paying salvage, if it elects, when the work is done. If the Maine could be raised and reconstructed so as to become as good as ever, it would be a supplementary triumph, fit to cap the end of the war gloriously.

The report of Captain O'Neill of the ordnance bureau as to the naval lessons of the war concentrates special attention on the importance of quick firing guns. It was the tremendous volume of fire from these that drove the Spanish sailors from their guns. All our 6 inch and many of our 8 inch guns should be converted into quick firers.

Hotel keeping is the best advertised business in the world. The big caravansaries in our larger cities are so constantly in evidence through reports of news and in the society columns that it amounts to many thousands of dollars in value in the course of a year.

No man more surely makes a donkey of himself than he who is constantly striving to be witty. And of these donkeys the longest eared is the habitual punster.

The men who try to live by intelligence and self love alone are the greatest failures of the human race.

There is no need for any citizen in Plainfield or this vicinity going to bed tonight without knowning the result of election. All the results, local, county, State and National, can be obtained by witnessing the bulletins thrown on The Daily Press monster screen on North avenue this evening It will be a continuous show of voting figures.

Dr. Coles varies his philanthrophy a little this time by presenting Scotch Plains with a building for Y. M. C. A. purposes instead of giving a statue to some society or distinguished person. With more men like Dr. Coles the world would be better.

Tomorrow the returns will be presented by The Daily Press with correctness and completeness. Watch for the early edition.

The I-told-you-soes will commence to bob up serenely around about midnight tonight.

The next thing on the political programme in Plainfield is city election.

Steam is up for the trip up Salt River.

PASSING COMMENT.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

One of the daintiest Hallow'een poems of the season appears in Collier's Weekly for October 29th, over the name of Geo. Wharton Edwards, of Franklin place. It is illustrated by a nearly full-page drawing, which shows a young girl in a quaint frock and hat gazing into an old-fashioned well, to see the picture of her true-love, by the light of the new moon which appears above the high garden wall. The idea of twilight is admirably portrayed in the drawing by soft lights and shadows; in the background leafless branches stretch up against the evening sky; and leaning over the well-curb Mistress Chloribel holds up her silken skirts out of the night dews. The very spirit of mystery that accompanies the Hallow'een season breathes in the graceful and musical lines which the drawing illustrates, and in which Mr. Edwards makes a first appearance in the world of verse.

"All's fair in love and war," but villainy to compass the former frequently meets swift retribution. As an instance of this you should see "The Sleeping City," a new and successful comedy drama in four acts, written on lines out of the ordinary, which will be at Music Hall Friday night. It is an interesting story of New York life after dark, beautifully told and splendidly acted by a well selected company of players. It is brought up-to-date and embellished in a manner that leaves little, if any, room for improvement. There is an abundance of pure and refined fun, and the various characters of city types keep the house in constant good humor which gives way at times to uproarious laughter. "The Sleeping City" is staged with the closest attention to detail and mechanical effects, while the reproduction of Battery Park, exterior of Sing Sing prison and the burning asylum are a revelation in stage realism in fidelity to the originals. Words alone fail to do this great play justice; it must be seen to be appreciated. Added lustre is lent to the piece by the introduction of up-to-date specialties.

Henry Chanfrau in "Kit, the Arkansas Traveller," a play dear to the hearts of all American playgoers, will be the attraction at Music Hall, early next week. This famous old comedy drama presents a story of American Western life full of heart interest and exciting scenes with at the same time a goodly spattering of real wholesome comedy of the old school.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Dunellen, Oct. 8.—Presiding elder Smith's wife and daughter, of Plainfield, called on Mrs. I. E. Henry Saturday afternoon.

Last Wednesday night William H. Terry's faithful setter dog, "Duke" was very uneasy. Mr. Terry heard the dog barking around inside the house, an unusual thing for the dog to do unless some one is prowling around, but as Mr. Terry was not feeling well, he ordered Duke to keep quiet and went to sleep. After awhile the dog returned to his bed and lay down. Nothing more was thought of the episode until Friday night when it was discovered that on Wednesday night two tramps had broken into the Presbyterian church just opposite Mr. Terry's house and slept there. That was no doubt what the dog was barking at. The tramps had entered the church through a window which had been left open, taken the cushions from off the pews, and made a soft bed for themselves either on the pulpit or on the chapel floor. When they left the tramps carried away with them the pendulum off the clock.

The pupils who go to the Whittier School had a forced vacation yesterday. There are three cases of diphtheria in the borough, and for fear that the disease germs were hidden somewhere in the building school was dismissed yesterday and the entire building thoroughly fumigated. The children suffering with the epidemic are the little Eick boy and Mr. Lowe's two girls.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, Nov. 8—The entertainment to be given by the Baptist Sunday school in the parlors of the church Wednesday evening promises to be a success financially. A very entertaining programme has been arranged and all should attend as the proceeds are for the benefit of the Sunday-school Christmas tree fund.

The boys of the football team complain bitterly of their treatment by the spectators at the game in Dunellen Saturday afternoon, when Scotch Plains lost to Dunellen by the score of 5 to 0. The boys say the crowd at the game crowded in on the gridiron interfering with the play when Scotch Plains had the ball. Especially was this so when Chapin got the ball and started for a touchdown, and having a lead of ten yards was sure of making it when one of the spectators deliberately stepped in his way throwing him down. This lost the chance to tie the score. This was only one of several such actions on the part of the spectators, and it will be some time before Scotch Plains will again play upon their grounds.

Everything points to a large vote being polled at the election today as both parties are working hard, but Scotch Plains will go Republican by about 60 majority.

MAKING IT PLAIN.

Values crowd each other as the season advances; they clamor for a place in print; perhaps one in twenty gets it. Last month we broke a record, and the next 'twill be the same. We own the goods to do it with; we have the nerve to cut prices right through every department, not on half-a-dozen articles for baits, but every dollar's worth of goods in the store. It means much to you from a money-saving standpoint.

PRICE BREAKS

In Silks among the manufacturers means Price Breaks here; you get the full benefit of it, and it means much. Over one thousand yards of Handsome Silks that were $1 to $1.75 the yard will go for 79c yd.

DRESS GOODS

We have too many of certain lots, a backward season is to blame for it, and when the values remain the same the prices are badly twisted. About 100 pieces of Skirt and Waist Lengths, were 40, 50 and 75c yd, now 25c yd. Fifty pieces of Fancies, were 50 and 75c yd, now 29c yd. Twenty-five pieces of Imported Novelties, were 75c yd, now 49c.

WHITE QUILTS.

About one hundred of them manufacturers samples, full size, handsome quilts, staple as wheat, but they go to you at half value—were $1.25 to $3, now 69c to $1.75.

BLANKETS

and Comfortables—many who read this will feel bound to buy blankets and comfortables. We sell for $2.49 a ten-quarter all-wool blanket; no one can match it under $3.50. 98c buys a full-size white cotton filled Comfortable.

These lots of fresh, seasonable specials are here for quick selling; you will know they are cheap the minute you see them:

THE MATCH-MAKER.

The service was just beginning when I got to church. There was such a crowd that I slipped into a dull corner facing a wall.

Immediately in front of me I noticed a young girl, quite shabbily dressed. She seemed conscious of her poor appearance, and evidently shrank from notice.

Presently a gentleman came in, very well dressed and with an air of wealth somehow, but instead of the self-confidence of his class he also was shy and shrinking. Poor man, he was deformed. He couldn't help knowing there was a woman of some kind next to him, but he seemed to pull himself together to avoid her.

We got to the first hymn. She couldn't find it—wrong book. Civility compelled him to offer his, and very shyly, coloring crimson, the thumb of her shabby glove grasped the extreme corner.

At the next hymn and the next they were getting quite friendly in an unspoken way.

I felt very interested. I am a born match-maker, and always like to give heaven a little assistance, but I didn't quite see what I could do in this promising case.

However, chance favored me. Coming out of church there was a heavy shower. I was delighted to find my son George waiting for me with an umbrella, dear boy, so thoughtful.

"I knew you wouldn't have one," he said so triumphantly that I wished to goodness I had.

"Hullo, Meredith, haven't you got an umbrella either? Serves you right."

"Hush," I said, squeezing him arm. To my great surprise George was speaking to the man I had noticed in church.

"Perhaps you will come home with us," I said, smiling sweetly, "and wait till the shower is over."

I managed it all so beautifully; he came in to supper, and we got on so well that in a very short time he was quite a frequent visitor. He seemed at ease in a house where there were no tall girls to look calmly at him with perfectly composed manner. George's boyish tastes were a rest for his studious soul, and I am sure he liked me almost as much as I liked him.

At a large "at home" one afternoon one of the musicians was a Miss Sydney-Jones, and while I was dreamily wondering where I had seen her before her badly-made frock caught my eye, and I beamed. It was the shabby young lady I had seen in church.

Five minute later she was sitting by me. I praised her playing, talked to her like a mother, and easily got out of her that she was a music teacher, and evidently not much at that.

I arranged for her to come to tea and bring her music, and took care that Mr. Meredith dropped in at the same time. I saw he looked peculiarly at the girl. I am sure he recognized her. Perhaps he had often thought of her in the silent watches of the night. Perhaps George is right that I incline to be sentimental. Miss Jones seemed unable to conceal her extreme shyness, and my son kindly tried to put her at her ease.

Mr. Meredith looked on with sad eyes. I knew what he was thinking of, but he depreciated himself; if the girl had any sense she would take him at his true worth.

The tuning of the fiddle-strings sent George flying; but Mr. Meredith watched every movement with such admiration that the girl's head was turned, and she put on little airs of coquetry that quite finished the man no woman had ever designed to flirt with before.

I slept that night with the blissful consciousness of having done a good action, helped in a difficult job.

Before I went to sleep I thought I would give the girl a wedding-dress and decided where it would be nice for them to live.

About twice a week the little comedy went on. At first Mr. Meredith made some excuse for coming; afterwards, without words, he and I understood each other.

Miss Jones lost her shyness, or it took a new form. The little hesitation and glance which accompanied her speech George once described as "fetching." I was so glad for Mr. Meredith's sake.

* * * * * * * *

I was idling over the tea-table one afternoon, rather wishing my "young couple" would turn up, when I heard Mr. Meredith's knock at the front door. I started to my feet when he came in, and my heart seemed to choke me, for no reason whatever. I don't know how it was, but I knew.

He had the look of a saint on his face—forgiveness, humility, sympathy; what did his mis-shapen shoulders matter with such a soul as that?

"I was to break it to you," he said; "but I see you know. They were married this morning at St. Luke's. They didn't tell you, for fear you should be angry, they said.

Oh, my son, my son!

The "Tramp and Rat" Fable.

Once upon a time a Tramp was Sorely in need of Something to Eat, and approaching a Farmhouse, he spake unto the Farmer, saying: "If you will give me the Wherewithal to satisfy the Cravings of the Inner Man, I will kill all the Rats about the place." "Agreed," said the Tiller of the Soil, and he ordered his Good Wife to give the Tramp a Square Meal. After the Tramp had Devoured everything in sight he went to the woodpile and selected a stout Club; then, seating Himself on the Porch, he said to the Farmer: "Now bring on your Rats."—Chicago News.

ABOUT BLANCHE WILLIS HOWARD.

Her Marriage to the German Court Physician Was a Remarkably Happy One.

Though there is not much to be said for "One Summer" beyond the fact that fifty-four thousand volumes of the book were sold, the personality of its author does not, happily, depend upon her literary work. Blanche Willis Howard, or—to call her by the title which she bore at the time of her death—the Baroness von Teuffel, was one of the most charming women who have ever attempted to write, and, unlike many others, she was prone to take her books at very nearly their proper valuation.

Beside her novels and her work as a magazine editor, she was a musician of real ability. It was her remarkable talent in this direction—aided, as always, by her taking manner—that won her the friendship of Wagner, with whom and with whose niece—as she used often to tell—she sat in a private box at the first public production of "Lohengrin." Another of her friends was Lizst, whose guest she was in Rome some time later.

Her marriage to the German court physician was a marriage for love and one in which the love endured until the time of Dr. Teuffel's death. His wife never recovered from the shock which she then sustained. Once of unusually handsome figure, fair, and with hair like the silk of corn, she seemed to grow old and gray in a night. She put aside all her literary work from that moment and, as she recently wrote to an American friend, "Was merely waiting till the end should come.' That end found her quickly, but peacefully, in the old German town she loved so well.—Philadelphia Press.

How the Prince of Wales Escaped.

The Prince of Wales was once taking a walk in St. James's Park before breakfast, when he found himself followed by a well dressed but crazy looking old woman. Having seen this woman before, and probably guessing what her object was, the prince resolved to take no notice of her, but continued his walk until obliged to turn homeward. The woman then stood before him and courtesied. The prince raised his hat and tried to pass on. "I have a grievance, your royal highness," began the stranger, producing from her hand bag a roll of close written parchment. "Ach, madam, these is not ze first time I have been taken for the Prince of Wales!" was the reply in a gruff voice, with a strong German accent. After flashing a glance of deepest scorn upon him, the old lady put away her precious documents, remarking: "I have the honor to have known all the members of the royal family, and if my eyesight were not becoming bad nowadays, I should not have made such an astonishing error as to take you for the prince!" The Prince of Wales again took off his hat, smiled, and proceeded on his way.—London Mainly About People.

WIT AND HUMOR.

Mrs. Bridely (in tears)—Oh, John! How could you scold me so? You know you often said before our marriage that you delighted in cleanliness.

Mr. Bridely (grimly)—So I do; but I draw the line at paying for a woman to scrub the bottom of a coal box just before the coal is put in.—Pearson's Weekly.

Irate Customer—That bug exterminator you sold me the other day is no good. The cockroaches fatten on it.

Affable Salesman—Yes, sir. That's the first stage. They get fat on it and then they die of appoplexy. Come around next week and report again. Anything I can do for you ma'am? Chicago Tribune.

"What a grasping fellow you are, Hawkins! You've bothered me about this bill fifty times in ten days!"

"You wrong me Jarley, I'm not grasping. I've bothered you about the bill, I admit; but I haven't been able to grasp anything yet."

"Papa, are generals brave men?" asked Johnny of his father.

"Yes, my son' as a rule," was the answer.

"Then why do artists always make pictures of 'em standing on a hill three miles away, looking at the battle through an opera glass?"

"Your husband has been ill," said the caller.

"Yes," replied the little worried-looking woman; "he has been feeling very badly. I do my best to please him, but nothing seems to satisfy him."

"Is his condition critical?"

"It's worse than critical," she answered, with a sigh; "it's abusive."

"Great Scott, Clara, what do you mean keeping me waiting on the corner looking like a fool?"

"Well, Harry, I know I kept you waiting, but you did the rest yourself."—Chicago Record.

Smith:—I hear that your mother-in-law is dangerously ill."

JUDGE KILGORE'S LUCK.

How He Got His Gun, the Chicken and the Man He Was After.

An amusing story, in which the tables were cleverly turned, dates from the war between the North and the South. The hero of it was the late Judge Kilgore. While serving in the army he was ordered home to assist in the capture of some deserters. One evening he was pursuing his search in the country, suffering from weariness and hunger—especially hunger.

About dusk he stopped at a house by the wayside in time to see a woman removing from the fire a nicely broiled chicken. The smell of the food joined forces with his hunger, and he drew from his pocket a Mexican dollar with which he was loath to part. It looked as if he would not have to part with it now, for the woman refused to sell the fowl, declaring it to be for a sick friend.

"I'll jump you for it, though" she said.

"What do you mean by that?" asked the officer.

"I mean that we will see who can jump farthest from this doorsill out into the yard. The one that beats shall have the chicken and the dollar."

The hungry officer agreed. The dollar was placed on the dish with the chicken, the gun rested against the wall near the door and the stranger swung his arms and made a tremendous leap.

He recovered himself with difficulty and turned to see the woman standing in the doorway, his cocked gun in her hands with its butt against her shoulder. Her finger was on the trigger.

"Now, you just flirt the gravel down that road, young man, or I'll make buzzards' food of you," she ejaculated.

There was determination in her eye, and ball in the gun. The soldier obeyed her commands with impotent rage in his heart.

Darkness had fallen in the meantime. The soldier spied a gin-house over in a field, and made for it. He was tired out, and was thankful to climb into the loft and sleep. Presently he was awakened by voices below. One, a female voice, was telling a story of a disappointed soldier and a long jump. In that voice the officer recognized his acquaintance of the evening. As she told of his discomfiture, peal after peal of laughter bore witness to the humorous character of the story.

The pair below were much engrossed in each other. The soldier peered down through a hole in the floor, and beheld the chicken and the Mexican dollar full in view. The tallow dip that lighted the interior showed him his gun also.

Just as the man below drew the dish toward him to partake of the chicken, a big object tumbled through the hole in the floor, and before the pair could recover from their astonishment the soldier had recovered his gun. Now the tables were turned. Bringing the gun into position he addressed the woman.

"Madam," he said, "you flirt the gravel back home. As for this gentleman, he and I will flirt the gravel to the office of the provost marshal, for he is the deserter after whom I have been searching for a week."

Resistance was useless. The woman went home. The soldier recovered his dollar, ate the chicken, and delivered his prisoner to the provost marshal.—Youth's Companion.

MUST DRESS LIKE QUEENS.

Actresses In These Roles Pay More Than Royalty for Their Gowns.

Vienna papers are commenting on the great cost of actresses' dresses. Stage folks who play kings and queens say they must dress like royalty. Frau Odillon as Mme Sans Gene paid $1,250 for her costume and an opera singer recently bettered this record by $500.

As a matter of fact, however, real royalty pays nothing like these prices. The young Queen of Holland gets Paris gowns for $40 or $50. The Archduchesses Marie Valerie and Gisela get what they want for from $80 to $160. The German Empress buys her dresses in Vienna, and pays not more than $320, while the Empress Elizabeth gets the latest fashion and best quality for $60.

The Countess Castellane has just bought a tea gown from Worth for which she paid $6,000. It is trimmed with diamonds and is made of heliotrope velvet, crinkled according to the latest fashion. The long, straight front is of cream-colored mousseline de soie and cascades of cream and silk lace.

The front is bordered with a most exquisite trimming, consisting of a fluffy jabot of white feathers caught here and there with diamond ornaments. The effect of the diamonds glistening among the feathers is exquisite. The feathery trimming reaches from the shoulder right to the hem of the gown. The crinkled velvet sleeve is small and laid in tucks toward the top, and on one shoulder are a few sprays of velvet purple and white orchids, and on the other is a bunch of violets. The gown has a long train and an indescribable air of regal elegance.—New York Press.

Authorship in Georgia.

A Georgia author wrote to a New York publisher:

"What could you do with a story of say 65,000 words?"

The publisher replied briefly:

"If the express company would undertake it we could send it back to you immediately."—Atlanta Constitution.

AN ANECDOTE OF PRINCE BISMARCK

An Incident of His Bravery Which Gives an Idea of His Character.

In 1866 Bismarck was returning to his home from the palace, where he had been to see the king. While passing through the large street in Berlin called Unter den Linden, and quite near the place where Hoedel and Nobeling afterward attempted the life of Emperor William, he suddenly heard a shot fired close behind him. He turned sharply around and saw a young man, who, with a smoking revolver, was aiming at him. He strode up to the man at once and seized the arm that held the revolver, while with the other hand he grasped the throat of the would be murderer. The latter, however, had had time to pass his weapon into his left hand, and now fired three shots in quick succession. Bismarck felt himself hurt in the shoulder and in one of his ribs, but he held his assailant fast till some soldiers came up and took hold of him.

Then Bismarck walked home at a brisk pace, and reached his own house long before anybody there could know what had happened. The countess had some friends with her when her husband entered the drawing room He greeted all in a friendly manner and begged to be excused for a few minutes, as he had some urgent business to attend to. He then walked into the next room, where his desk stood, and wrote to inform the king of the occurrence. Having attended to his duty he returned to the drawing room and made one of his little standing jokes. "Well, are we to have no dinner to-day? You always keep me waiting." He sat down and partook heartily of the dishes set before him, and it was only when the dinner was over that he walked up to the countess, kissed her on the forehead, wished her in the old German way, "Gesegnete mahlzeit" (may your meal be blessed), and then added, "You see I am quite well." She looked up at him. "Well," he continued, "you must not be anxious, my child; somebody has fired at me, but it is nothing, as you see."

A Wonderful Shawl Ten Yards Square.

The Empress of Russia possesses so many marvelous articles that it is hard to describe any as being most wonderful. One of them, certainly, is a shawl, a wedding gift from the ladies of Orenburg, a town in southeastern Russia.

The shawl reached the empress in a wooden chest, with silver locks and hinges, the outside being embellished with designs of spears, turbans, whips, etc., in a ground of blue enamel, this being the color of the Cossack uniform. On the inside of the box is a gracefully worded inscription, begging the empress to accept the gift from her faithful and devoted subjects."

The shawl, when spread out, is about ten yards square, but it is so exquisitely fine that it can be passed through a ring, and when folded up makes a parcel a very few inches square. It is not only curious, but exceedingly valuable.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Talk of the People

It's of Interest to our Readers Because it Refers to Plainfield People.

It's astonishing how good news will spread. From every ward and street we hear of our people talking about the workings of the little conqueror. Merit and honorable methods receive their just reward. So many cases are cropping up that it is next to impossible to investigate them all, but we have taken a few in hand and give them publicity for the benefit of our readers. Our representative obtained the following statement of facts in a personal interview. They are true in every particular and no stronger evidence can be obtained than home endorsement.

Mrs. Maagaret Reville, of 732 West Third street, says:— "For a long time I was troubled with a lame and weak back and I obtained a box of Doan's Kidney Pills from L. W. Randolph's drug store and began using them according to directions. It was only a short time before I felt the good effects and from that time on I improved steadily under the treatment. My back had before pained me and was so weak and sore that I dreaded to bend over and when I had a cold or over-exerted myself I suffered severely. I used several different kidney remedies but did not get but little if any relief. I give Doan's Kidney Pills all the credit for my improvement. I think they are a fine medicine for a lame back. My experience with them has been very satisfactory and I do not hesitate to recommend them to anyone suffering from kidney troubles."

A WOMAN'S MERCY.

He had stopped behind the other callers, and she came late; and Aunt Teresa was wise enough to leave them together.

"It is a long time since we met," said he.

"Is it? I don't remember. It doesn't seem long."

"Only a year."

"Is that all?" She sank languidly upon an ottoman, and he sat down beside her.

"You are not looking well."

"Oh, that's only my style. 'A small, pale, big-eyed girl who looked interesting to avert criticism from her features,' as you put it in one of your novels."

"That was written long before I knew you."

"Still, it was a useful hint."

"To those who feared the criticism."

"I feared criticism very much—then."

"You are unforgiving," he said bitterly, with a slight flush on his dark face.

"Oh, no! I've long ceased to care. Besides, the critics haven't been so bad lately. You see, I haven't written anything pretentious enough for notice by you."

"Probably he would now admit that he was mistaken. Time may have taught him that your idea of a woman was truer than he supposed. Time," he sighed, "destroys a good many of our illusions."

"Great critics should be free from illusions."

"My illusion of woman's goodness is not quite gone, nevertheless. I remember my mother sometimes, as well as——" He paused awkwardly.

"Other women?"

"Another woman. Une belle dame sans merci," he corrected, looking hungrily at her.

"I suppose you mean a woman whom you treated badly, and from whom you deserved no mercy?" said she, leaning her elbow on the couch and putting her cheek on her thin hand. There was just the faintest pink flush upon her cheek, and her eyes looked fathomless.

"My God, how pretty she is!" the man groaned to himself.

"I said from the first that you had ability—even in the criticism which you—which hurts you" (she dug her nails passionately into her little white palms,) "and for which you have taken the fullest revenge in your power."

"I don't suppose it hurts you much?" she inquired, with a strange wistfulness.

"O, no, not much,' said he. "Not enough to spoil my art, such as it is. My latest lady-in-a-book has caught a touch of you. But even she comes all right in the third volume—at least, what would be the third volume, if they weren't all in one now."

"Yes," said she, thoughtfully. "I understood when I read it. She was a much better woman than I."

"I gathered that you hadn't read the book?"

"Oh, that was my—nastiness. Of course I've read it. Every one has read it. Besides, it is part of my business now to read the books of you great people."

"What! You a critic! What for?"

"The Daily Thunderbolt."

He looked at her in mute astonishment. For The Thunderbolt had called his book the greatest work of the greatest writer of the age—which he knew wasn't true.

"You wrote that critique?" said he slowly. "I ought to thank you, I suppose. But I confess I do not understand you."

"No," she answered sadly, "you do not understand me. You never will understand me. I cannot understand myself sometimes.. I am full of wretched nerves, the doctors say."

"Did you read 'A Woman's Mercy,' in The New Magazine?" she asked suddenly.

"No. I'm afraid I didn't. But I will."

"It isn't worth your notice."

"I will be the judge of that. What is it about?"

"Oh!—a man and a woman—the usual thing."

"What man and woman?"

"A critic and a writer." He became alert with interest.

"Tell me about it."

"I—I don't think I can remember." Her face was very pink now.

"I should so much like you to," he pleaded.

"Well, She was a would-be writer, a poor, sensitive, neurotic creature, like me—only not so nasty"—she paused for contradiction, but he was silent.

"She wrote a book once," she continued, "when she was young and fanciful. There was a woman in it—a bitter, hard, cruel woman—borrowed from some yellow-backed novel—not her own creature, really—not even her nasty self——" She paused again and looked anxiously, appealingly at him.

"Not her true self—her better self," he suggested, gently.

"Not according to my tale. Well, the book went off fairly well for a first venture; but a great critic lashed the heroine mercilessly."

"You own the heroine was bad?" The inquiry seemed forced from him, it was so sudden and vehement.

"Yes—Oh, yes! But the criticism hurt her—the girl who wrote it—the neurotic, passionate girl—terribly. She worried all day over it; she lay awake at night and cried over it; she—she—" Her voice broke, and she brushed away a tear, with an angry little sob.

"And so she hated the critic?"

"She hated the critic; or she thought she did."

There was a long silence.

"Did she take her revenge upon him—in your tale?" His tone was chilly with assumed indifference.

"She meant to, but——"

"Tell me."

"When she met him she didn't know that he was the critic."

"And he fell in love with her?"

"He said so."

"Did she like him—Agnes?" His face was still cold, but his voice was almost fierce in its eagerness.

"In the story she did."

"But when he told her that he was the critic?"

"I didn't say that he told her."

"But he did, didn't he?"

"Yes—in the story."

"So she hated him?"

"Y—es—not exactly—I don't know." Her hands kept opening and closing aimlessly.

"Anyhow, she resolved upon revenge?"

"Yes, a sort of revenge."

"A sort of revenge?" She shrunk and quivered at the scorn in his voice.

"You should read the story," she pleaded.

"My God!" he cried, "do I not know it?"

"No," she answered firmly, "you do not know it."

"Then I should like to hear." But she knew that he had hardened his heart.

"Well, she resolved to let him go on liking her——"

"A sort of revenge!"

"She made herself as attractive as she could. She wasn't very pretty, you know; merely a 'small, pale, big-eyed'—"

"For God's sake!" he cried, fiercely and hoarsely.

"Well, somehow she made him like her, and she—"

"Hated him all the time?"

"No—o—not altogether—in the tale."

"Then he proposed to her?"

"Yes; he proposed to her."

"Lamely enough—but earnestly." There was the rage of a caged animal underneath his quiet voice.

"Oh, no! Not lamely at all; honestly and manfully, and lovingly. He was a splendid character—in the tale." It was strange that he could not read the hero-worship in her tone.

"But she thought he wasn't?"

"No. She thought he was. She knew he was." She tied her handkerchief tremblingly in knots.

"Agnes, you are trying to play with me. I do not understand."

"No," she said passionately, looking up at him with white, drawn face and quivering lips, and eyes full of pain: "you do not understand. He did not understand."

"Did she not refuse him? Did she not tell him that the criticism had nearly broken her heart? Did she not tell him that she had resolved to take the bitterest revenge that a woman could take? Did she not tell him that she had studied his books to find the ways that attracted him most, to make him care for her? Did she not tell him that she had meant him to propose that she might refuse him? Did she not say that she wanted him to care for her all the rest of his life?" He stood up and towered over her like an accusing angel.

"Yes," she said with a sob. "But——"

"But! There is no 'but' to excuse such conduct as that!"

"Ah, but she had a lot more to say if he would have heard her. But he cursed her and went away—in the tale!"

"Agnes!" She sobbed uncontrolledly behind her handkerchief. "Agnes, for mercy's sake tell me what would she have told him if he had not gone." She looked up with a tear-stained face.

"She would have told him," she said, steadying her voice bravely and laying her finger-tips upon his arm, "that he had conquered her passion and her wickedness; that she had found out how great and strong and kind he was——"

"Agnes, little Agnes! Would she have told him that she loved him?"

"I—I don't know. The—the tale stops."

"But our tale, dear?" There was something in his voice that was past describing.

Then she looked up at him, with eyes brimming over, and whispered a word so brokenly that he could scarcely hear. But he took her in his arms and held her as close as could be, and she tried to nestle closer.

"O, Aggie, Aggie," he cried; "I ought to have known—a woman's mercy."

She lifted a flushed, happy face and threw a pair of slim, willful arms round his neck. "Yo," she whispered, "my dear, dear boy. A woman's love!"—J. A. Flynn in Black and White.

TRAGEDY OR COMEDY

I knew George Arbuthnot pretty well for two years—ever since he had been married, in fact and considered him a rising fellow in the literary world. He had not done anything very great, but his work was distinctly promising, and his name was gradually making itself known. Unluckily, he had married the wrong woman.

But my friend was not like some men—he did not whine and cry, he made the best of it. He did not go out and search for a "twin soul" to whom he might confide his marital sufferings though, Phoebus knows, he had enough to put up with. It was not bad temper. It was jealousy—bitter, mean, incessant jealousy—that grudged him even his literary fame. Agatha Arbuthnot was one of those little, pale, blue-eyed women, with a spiteful tongue and a narrow heart, who have ruined the career of many a sensitive man. She hated to hear her husband's praises sounded in her ears.

One afternoon Agatha was slanging Arbuthnot because some women who had happened to call the day before had gushed, and told her how fortunate she was to be the wife of such a rising genius. Her face was crimson with anger, and her voice very shrill as she mimicked her callers.

"Dear Mrs. Arbuthnot! How proud you must be of your clever husband! He's quite a genius. How I envy you living with the man who can write such exquisite stories!"

"Clever! Exquisite! A genius! I never saw any genius in your silly tales. Beastly rot, I call them. I wish to goodness I'd married Henry Jenkins instead of you. At any rate, people wouldn't have praised him up just in order to run me down. I know what they mean. Of course I'm stupid and brainless and silly—not good enough for you to wipe your boots on—"

And then Arbuthnot did the most sensible thing possible. He walked out of the dining room, and locked himself up in his study.

George's den wasn't much of a "study," merely a smoke-begrimed den, furnished with a second-hand bureau, two orthree chairs, and some shelves of books. Agatha called it "George's sulking room," but I knew it was the only haven of refuge Arbuthnot could find in his own house.

"A man must dree his own weird," Arbuthnot said, as he sat down wearily at the bureau and looked at the sheets of paper that littered over his desk. "I'm not the only fool who's found marriage a failure; and after all, I've got a brain as well as a heart. I'll give myself up to work, and waste no time in morbid self-pity. That's a form of cowardice that leads to the cutting of one's throat; and if I've exhausted the possibilities of marriage, I'll be hanged if I've exhausted the possibilities of life."

He smiled grimly, and taking from one of the pigeon holes a notebook, laid it on his desk and began to read its contents.

From that day Arbuthnot progressed swiftly through the book that was to make his name. This was to be his masterpiece, wherein he would show his best of brain and heart; and, as the weeks rolled on and the novel neared its end, Arbuthnot realized his work was good, and in that knowledge could afford to live, and did live, without love and sympathy.

In truth, he needed every support that work and philosophy could give a man. Agatha's conduct grew daily more shrewish and violent, and her tongue less fastidious in its choice of words.

"So you've taken to locking yourself up in your sulking room," she cried one day, when Arbuthnot had perforce been compelled to answer her heavy banging on his study door. "It's a nice thing when a husband comes to lock himself up from his wife! I suppose my society's not good enough for such a clever man as you."

Arbuthnot saw that she was in one of her paroxysms of rage, and resolved to control his own feelings.

"I wanted to finish some work," he said calmly, looking at the floor littered with loose sheets of paper. "And this room is hardly fit for a lady's society. You see, I have scarcely a chair that is unoccupied with books."

"Yes, it's a horrid hole," assented Agatha, curtly; "but you men who write are more like pigs than human beings. Just look at the dust on that desk; it's shameful. And Sarah says you won't let her touch your papers. I'm ashamed to have such a dirty room in my house; I'll come and dust it myself to-morrow."

At these words Arbuthnot lost his philosophical self-control.

"I must ask you not to touch the papers on my desk," he said, hastily. "I allow Sarah to brush and dust everything in the room but my desk, and that I attend to myself."

"Of course you fly at my throat when I offer to do anything for you," said Agatha, angrily, letting her hand fall on the desk and crumpling several of the loose sheets together. "I can't speak to you but what I do wrong. That comes of marrying a genius! You're enough to make any woman want to drown herself."

"I beg your pardon if I spoke hastily," said Arbuthnot, ruefully contemplating the sheets of paper which Agatha was fast crumpling into balls; "but I've nearly finished my book, and these sheets of paper are rather valuable."

Agatha threw the balls onto the table.

"And this book is to make you famous?" she asked, with bitter contempt. "I suppose, when it's published, every one will come in and envy me because I am the wife of the genius, George Arbuthnot."

Her scornful emphasis only brought a smile to Arbuthnot's face.

"I don't know about that," he said, good temperedly, "but it's the best work I've done yet. And if it's successful, Agatha, I shall be able to buy you that diamond bangle you coveted the other day."

But even the reference to the diamond bangle failed to move Agatha.

"How long will it take you to finish it?" she asked, slowly, looking down at the untidy desk.

"I hope to finish it by next week," said Arbuthnot, triumphantly. "I've allowed Lorrimer, The Weekly Review man, to see some parts of it, and he's expressed a very favorable opinion and think's it's bound to be a success."

Agatha's eyes narrowed at the corners.

"Lorrimer's a fool," she said, angrily.

It was one cold afternoon, ten days later, that Arbuthnot stood on his doorstep in the act of inserting his latchkey, smiling at some pleasing reminiscences of his recent talk with his publisher.

Suddenly a wild, terrified cry broke from the house, followed by scream after scream, reiterated with such intensity of anguish that Arbuthnot himself caught the infection of terror, and fumbled with trembling hands at the latchkey.

At last he managed to open the door and run into the hall. A fearful sight met his eye. From his study door flew something—an object enveloped in writhing flames, and from it there came piercing, agonizing shrieks As the draught from the open door blew fiercely down the corridor the flames leaped higher and higher round their living prey, until Arbuthnot sickened gaze saw nothing but a brilliant ball of fire.

God! It was Agatha! Mad with torture, the flaming figure dashed toward him and threw out its arms in agony. Arbuthnot caught it in a tight embrace, and with all his strength hurled himself and the shrieking figure onto the carpeted floor and rolled over and over until at last the flames were beaten out and he knew the fire was conquered.

Three hours later the doctor came softly down stairs. He had used all his skill to bring life back to the disfigured body that now lay motionless on the bed. It was all in vain. Agatha's injuries were beyond all help, and she had lived only three hours after Arbuthnot had carried her upstairs.

Her husband had never left her side, and, though badly burned about the hands and face, had scarcely realized his own injuries. As he looked at that cruelly disfigured face, now swathed and hidden in bandages, a rush of tears blinded his eyes, and he knew that all past differences were swept away, and that Agatha would live henceforth in his memory only as the woman he had once loved with all his heart. Before life flickered out in that suffering body, Agatha opened her eyes once and met her husband's gaze fixed with intense pity and love upon her face. To Arbuthnot it seemed that she pleaded dumbly for forgiveness, but even as he looked the lids closed again, and in a few moments Agatha's spirit had slipped into the great silence.

When all was over, Arbuthnot stooped and kissed the cold, pale lips.

Later in the evening he went down stairs to his study. As he entered the room a shudder ran through his body; he remembered the figure of flame that had leaped into his arms but a few hours ago, and his heart was torn at the thought of Agatha's sufferings.

As yet it was a mystery how she had caught fire. Presumably she had been warming herself in his study, and her thin grenadine dinner dress had swept too near the flames. A few dull red embers still glowed in the grate. Arbuthnot lit the lamp and sat down mechanically to his desk.

"Thank God for work!" he said, with a deep sigh. "At least I can forget for a time—"

He opened the deep drawer wherein his pile of manuscript had lain ready for the printer's hand. One or two omissions could easily be rectified now, and the work would soothe his weary heart and brain. But—the drawer stood empty. Hastily he pulled out its counterpart. No; that, too, held nothing. With feverish hands he rumaged each pigeon hole, turned everything out of his bureau, sought on the chairs, the tables. The manuscript had disappeared!

A fearful thought darted into his brain. He ran to the fireplace—his eyes fell on some charred ashes in the fender.—Black and White.

An Honest King.

Whoever reads the following must own to a feeling of respect for the honest King. King Frederick VI. of Denmark, while traveling through Jutland, one day entered a village school and found the children lively and intelligent and quite ready to answer his questions.

"Well, youngsters," he said, "what are the names of the greatest kings of Denmark?"

With one accord they cried out, "Canute the Great, Waldemar and Christian IV."

Just then a little girl, to whom the schoolmaster had whispered something, stood up and raised her hand.

"Do you know another?" asked the king.

"Yes, Frederick VI."

"What great act did he perform?"

The girl hung her head and stammered out, "I don't know."

"Be comforted, my child," said the king, "I don't know, either."—Tit-Bits.

SPORTING.

ON THE GRIDIRON.

The Alts team will meet the Scotch Plains eleven at some future date. The game was to be played next Saturday but so many of the Alts boys are going to witness the Yale-Princeton game that the game has been postponed until November 19th.

The Knickerbocker Athletic Club has challenged the Plainfield eleven to a game on Thanksgiving day. If the showing today is a good one, it is probable that the challenge will be accepted. Plainfield is quite honored in having New York's leading athletic club anxious to meet the local players.

The team that will represent Plainfield on the gridiron this afternoon in the game with the San Remo's will be the strongest that ever lined up on a local field. The San Remo's are a strong team, but they will have to play well before they defeat the team that Plainfield will put against them.

The Alts team was somewhat crippled in its game with the Westfield team, and had to put three of the second team on the line owing to the absence of the regular players. The new men did great work, however, and Overton, at end, particularly distinguished himself by his brilliant work.

This afternoon will see an exciting football game at the Martine Field between the Plainfield eleven and the San Remo team of the New York Athletic Club. The game is called for 3 o'clock. The admittance will be 15 cents for ladies and 25 cents for men. A grandstand, capable of accommodating several hundred, will be erected for the game and a small admission fee will be charged for it.

No change is noted in the condition of J. W. Yates, of East Seventh street.

The engagement of Miss Mifford, of Lee place, and Henry VanNest, of Newark, is announced.

MRS. COCK'S FUNERAL.

One of the Most Beautiful Ever Held in the Episcopal Church.

The funeral services over the remains of Mrs. M. Margaretta Cock were held yesterday afternoon in Grace Episcopal church. The service was one of the most beautiful ever held in Plainfield.

The casket was surrounded with beautiful floral pieces. A magnificent wreath of ivy from the members of the choir and a cross of white roses from the members of the family occupied a place on the casket.

The full Episcopal burial service was used and the full choir participated. The musical part of the service was in charge of Mrs. Freeman, the organist, and was particularly well rendered. The opening sentence was read by Rev. E. M. Rodman, and between each sentence the choir sang a verse of the hymn, "Jesus Lives," a part of the service was performed before in Grace church.

The chant, "Lord Let Me Know Mine End," was sung, then Rev. Floyd Appleton read the lesson. Another anthem, "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth," was sung by the choir, the solo part being taken by Arthur Freeman very feelingly and effectively. The anthem, "I Heard a Voice From Heaven," followed the prayers, and as the funeral party passed out the choir burst forth in that victorious hymn by Henry Alford, "Ten Thousand Times Ten Thousand."

The honorary pall bearers were Mahlon Vail, John B. Dumont, Samuel Huntington, Francis Wood, Charles P. Bull and Dexter O. Tiffany. The committal service at Hillside was read by Rev. Mr. Rodman. Members of Mrs. Cock's family from Philadelphia and of Mr. Cock's family from New York and Long Island were among those present.

DRAGGED IN A PERILOUS POSITION.

Exciting Runaway on North Avenue This Morning.

Patrick Traynor, of Union avenue, had a miraculous escape from either death or serious injuries at 11 o'clock this morning on North avenue.

Mr. Traynor drove a spirited horse, attached to a light road wagon. He stopped in front of Warnock's bakery and when he came out and started to get into the buggy the horse became restless and started to go. Mr. Traynor yelled "whoa" and this apparently frightened the horse. The animal gave a sudden plunge and Mr. Traynor was thrown directly under the buggy, where he was held fast in some manner.

The horse started down towards Park avenue at a terrific gait. People who were on the street held their breath for fear of seeing Traynor's life ended then and there. The runaway rig struck another buggy almost in front of The Press office, and then the fractious horse turned suddenly and came up plumb against the post on the corner of Park and North avenues.

Traynor was in a position so that one of the wheels of the vehicles rested on his back. A. H. Atterbury happened to be near and, together with a number of men, he ran to Traynor's assistance.

The horse was captured and Traynor was rescued from his perilous position, apparantly none the worse for the experience.

The buggy was somewhat damaged.

BAPTIST DEACON DEAD.

Charles A. Haynes Passed Away This Morning.

Charles A. Haynes, of First place, died this morning after a long illness. Mr. Haynes was taken ill last March, and was unable to go to business since then. Death came at 7:30 o'clock.

The deceased was a deacon in the Park Avenue Baptist church of which he was a member and a staunch supporter. He was about 50 years of age and leaves a wife and two children, Edward Fenton and Alice M. Haynes. He was in the fruit business in New York. Arrangements for the funeral will be made later.

The Election in the Borough.

The voting in North Plainfield was light during the morning. In the First district 223 votes were cast up to 11 o'clock, and 173 votes in the Second district. There are plenty of Republican and Democratic workers out, and every effort is being made to poll a large vote.

Engagement Announced

The engagement of Miss Ella W. Gardner, of Arlington avenue, to Arthur Heath, of Central avenue, is announced.

a noise down stairs. Slipping on his trousers, he crept downstairs to find one of the front windows open and a man about to climb in. Mair called to him to desist. The man slowly retired cursing at Mair. The man had a revolver in one hand and some heavy weapon in the other.

The window was found broken where the would-be burglar found a way to slip the catch to the window.

Mr. Mair came to the city jail this morning and promptly identified the prisoner as a colored man who had been employed by Jeter to husk corn. The colored man, he said, had been to his house several times for a drink of water. The man he saw in the night had the same appearance as the prisoner, was of his height and had the same sloughing gait.

Province of a Newspaper

The true newspaper is the one which prints all the important news of the world, avoiding that sensationalism which offends all sense of decency and good morals, and whose editorial utterances are honest, fearless, able, and dedicated to the best interests of humanity and a higher civilization. Happily, there are some newspapers left which have not fallen a prey to the recent craze of "yellow journalism." Among them, the New York Evening Post is a shining example of all that a modern, high-class newspaper should be.

A Bad Mixup.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Westfield, Nov. 8.—A couple of carriages collided at Westfield in the dark last night. While they were standing in the road and the drivers were trying to ascertain the damage done, Harry Eisenmand, of Dunellen, on a bicycle, ran into them. Eisenmann was thrown from his wheel into the gutter and stunned by the fall. When he recovered it was found that his right collar bone had been broken. His arm was put in a sling and he went home by train, declining surgical attendance.

Mrs. William Denton, of Westfield, spent Sunday with Mrs. Theodore Knight, of West Fourth street.

ELEPHANT GREAT IN CRIME.

The Intelligence Displayed in Their Hatred.

Few more impressive confidences can be imparted than one in which a Hindoo describes how he knows his elephant intends to destroy him. It is all so seemingly trivial, and yet in reality of such deadly significance. His story is so full of details that prove the man's profound understanding of what he is talking about that one remains equally amazed at the brute's power to dissemble and its intended victim's insight into the would-be murderer's character. And yet, from the psychological standpoint, the elephant never gives any such other indication of mental power as is exhibited in its revenge. That patient, watchful, implacable hatred, often provoked simply because a man is in attendance upon another animal (for it is the rule with tuskers to detest their next neighbors), speaks more conclusively of a high intellectual guide than all stories, true or false, concentration and fixedness of purpose, that have been told of their ability. Such concentration and fixedness of purpose, such careful, unrelaxed vigilance, such perfect and consistent pretence, and, when the time comes, such desperate, unhesitating energy, as homicidal animals exhibit, are impossible without a very considerable, although, in this instance, very irregular development.

No one can deny that if this creature is great at all, its greatness shows itself in its crimes. These have caused it to be worshipped in the East, where men venerate nothing but merciless, irresponsible force, and where an exhibition of those qualities and traits described fully accounts for the formula, "My lord the elephant."—Outing.

That Was the Question.

Sandy Mc——, a Forfarshire farmer, had been spending an hour or two in the evening with a friend a couple of miles away. It was a moonlight night, and Sandy, after partaking freely of his friend's hospitality, was riding quietly home across the sheep pastures on his "guid auld mare," when they came to an open ditch, which his mare refused to cross.

"Hoot awa', Maggie," said the rider "this winna dae. Ye maun jist gang ower."

He turned back about a hundred yards, wheeled round and gave the mare a touch of the whip. On she went at a brisk canter, but just as they reached the edge of the ditch she stopped dead, and shot Sandy clean over to the other side.

Gathering himself up, Sandy looked his mare straight in the face, and said:

"Vera weel pitched, indeed, ma lass, but hoo are ye goin' to get ower yersel', eh?"

STORY OF AN INVENTOR.

How His Persistence Secured Him a Position.

The late G. W. U. Yost, inventor of the typewriter, used to tell his friends that his business success was due to his always bearing down hard on one point until he made it felt, illustrating the remark by gradually increasing the pressure of one thumb on any available and tender portion of his friend's thigh until the friend acknowledged the force and application of the point.

When a young man, on his way to Washington, Mr. Yost arrived in Chicago with no friends to carry him further. Accordingly he set out in quest of work, and calling first at a large iron foundry, asked to be directed to the foreman. When the foreman had been pointed out, the young man approached him and said,—

"Sir, I have come to work for you and want you to tell me what I am to do first."

"We've all the hands we need," said the foreman, gruffly, turning away.

"But you don't quite understand me," exclaimed the young inventor. "I said that I have come to work for you. Now, I want you to tell me what I am to do first."

The foreman turned with a surprised expression. "See here, young man," he said, sharply, "I tell you we have all the hands we need. Now go along."

"Why, my dear sir," said Mr. Yost with the blandest smile and greatest geniality of voice, "that isn't at all the question we are to discuss. What I said is that I have come to work for you. Now, I want you to tell me what to do first."

The young man's manner was so engaging that the foreman could not feel offended, and, after a moment, pointing to three Irishmen piling pig iron he said, ironically,—

"Do what those three men are doing."

Nothing daunted, the young man obeyed his instructions literally, and in an hour piled as much pig iron as did the three other men.

"Now boss those men and make them work like that," observed the foreman.

Mr. Yost was rapidly promoted, and soon earned enough to enable him to complete his journey.

"But I had a harder time to get that foreman to let me go," he said, in telling the story, "than I had in getting him to tell me what to do first."

"Small Cap" Shafter.

"'Pecos Bill' is not the only nickname that General Shafter ever enjoyed," said an old newspaper man the other day. "Out in Denver he was known for years as 'Small Cap Shafter,' and as he is anything but small the title calls for an explanation. It seems that a banquet of some sort had been given to a lot of army officers, and among the guests was General, then Colonel, Shafter. The old 'Denver Tribune' printed an account of the affair and a list of those present was included in the article. When the proofs were examined before the paper was made up, it was observed that Shafter's initials were in lower case type and the proofreader promptly marked them 'small cap,' meaning that they should be reset in capitals of a small size. The intelligent compositor supposed that the inscription indicated some military title with which he was unfamiliar, and instead of making the proof correction substituted 'Small Cap.' Shafter, and thus it appeared on the following morning. 'Pecos Bill' was mad enough to bite nails when he saw the paper, but everybody else roared and the title stuck to him until the yarn was gradually forgotten. It is still remembered, however, by plenty of old timers."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Wasp and Bee Stings.

It is claimed that cocaine is a remedy for wasp or bee stings. It acts not only as a temporary local anaesthetic, but apparently has the power of destroying the poison of the sting. A gentleman relates that he happened to have some sixteenth-grain cocaine tabloids for hypodermic injection when a lady was badly stung by a wasp. Such stings ordinarily had a great effect on her, not only producing a very large and painful swelling, but making her feel more or less unwell for two or three days. One tabloid, dissolved in a few drops of water, and applied with the finger at once, almost removed the pain; a second, applied an hour or two afterward completed the cure. In other cases the remedy was equally effective, and it is proved advisable to keep a small bottle of strong solution of cocaine ready for use. It should, of course, be applied as soon as possible, but it is known to have given relief if applied even up to seven or eight hours after the sting.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

Filial Affection.

The following anecdote is given by an Indian officer as illustrative of the manners and customs of the wily Pathan. A certain General and his staff while wending their way through one of the narrowest valleys of Tirah, were annoyed by the attentions of a solitary marksman, who from time to time sent a bullet unpleasantly close. At last the General turned to his orderly—a Pathan sowar—and told him to dismount, take his carbine, and try and stalk the mountaineer. The sowar started off, and presently there was a crack, and a gray-bearded old Afridi tumbled headlong down the mountain side. The sowar returned and fell into his place. "Well done," said the General. "But how on earth did you manage it so easily?" "Oh," replied the sowar, "I knew his habits. He was my father."—London Truth.

Dressed Chickens

There is nothing quite so good for dinner as chicken, is there? It is something of which we never tire. A tender juicy fowl, nicely browned, and a hungry man—well, they instantly become one. We pride ourselves on our dressed chickens. We would like to have your meat trade—and we think a plump dressed chicken would be a good introduction.

BIG REPUBLICAN SWEEP.

PLAINFIELD ROLLS UP ONE THOUSAND PLURALITY FOR THE G. O. P.

In Plainfield Roger Murray Leads the Ticket By 1,009, With Cross, Fowler and Voorhees Next in Order—Results Throughout Somerset and Union Counties.

The Republicans of Plainfield surprised both city and county leaders of the G. O. P. as well as their opponents, by giving the Republican ticket a plurality of almost a thousand votes. Although the campaign that preceeded the election was a quiet one, the vote was surprisingly heavy. The Republican leaders expected and counted on a plurality of from 700 to 800 for their candidates, but their expectations were exceeded by 200. The Democratic organization was in better working order than it has been for several years and the Democratic ticket polled 213 more votes in the city than at the county election last year.

The day was a pleasant one. A large majority of the voters enjoyed a holiday and dropped in at the polling places all day. Both parties made a strong effort to get their vote out early but the Democratic workers claim that they were unable to get the full vote out.

On account of the unsuccessful candidacy of E. R. Ackerman for the State senatorial nomination on the Republican ticket, it was expected that his successful rival, Judge Cross, would be cut, particularly in the Third Ward. He was, however, as stoutly supported here as any other place in the county. It was expected that Assemblyman Roger F. Murray would run ahead of his ticket, and he did, in the First and Third wards more noticeably.

The fact that Elvin W. Crane was candidate for Governor on two tickets, the Regular Democratic and the County Democracy tickets, resulted in a larger vote for him than any other Democratic candidate. On the County Democracy ticket he was the only candidate, and the voters who cast their ballot for him on this ticket voted for none of the other candidates. This probably lowered the county Democratic vote a small number, as there were 44 County Democracy ballots cast in the city.

Another result of the candidacy of Crane on two tickets was to slightly reduce Voorhees' plurality in comparison with the rest of the Republican candidates. According to the complete returns, Voorhees' plurality in Plainfield was 898. R. F. Murray received the greatest plurality in the city, 1009. Congressman Fowler received 995 plurality and Judge Cross, candidate for state senator 987 plurality. The total Republican vote in the city was 1798, and the regular Democratic 849.

The Republicans of the borough polled a plurality of about 250, a good Republican plurality but nothing phenominal. The Democrats of the borough made their fight on the Assembly candidate and E. E. Cooper, the Republican candidate, ran nearly 50 behind his ticket. Howell and VanDoren ran well with the ticket.

Dr. D. C. Adams, Democratic candidate for coroner and Henry DeMott, Republican candidate for the same office, were the only local candidates on both tickets. Dr. Adams left his ticket behind by 100 votes while DeMott ran considerably behind the Republican vote.

The vote in the city is as follows:

Union county gave Voorhees 2,227 plurality as against 1514 for Griggs in 1895. Fowler received a plurality of 2,443. In 1896 he received a plurality of 5,412 in the county. Cross ran slightly behind his ticket with a plurality of 2,033. The pluralities of the Assemblymen averaged 2,200. Houston ran highest with 160 votes more than Squier, who was 90 votes ahead of Murray. The vote throughout the county was large.

THOUSANDS VIEWED ELECTION RETURNS.

Daily Press Bulletins Told Plainfield of the Election.

WAS MAGNIFICENT SERVICE.

COMPLETE REPORTS GIVEN FROM STATE, COUNTY AND CITY.

North and Park Avenues Blocked by Great Throng That Watched the Returns as They Were Flashed on the Screen—Much Enthusiasm Shown—How the Press Secured the News Quickly and Completely.

From all over the city they came to watch the Daily Press bulletin of election returns last evening. On a great sheet spread a ross the front of the Taylor building at the corner of North and Park avenue, the news of the election from all over the country was flashed by the light of the stereopticon. National, state, county and local returns were shown to the crowd that stretched far along North avenue from curb to curb and way out Park avenue. From eight o'clock, when the first returns were bulletined, until one o'clock this morning and the result was certain, two and three thousand people waited and watched and cheered.

It was the only place in the city where the people could learn anything of how the election was going and the enterprise of the Daily Press in providing such an opportunity was appreciated by all. Praise came from Republicans and Democrats alike for the Daily Press in thus keeping its patrons and friends in touch with the situation. The fairness with which both parties were treated was highly commended.

The notice that the returns would be shown during the evening attracted a large crowd long before eight o'clock. Then the returns came fast and the crowd cheered or groaned as the report happened to please them. Tin horns and a bugle added to the din of the voices. John Naegle was in charge of the stereopticon and handled it in excellent fashion. There wasn't a break to mar the evening and the returns were thrown on the screen with a promptness and rapidity that kept the people right up with the situation.

The Daily Press was particularly fortunate in the excelent service it was able to secure. The full service of the Postal Telegraph Company was received together with complete returns furnished by the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, which included New York and New Jersey in detail. The Standard News Association also gave New York and New Jersey returns. The returns in this State and Union county were early secured through the co-operation of the Newark Evening News and the Elizabeth Daily Journal. Somerset county was heard from through correspondents in Somerville.

In this city, a large corps of Daily Press reporters kept in touch with the vote all through the city and the crowd watching the bulleting was able to see just how the city vote was going and to learn the complete returns in each district as soon as the count was completed.

The result was uncertain until mid night. In New York, both sides claimed the victory, but the tidings in New Jersey began to favor Voorhees as early as 10:30 o'clock. Nothing was settled, however, until nearly midnight. Then the crowd went wild and howled and cheered itself hoarse.

Some of the more enthusiastic scurried around and secured materials for half-a-dozen great bon-fires that illuminated Park and North avenue until 2 o'clock this morning.

At 1 o'clock it was certain that both New York and New Jersey had gone Republican by varying majorities and the display of returns was ended. This morning everybody was loud in their commendation of the enterprise of The Daily Press in giving the returns so fully to the people.

—The monthly meeting of the A. O. H. will be held Thursday evening.

OPENING DAY OF GOLF FOR THE PARK CLUB.

One of the Most Conspicuous Society Events of the Season.

THE FIRST SCORES MADE.

SILVER PRIZES OFFERED FOR THE BEST PLAYING.

Pretty Clubhouse Decorated for the Occasion and Therein the Ladies Served Tea—Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers Won the Lady's Prize and George Richards the Gentleman's—Description of Course.

The formal opening of the Park Golf Club and the course took place yesterday and was one of the most auspicious social events of the season. Throughout the entire day the course was filled with golf enthusiasts from the borough and city. There was fully 300 people present during the day, and all were impressed with the nicety of arrangement. The pretty clubhouse was decorated tastefully by the lady members of the club, and during the afternoon a tea was given by Mrs. W. L. Saunders, Mrs. F. G. Meade, Mrs. Pierre Malli, Mrs. Walter McGee, Mrs. H. D. Hibbard, Mrs. S. St. John McCutchen, Miss Edith Hyde, Miss Caroline Randolph, Miss Anna Murphy, Miss Mary Wells, Miss Shepard, Miss Margaret McCutchen. There was a large attendance at the tea, and including the guests were many members of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, and many people prominent in social and business circles.

The club offered two prizes, a silver loving cup and a silver powder case, in competition for the lowest scores made by the ladies and gentlemen. There were not many excellent scores made on account of the fact that the grounds are new to most of the players. Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers won the ladies' prize with a score of 134, and George Richards with a score of 103 won the prize for the gentlemen. During the day the following scores were made in addition to the two given above: Aubrey Crowe, 121; Herbert Crowe, 137; W. A. Townsend, 120; G. W. Faber, 123; Edward Overton, 135; Herbert Rogers, 138; L. W. Howard, 157; F. O. Ball, 154; Olaf Saugstad, 110; W. J. R. Thiers, 155; M. T. Townsend, 129; Arthur Peck, 129; J. L. Cook, 181; Clarence Murphy, 146; E. T. Douglass, 147; H. D. Hibbard, 124; W. H Anderson, 115. There were several other players but they did not turn in their scores. Charles Hyde made one round of the course, nine holes, and his score was 80. All of the other players went around the course twice. Mr. Bendalow, the golf expert, was present and he went over the course several times, with no particular effort to lower his score.

Directly in front of the clubhouse there is located a handsome flagpole

SAN REMO TEAM WON BY ONE TOUCHDOWN.

Plainfield Football Eleven Defeated in First Game.

THE SCORE WAS 5 TO 0.

PLAINFIELD LACKED IN WEIGHT AND TEAM PLAY.

Visitors Had Number of Substitutes in Second Half—Only One Change on Local Team—Narrow Escape of Plainfield in First Half—There Was Very Little Kicking Done in Game.

It was a close game but the visitors proved too much for the local players and the San Remo team of the New York Athletic Club was victorious over the Plainfield team by a score of 5 to 0. Superior weight and better team playing were the advantages of the visitors. It was a plucky fight, however, by the local boys and they did good work considering their lack of practice.

The game was played on Martine field before a crowd numbering eight hundred people. There was a lack of organized rooting but considerable enthusiasm was shown.

Plainfield had the choice and took the western goal to defend and played with the wind. San Remo had the kick-off. Milne finally got possession and advanced the ball to the centre before he was downed. San Remo took possession of the ball on a fumble and advanced it steadily to within a foot of the Plainfield goal, there to loose it on downs.

Then the local boys made a great effort. The signal came for a fake kick but was misunderstood and bounced over the line where McGee picked it up and carried it back again before the San Remo backs could stop him. The Plainfield team then took a brace and carried the ball back to the middle of the field at the end of the first half.

In the second half, Plainfield was on the defensive most of the time. The only change in the team was the substitution of Phillips for Darling at quarter. Cuming played a great game throughout, getting in the fiercest of the tackling.

Gradually the San Remos hammered the Plainfield line and gained steadily until four minutes before the call of time. Zimm dove through left tackle for three yards and a touchdown. Huntington failed to kick the goal.

The game ended with the ball in Plainfield's territory where it had been most of the game. The Plainfield team was slack in its interference but the men held at it pluckily and refused to lose heart up to the very last.

The teams lined up as follows:

PLAINFIELD.		SAN REMO.
Carey	right end	McMillen, Hunt
Shildecker	right tackle	Zimm
Brown	right guard	Worcester
Cuming	centre	Morris
Milne	left guard	Arnold, Carr

COL. THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

REPUBLICANS WIN IN NEW JERSEY.

Foster M. Voorhees Elected Governor by Over Ten Tousand Plurality.

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 9.—The Republicans made a clean sweep in this state yesterday, notwithstanding the expectation that the Democrats had the best of the argument.

Foser M. Voorhees, according to the returns, has carried the state by over 10,000. Seven out of the eight congressmen were elected by the Republicans, the exception being in Hudson county. The Republicans will have a majority on joint ballot of the assembly and senate, and the prospect is that John Kean, Jr., will be the next United States senator from New Jersey. There is but one other candidate for that position and that is John F. Dryden of Newark, president of the Prudential Life Insurance Company.

The Democrats put up a strong fight considering that the state went over 80,000 for McKinley. In 1895 John W. Griggs, now attorney general of the United States, was elected governor. The average Democratic plurality has been 8,000. It would seem as if the good old Democratic state had drifted into the Republican column.

James Smith, Jr., the present United States senator, will retire in January, having served one term in the United States senate.

Since Joel Parker was war governor from 1863 to 1866, the old Democratic state has had but one Republican governor before Mr. Griggs. That was Marcus L. Ward, who served from 1866 to 1869. With this exception the state has been Democratic by majorities in that period ranging from 651 in 1880 to 14,253 in 1889.

Of the eight congressmen elected only one is Democratic. The legislature will stand upon a party vote in the following ratio:

Senate, Republicans 14, Democrats 7; Republican majority 7. Assembly, Republicans 38, Democrats 22; Republican majority 16. Joint Republican majority in house and senate 23.

Quiet in North Carolina.

RALEIGH, N. C., Nov. 9.—The election was quiet. The whites voted the Democratic ticket more solidly than ever before.

In the Fifth Ward of Wilmington, a negro stronghold, the utmost quiet prevailed, and not more than 15 per cent. of the negro vote was polled. The negroes voted without interference.

At Laurinburg, a negro stronghold and scene of a great "red-shirt" demonstration last week, there was no trouble. Few Republican votes were cast It looks like a Democratic landslide.

Wisconsin.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 9.—Chairman Treat, of the Republican State Central Committee, figures that Scofield will carry the State by 40,000 plurality. He also says the Legislature will be largely Republican, and at least eight of ten Congressmen will be returned from the Republican ranks. Chairman Peck, of the Democratic Committee, says not enough returns have been received to form any kind of an opinion.

North Dakota.

FARGO, N. D., Nov. 9.—The Republican State Committee claims that it has elected its State ticket by a plurality of not less than 4,000. The Fusionists, however, declare that Holmes for Governor and Fiske for Supreme Court have been elected. The Legislature is conceded to be Republican and will select a successor to United States Senator William N. Roach.

Illinois.

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—Returns indicate a Republican victory in the State by greatly reduced figures.

The Democrats carried Chicago and made a gain of three Congressmen in the city.

The revolt against Gov. Tanner and his methods is largely responsible for the city and Congressional success of the Democrats.

In Florida.

THE SIMPLEST CURE FOR INDIGESTION,

As Well as the Safest and Cheapest.

The new medical discovery, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, digest the food instead of making the worn out stomach do all the work, give it a much needed rest, and a cure of dyspepsia is the natural result.

You get nourishment and rest at the same time because these Tablets will thoroughly digest all wholesome food taken into the stomach whether the stomach works or not. A cure is certain to result because the digestive organs are given a chance to rest and recover their natural vigor and tone. The Tablets are then no longer required.

To show the manner in which the remedy acts on different people and how quickly and effectually it cures stomach troubles we present a few recent cases.

Mr. J. O. Wondly, of Peoria, Ill, writes: I was unable to eat anything but the plainest food and even that often distressed me, but since using one box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets I can eat anything and everything I want.

Mrs. Samuel Kepple, of Girty, P., writes: I have been entirely relieved of my stomach troubles by your Tablets. I suffered three years with sour stomach and gas at night. I am thankful for them.

Mrs. A. E. Bowen, Barnard, Vt., writes: I think Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the best thing for dyspepsia I ever took. I will recommend them to anyone troubled as bad as I was.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will not disappoint because they cure Dyspepsia surely and lastingly by causing the food to be properly assimilated, and cure constipation by producing the proper quantity of bile. Sold by all druggists at 50 cents per package. Send for free book on stomach diseases to Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich.

day was bright and warm throughout the State. The only excitement was between the two warring Republican factions, the "Joe Lees" and "Anti-Joe Lees," where the fight was bitter.

The Democrats, however, elected the entire ticket.

Delaware Republican.

WILMINGTON, DEL., Nov. 9.—Late returns indicate that the Republicans have carried the State by 2,000 majority.

This means the election of a Republican Legislature, and the defeat of George Gray for the United States Senate.

California Republican.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 9.—Returns throughout the State are very meagre, but indicate the election of Gage, Republican, for Governor by a small plurality.

Phelan, Democrat, has been elected Mayor of San Francisco.

Silver Sweeps in Nebraska.

LINCOLN, Neb. Nov. 9.—The allied silver forces have carried everything they expected to carry, and while there have been no possible gains as far as can de difinitely learned, the indications are that any changes are in favor of the Fusion candidates.

Democratic Gain in Indiana.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 9.—Returns are very backward, but scattering reports indicate that the Democrats have carried the State by about 10,000. The Legislature is probably Democratic and eight, perhaps ten, Congressmen are elected on the ticket.

Colorado.

DENVER, Nov. 9—A snowstorm prevailed to-day throughout Colorado, and cut down the vote to a minimum.

C. S. Thomas (Dem.-Fus.) will have at least 35,000 plurality for Governor, and it may reach 50,000.

New Hampshire.

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 9.—Republicans claim the election of Rollins, their candidate for Governor, by a plurality of 10,000.

The Legislature will be Republican in both branches.

Missouri Solidly Democratic.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 9.—The Democratic State Committee estimates the plurality for the entire State ticket at from 35,000 to 40,000. Returns received show that the result will not differ materially from this.

Fusion Ahead in Minnesota.

ST. PAUL, Nov. 9.—Returns from the State are exceedingly scattering, but indications all point to the election of John Lind, fusion candidate for Governor, over Eustis, Republican.

PHILIP ARMOUR'S FORESIGHT.

A Brilliant Scheme By Which He Was Enabled to Tide Over a Financial Crisis.

It was keen foresight that brought Philip Armour back from Europe in 1893, months before an impending panic was dreamed of by other merchants. It is told of him that he called all his head men to New York and announced to them:—

"Gentlemen, there's going to be financial trouble soon."

"Why, Mr. Armour," they said, "you must be mistaken. Things were never better. You are too apprehensive."

"Oh, no," he said, "I'm not. There is going to be trouble;" and he gave as his reasons certain conditions which existed in nearly all countries, which none of those present had thought of. "Now," said he to the first of his many lieutenants, "how much will you need to run your department until next year?"

The head man named his need. The others were asked, each in turn, the same question, and, when all were through, he counted up, and, turning to the company, said:—

"Gentlemen, go back and borrow all you need in Chicago, on my credit. Use my name for all it will bring in the way of loans."

The lieutenants returned, and the name of Armour was strained to its utmost limit. When all had been borrowed, the financial flurry suddenly loomed up, but it did not worry the great packer. In his vaults were $8,000,000 in gold. All who had loaned him at interest hurried to his doors, fearing that he also was imperilled. They found him supplied with ready money, and able to compel them to wait until the stipulated time of payment, or to force them to abandon their claims of interest for their money, and so tide him over the unhappy period. It was a master stroke, and made the name of the great packer a power in the world of finance.—Success.

ENGLAND AND AMERICA.

Points of Municipal Government Which We Would Do Well to Learn.

We Americans are a fairly capable and adaptable race, says a writer in Lippincott's. Some few things we can teach the world; nay, we have done it already. But some other things we are not so good at. England could give us points on municipal government; our cities are scarcely so well managed as Manchester and Birmingham. England prepares her diplomatists by natural selection and systematic training; we trust the fitness of ours to luck. She has standards of public character and conduct in office; it is questionable whether we have any. She cultivates and defers to expert opinions on finance, political economy, and the like; we hold "professors and theorists" in some contempt, and consider one man's notion as good as nother's. When new dangers and duties confront us, our happy-go-lucky temper recalls the man in Dickens who "supposed" he could play the fiddle; he had never tried.

Now, Britain can, as a rule, rely on the quality needed in any of her public servants. It is not that Englishmen are naturally better or brighter than Americans; they and we are built on the same foundations; but they are trained for their work—they have to be. It is not so long since appointments with them came by patronage and "pulls," much as with us now, but they found it expedient to substitute a merit system. The system has had a good deal to do with England's prosperity and progress, with her recent strides toward widened empire, with her present isolated greatness.

QUAY IS VICTORIOUS.

Two Opposing Candidates if United Might Have Beaten Stone by 40,000 Votes.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 9.—Pennsylvania has stood by Quay. William A. Stone is elected governor by 65,000 plurality.

The combined votes for Swallow and Jenks will exceed Stone's vote by 90,000.

Had the anti-Quay people of the state united the senator could have been buried.

There are in round numbers one million votes cast in Pennsylvania. The machine is good for 400,000 of these and the other 600,000 have only to be divided between two candidates to enable the boss to win.

The general assembly will be Republican and yet some good judges express the opinion that enough fusionists and anti-Quay members will be elected to leave Quay short of a majority on a joint ballot. But the caucus and Stone's state patronage will change the conditions as soon as the state senate and house get to work.

The five Republican congressmen from Philadelphia—Henry H. Bingham, Robert Adams, Jr., William McAleer, James Rankin Young and Alfred C. Harmer—are elected.

With the closing of the polls ended one of the most remarkable and most bitterly fought campaigns in the political history of Pennsylvania. The irregularities in the handling of state funds brought about a revolt in the Republican ranks. Senators Matthew S. Quay and Boise Penrose were selected as the principals for personal attack. The former was arrested in Philadelphia upon a charge of using state funds from the People's Bank, which failed about a year ago.

Ex-Postmaster General Wanamaker, backed by the Business Men's Republican League, headed the revolt and has fought the senior senator with unrelentless bitterness. Senator Quay's colleague, Senator Penrose, replied to John Wanamaker's charges of corruption by accusing the ex-postmaster general of having a guilty knowledge of the illegal use of the state and city moneys deposited in the Keystone Bank, which failed in 1891. Mr. Wanamaker's reply to the charges was given in the newspapers and showed that he was the loser of $128,000 through the failure of the bank, while his brother dropped nearly $50,000.

Perhaps no political fight was ever waged where personalities were brought forward to such an extent. Not only were public characters attacked, but the private lives of the leaders of the parties exposed to the gaze of a curious public. To defeat Quay's object of securing his own return to the senate, John Wanamaker has travelled thousands of miles, made nearly one hundred addresses and spent in the neighborhood of one hundred thousand dollars.

To add to Senator Quay's political discomfiture another Richmond entered the field, and Rev. Dr. Swallow, the Prohibition candidate, loomed up in the distance as a dangerous factor. He accused the Quayites of burning the capitol at Harrisburg for the purpose of destroying records.

During the early part of the campaign he gave indications of beating both Stone and Jenks, but his boom weakened and for the past three weeks he lost ground steadily. During this time the straight Republicans rallied.

Merchants, farmers, mill owners and mine owners rounded up their employes on national issues, tariff and protection, and in a great measure repaired the breach. The degree of uncertainty surrounding the struggle served to increase the bitterness of the contest.

RESULT IN CONNECTICUT.

Governor Lounsbury Elected by a Reduced Majarity.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 9.—Connecticut has gone Republican. The plurality on the Republican state ticket is estimated at about 13,000. In the last preceding election in 1895 the Republican plurality was 45,000.

It has been in no sense a hurrah campaign, but rather one of quiet and persistent work. The Democrats left no stone unturned to whittle down the Republican plurality.

The principal fight has been in the congressional districts and town representatives.

As a result of the election the next assembly will be Republican. The Republicans also have a safe majority in the senate.

The reason for the cutting down of Sperry's plurality this year is due mainly to the popularity of his opponent, Mr. Webb, who is a graduate of Yale, an instructor in the Law school, and a young man of wide popularity throughout the city.

The returns show that the Republicans have elected their candidates in every congressional district.

So far as can be judged by the complexion of the representative votes, General Joseph R. Hawley, Republican, is likely to be returned to the United States senate, unless, when the question comes up for decision on joint ballot in the incoming assembly, in December, Samuel Fessenden, Republican of Stamford, should wrest the prize from him.

Army Orders.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 9.—Yesterday's army orders included these:

Acting Assistant Surgeon Frank I. Disbrow, United States army, when his services can be spared, is relieved from further duty in Porto Rico, and ordered to New York, whence he will report to the surgeon general by letter for annulment of his contract.

First Lieutenant William G. Massarue, Sixty-ninth New York volunteer infantry, has had his resignation accepted; also Colonel R. G. Smith, of the Fourth New Jersey volunteer infantry.

Adams to Go on a Long Cruise.

San Francisco, Nov. 9.—The United States training ship Adams will on or before December 1 start on a seven months' cruise. By that date she will have received her batteries at Mare Island.

She will proceed from here to Magdalena bay, where she will spend a month or more. She will then go to Honolulu and Oriental ports.

HAD NO PEACE MEETING

Yesterday's Session Postponed to Allow of a Translation.

STARTLING EARLY RUMORS

The French Foreign Office Issued a Note Saying That the Conferences Had Been Suspended. News as M. Delcasse Got It. The Fashoda Question.

Paris, Nov. 9.—The Spanish-American peace commissioners notified the minister of foreign affairs, M. Delcasse, that the joint session which was to have taken place yesterday would not be held, and that they would notify the minister when they had determined upon the date of another meeting.

Later a semi-official note was issued announcing that the peace commissions had informed the French minister of foreign affairs that their conferences were suspended.

Still later it was stated that the failure to hold a meeting of the commissions yesterday was due to the Americans asking for a postponement of the joint session until to-day to allow time for the translation of the reply of the United States to the latest Spanish propositions regarding the Philippine islands, which reply was receved here yesterday morning.

Paris, Nov. 9.—The Gaulois yesterday morning, referring to Monday's sitting of the peace commissioners, says it will in no way modify the Spanish-American situation, "as the American commissioners have orders to await further instructions from Washington."

The Gaulois says these instructions will depend upon the result of the elections, which, the paper thinks, will be favorable to the Republicans, adding:

"The American government will eventually recognize that pecuniary compensation is due to Spain for the evacuation of the Philippine islands, and the negotiations will continue and be brought to a satisfactory conclusion in a friendly spirit."

The Fashoda Question.

Paris, Nov. 9.—The chamber of deputies resumed its sessions yesterday with a crowded attendance, in anticipation of a debate on the Fashoda question.

But those present were disappointed by M. Brunot announcing that he withdrew his interpellation on the subject.

Talk With the Czar.

London, Nov. 9.—William T. Stead, writing to the Daily News from Sebastopol, after having had an interview with the Czar at Livadia, reiterates his conviction of the earnestness and sincerity of the czar's purpose in proposing disarmament.

Mr. Stead says it is impossible to repeat the conversation, but says:

"My opinion is summed up in a remark which I made to a princes of the court, who, meeting me as I was leaving, asked:

"'Well, what is your opinion?'

"I replied simply: 'I thank God for him. If he is spared to Russia that young man will go far.'"

Mr. Stead adds that he found the czar possessed of exceptional rapidity of perception, united with a remarkable memory and a very wide grasp of an immense range of facts.

A Post-office Robbed.

Marshfield, Ore., Nov. 9.—The Arago postoffice, which is located in the residence of W. H. Schroeder, postmaster, was robbed last night.

Schroeder was in the upper part of the house when two masked men entered, but a man named Peter Crow was in the office.

The robbers took Crow to the river bank and securely tied his feet and hands. They then returned to the house and forced Schroeder at the point of a revolver to open the safe.

The robbers secured $1,300 belonging to the Arago Creamery and $200 of the postal funds.

Dynamite to a Consul.

San Francisco, Nov. 9.—Two sticks of dynamite weighing nearly half a pound, have arrived through the mails on the Overland train.

The sticks were in separate packages and both were addressed to George E. Hall, Turkish consul, Parrot building, San Francisco.

The postmarks were indistinct, but it is thought the dynamite was mailed in Montana.

Several weeks ago Mr. Hall received a similar package, but it was opened safely.

Soldiers Back from Santiago.

Norfolk, Nov. 9.—The transport Port Victor, which came up from Santiago yesterday afternoon, landed about forty immunes from the Fifth and Sixth regiments, some civilians, and a few sailors, whose times had expired.

She then sailed for New York. The Victor is the vessel which started from Santiago with miserable accommodations for the soldiers, and was held up by General Wood, military governor of Santiago, who ordered her back, and the ship was refitted.

Race War in St. Louis.

St. Louis, Nov. 9.—A crowd of negroes, said to be under the guidance of a political party, invaded the Hebrew district, on Morgan street, last night, bombarded buildings with stones and injured Esther Hymos and two men.

When the bombardment began, families barricaded their doors. A large detachment of police was sent to the scene and dispersed the negroes.

A Michigan Judge Killed.

Detroit, Nov. 9.—A dispatch from Traverse City says that word was received there of the death of Judge Roscoe L. Corbett of the Thirteenth judicial district.

His death was caused by the accidental discharge of a gun held by his son.

Father and son were on a deer hunting expedition at Trout lake.

VOTE IN OTHER STATES

Returns Show a Safe Republican Majority in Next House.

LARGE REPUBLICAN GAINS

A Large Vote Polled in Nearly Every State. A Solid Republican Delegation Possible from Massachusetts. Republicans Carry Connecticut, New Hampshire, and Pennsylvania, Maryland Elects Five Republican Congressmen. With Carolina Democratic.

New York, Nov. 9.—Returns from various states indicate that the Republicans are holding their own in the congressional districts. This means a Republican majority in the next house.

Heavy Republican gains are reported from Ohio.

Governor Wolcott, Republican, has been re-elected in Massachusetts by a slightly reduced majority. The Republicans have twelve out of thirteen congressional di[illegible] a chance in the thirteenth.

The Republi[illegible] Connecticut by ab[illegible] Hampshire by ab[illegible]

Governor Pi[illegible] of his ticket in Michigan.

North Carolina is probably Democratic.

Solid Democratic congressional delegations have been elected from Alabama, Arkansas and Louisiana.

MASSACHUSETTS REPUBLICAN.

Ten Out of Twelve Congressmen Elected by the Republicans.

Boston, Nov. 9.—For Congress: In the First district George P. Lawrence, Democrat, is elected; in the Second district F. H. Gillett, Republican, is elected; in the Third district J. H. Walker, Republican, is elected; in the Fourth district G. W. Weymouth, Republican, is elected; in the Sixth district, W. H. Moody, Republican, is elected; in the Seventh district, E. W. Roberts, Republican, is elected; in the Eighth district S. W. McCall, Republican, is elected; in the Eleventh district C. F. Sprague, Republican, is elected; in the Twelfth district W. C. Lovering, Republican, is elected; in the Thirteenth district, W. S. Greene, Republican, is elected.

Governor Wolcott is elected by a reduced majority, while the Republicans have elected at least ten of the thirteen congressmen.

The legislature will be Republican in both branches by about the usual majority.

Ohio.

Columbus, O., Nov. 9.—The Republican state committee have a dispatch from George B. Cox of Cincinnati that Hamilton county gives a Republican plurality of 14,500. As the county gave Bushnell a plurality of 1,500 last year this is a Republican gain of 13,000 in one county.

The vote of both parties is less everywhere than last year, but early reports show that the Democratic losses greatly exceed those of the Republicans, so that the latter expect a large plurality on the state ticket and a gain of two congressmen.

No Contest in South Carolina.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Nov. 9.—The election was quiet and dull. Scarcely any interest was felt and the vote was light.

There was no contest for State offices, the Democrats having the only ticket in the field. The Republicans have candidates in all the Congressional districts and hope to make a contest before the Republican House for seating their candidates, whom they cannot elect at the polls.

Michigan Sticks to Pingree.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 9.—Estimates based upon scattering returns from the State would seem to indicate that Pingree has been re-elected Governor by a plurality of more than 40,000. The Legislature is probably Republican on a joint ballot.

Rhode Island.

Providence, Nov. 9.—The Republicans have carried both congressional districts in this state.

North Carolina.

Wilmington, Nov. 9.—New Hanover is believed to be Democratic by about 1,000, Richmond by 500 to 600, being a Democratic gain of 1,500.

Six Democratic congressmen are probably elected. Both houses of the legislature will be strongly Democratic.

Arkansas.

Little Rock, Nov. 9.—The Democrats have carried the First, Second, Third, Fourth and Sixth congressional districts.

Tennessee.

Memphis, Nov. 9.—E. W. Carmack, Democrat, is elected to Congress from the Tenth district.

Alabama.

Birmingham, Nov. 9.—Returns indicate the election of every Democratic congressman in the state.

The vote was exceedingly light in all districts except the Fourth and Seventh.

Louisiana.

New Orleans, Nov. 9.—Reports received assure the election of six Democratic congressmen from Louisiana.

Iowa.

Des Moines, Nov. 9.—David B. Henderson, Republican, is elected to Congress from the Third district.

Montana.

Helena, Nov. 9.—Slight snow fell early. Democrats are making strong claims, and the Republicans are confident of large gains, if not victory.

Georgia.

Atlanta, Nov. 9.—All the Democratic candidates for Congress are elected.

NEW YORK REPUBLICAN

Roosevelt Elected Governor by a Plurality of 40,000.

A FAIR DAY. A LARGE VOTE

The Rough Rider Gets About 120,000 Majority Outside of New York. Van Wyck's Lead in New York Not More Than 75,000. A Big Vote Throughout the State.

New York, Nov. 9.—This morning's dispatches show that Colonel Roosevelt has at least 120,000 majority over Van Wyck outside of Greater New York.

Van Wyck's lead in Greater New York is not over 80,000.

Roosevelt's majority in the whole state, therefore, is about 40,000.

The legislature is safely Republican in both houses, though the senate majority is narrow. Senator Edward Murphy, therefore, retires from his seat on March 4, and a sound money senator takes his place.

It is probable that Tammany has elected all of its congressmen.

Gains were made by the Republicans throughout the state except in Buffalo and Rochester. Chatauqua county doubled its usual majority of three thousand.

In Greater New York.

New York, Nov. 9.—The election in this city passed off very quietly and was noteworthy chiefly for the fact that a large part of those registered deposited their ballots early in the day.

When the polls closed at five o'clock it was thought that the vote was surprisingly close to the registration. In many districts more than one-third of the voters deposited their ballots before nine o'clock, and by ten o'clock it was estimated that about 40 per cent. of the vote had been cast.

Voters generally deposited a straight ticket, judging by the celerity with which the booths were entered and left, a great many taking less than a minute to mark the ballot and fold it ready for the ballot box.

Notwithstanding the predictions of stormy weather towards nightfall the day proved all that could be desired in that respect, which had much to do with the polling of a full vote.

The anticipated clash between the police and Superintendent McCullagh's deputies did not occur. There were many warrants out, and a large number of arrests were made, in which service both bodies of men were active. When the cases of alleged illegal registration were taken to the police courts it was found that the greater part were without foundation in fact, having originated in the clerical errors of registration officers and the poll clerks.

The police had little to do, the crowds being orderly. In the Eighth assembly district one of the Republican leaders was arrested, charged with disorderly conduct in challenging a vote, but the case was promptly dismissed by a police magistrate.

Few persons were seen on the streets in an intoxicated condition. About one-half of the crowds were children and youths, who gave little trouble.

Tammany Elects Judges.

New York, Nov. 9.—Despite the great fight put up by men of all parties, Tammany has elected the judiciary ticket by an indicated vote of not more than two per cent. less than that given to Van Wyck.

There was only a slight falling off in the vote given to Croker's men. Leventritt was well up with the others. Returns indicate that very few voters cut the judicial nominees. Daly leads his companions by a few hundreds only.

Van Wyck's Complimentary Vote.

New York, Nov. 9.—The vote in Kings county indicates that local pride had much to do with giving Candidate Van Wyck a vote in excess of that looked for by the Republican campaign managers.

The normal Democratic majority there is eight thousand, and this has been increased, it would seem, to seventeen thousand.

All the political sagacity of Hugh McLaughlin and his lieutenants and all the vast patronage at their command was used to pile up an unusual vote for the head of the ticket. The Shepardites were enlisted in the cause and added the strength of the Independents to the result.

In Rochester.

Rochester, N. Y., Nov. 9.—The superintendent of canals, G. W. Aldridge, lives in this city, and it looks as if there was an effort in trading which resulted badly for the Rough Rider. Revised returns from Rochester, complete, give Roosevelt 14,289, Van Wyck 13,744; majority for Roosevelt, 545.

In 1896 McKinley carried Rochester by 6,238. Monroe county will not give Roosevelt over 2,500.

Roosevelt Hears the News.

OYSTER BAY, Nov. 9.—After learning of his success last night Col. Roosevelt made this statement:

"I appreciate the honor very greatly, and I appreciate even more deeply the responsibility involved in the honor. I shall do all in my power to redeem every promise I have made, express or implied.

"I am a good Republican and I believe I can best serve the Republican party by doing everything I can to help it serve the State. I shall strive to administer the office of Governor in the interests of the whole people.

"It is by so doing that I can best show my appreciation of the support given me by the independents and Democrats, who have themselves put the welfare of the State first, declining to follow their leaders, who in this crisis have ranged themselves outright on the side of the forces of dishonesty, or else supported them in effect by standing aside from the real contest."

Troops to Be Mustered Out.

Philadelphia, Nov. 9.—By order of the war department, Battery A, Captain Barclay H. Warburton, and the Philadelphia City Troop, Captain John C. Groomic, will be mustered out this week, the batter yon November 10 and the troop on the 11th.

Result in the State.

With a plurality approximating 10,000 votes Hon. Foster Voorhees will be the next Governor of New Jersey. The elevation of Mr. Voorhees to the highest position in the gift of the people of the State by their suffrages, after having served with distinction through a constitutional provision, is of course particularly gratifying to Union county, whose favorite son in Republican circles he is. Mr. Voorhees is extremely popular in his own balliwick, and it was not surprising, the amount of strength he developed among those with whom his personal acquaintanceship extended.

Mr. Voorhees had not only the honor of carrying his own county, but also that of his opponent. The old saying of as goes Essex so goes the State proved quite the truth in this election.

The Democrats had prosecuted an aggressive campaign in Essex and seemingly had intrenched themselves strongly in this nominally Republican section. But their efforts were unavailing and the whole idea of Mr. Crane's selection for the Gubernatorial race—that of bringing Essex into the Democratic column, thus ensuring success—amounted to naught.

When the success of the Republicans in the Gubernatorial contest also goes the majority of the Legislature, which means the election of John Kean to the United States Senate to succeed Senator Smith. This is another great honor for Union county, and to the Republicans of this section is reason for great rejoicing.

A majority of the Congressmen elected are Republican, too, and in this way New Jersey approves of the administration of President McKinley.

The Result in Plainfield.

The Republicans in Plainfield did their part in making the victory of their party what it was. It was believed that the defeat of Mr. Ackerman for the Senatorial nomination would result in alienating a good many Republican votes from the support of the ticket, but such did not prove the case. On the contrary, Mr. Cross secured almost one hundred votes more than the head of the ticket in this city.

Another unexpected result was the good run made by Congressman Fowler. It was considered that he would run considerably behind his ticket, but when the votes were counted it was found that, with the exception of Assemblyman Murray, he received the largest plurality in Plainfield.

The pluralities of the successful candidates were as follows: Voorhees, 898; Fowler, 995; Cross, 987; Murray, 1009.

The Democrats in Plainfield polled a little over 200 more votes this year than last. That will give a slight increase in delegates in the local Democrats in the county conventions.

The County Democracy ticket—the outcome of a factional fight in Camden county—cost the Democrats hundreds of votes throughout the State for local candidates.

The Daily Press monster screen on North avenue last night was as popular as any of the candidates.

Union county has her share of honors this time, and Elizabeth is right on the top heap.

Plainfield Republicans did well—better than was expected in a good many places.

"Teddy" does seem to be a pretty good rough rider over Democratic warriors

Yes, nearly all the Democrats are up Salt River by this time.

A Theory of Suicide.

It has been a prevalent notion with many observers that more suicides occur in gloomy or wintry weather than in summer. The fact that the pressure of want on the poor is greater at this season, the facilities of obtaining work less, would seem at first to warrant this conclusion. Yet criminologists assert that crime increases and decreases with temperature. The scientific students of suicidal crime, too, are largely convinced that the gloomy or distressing conditions of nature have very little to do with the problem.

Signor Morselli, a professor of Bologna university, in his standard work on this subject, published many years since, drew conclusions from an immense mass of carefully verified statistics, which he illustrated in this vivid and concrete form. He asserts that of all persons and conditions most likely to comerge into suicide, he would select a German scholar in some secluded university cloister, preferably a student of metaphysics, in the season of June, the most delightful month of the year, and at high noon. The stolid creature never commits suicide. It is always the imaginative soul, where the tendency to melancholy and the consciousness of the immense chasm between longing and attainment are the most active. It is contended, too, that the ineffable splendor and wealth of summer tide reacts on certain temperaments with irresistible power to create a restless and morbid mood. De Quincey, in his "Confessions of an Opium Eater," has embodied in the most eloquent English prose the thrillingly sad impressions made on him by the gorgeous vision of a June sky flooded with golden sunshine.

Dr. Oscar Geck, a scientist of Strassburg, Germany, has recently published figures, confirmatory of the foregoing views of the conditions which favor suicide. In 100,000 cases which occurred in Prussia between 1876 and 1895 the greatest number was in June, the least in December. The figures increased and decreased between these months with the certainty of the tides. It is contended by most students that the ultimate causes of suicide are climatic and physiological. Heat produces nervous excitement. People eat more than the diminished needs of the organism require, and so a plethora of life is generated which must find an outlet, often in crime against others or against self. The fact that women more rarely commit suicide is explained on the theory that they are much more temperate eaters and develop far less of that uric acid in the blood which, poisoning the life fluid, fills the brain with perverse and gloomy fantasies. Whether the reasons, psychic and physiological, given are valid or not the main fact as to summer being the ripe and chosen season for the self murderer appears to be well justified in truth.

Professor Cummnock of the School of Oratory at the Northwestern university of Evanston, Ills., has instituted a new line of study in his course. This, it is alleged, will deal with the art of getting married and the avoidance of those clumsy and embarrassing mistakes which sometimes occur at such a trying moment. He desires that the future brides and grooms who graduate under his instruction shall be perfect adepts in the requisite ceremonial ease and dignity. This is all very nice, but it would be far more to the purpose if the instructor could teach the right things to do after marriage when the glamour has worn off. He would then be the greatest of philanthropists. As for instruction in matters which precede marriage, which are summed up in the art of lovemaking, nature is far more potent than artifice. Here no Professor Cummnock could possibly be needed.

Horace Walpole once wrote to Sir Horace Mann, in that famous correspondence which lights up the events of an epoch, "The world is a comedy to those that think, a tragedy to those who feel." To most thoughtful persons it is a drama which mingles tragedy and comedy, a play where man is both actor and spectator, a human comedy in the sense so powerfully suggested by Balzac in his great series of novels.

Dr. Martin, a surgeon at Camp Thomas, has averred before the war investigation committee that he was threatened with court martial by his superiors because he reported the pest conditions of Chickamauga at an early date. If this is true, there is need of punishment worse than any possible court martial verdict could bestow.

"Do you like to scorch?" "No, but Oi like to shmoke," retorts Policeman Michael Mulcahy, who furnishes no little amusement in "The Sleeping City," which will be seen at Music Hall Friday night. This is a realistic four act comedy drama, inteneely human and powerfully written, with a plot of thrilling interest, rich dramatic incident and original humor, necessitating a cast of more than oridinary ability which requirement is amply met in the company that Manager A. Q. Scammon has provided. Dullness holds no place in any scene in "The Sleeping City" and its parts are adjusted in an artistic manner. Among the wonderful realistic scenes are the Battery Park, Hudson River docks, a thrilling eecape from Sing Sing, and a burning asylum, which are all that a lover of stage realism could ask for. A vast deal of special scenery and mechanical effects is carried for the proper presentation of this great play. The characters represented are taken from the lives of the various types in New York. Incidental to the piece specialties of an agreeable order will be introduced. If you wish to see the best that ever happened you will see it in "The Sleeping City."

"Kit, the Arkansas Traveler," which will be seen at Music Hall next week, is a purely American drama. This season Mr. Chaufrau has surrounded himself with a clever coterie of select players. Edward Maynard will be seen as Manuel Bond who wrecks Kit's home and causes the thread of the story to be woven. Sara MacDonald assumes the character of Mary Redding and afterwards as Alice Redding, her daughter. The comedy is in the capable hands of Lawrence Barbour as "The Major," W. D. Stone as "The Judge," Andrew Collom as "Julius Caesar" and Leo Hardman as "Jerry Sleepers." The remaining cast includes Will B. Alexander, Walter Stuart, May Alexander, Baby Clifford and Rodney Wagoner. The special scenic effects include, "The Mississippi Levee." "Steamboat Explosion" and "Deck of the Medora."

OPENING DAY OF GOLF.

and from it there floated yesterday the club penant in the club colors, red and white. From the pole to a tree some distance away a strong wire was stretched, and suspended therefrom was a large American flag.

The course is 1 5-8 mile in length and is a very pretty one. Owing to the rolling ground it has been found unnecessary to build any hazards or bunkers, and everyone has found that the course is an ideal one. The club house is a model of beauty. It is provided with rooms for the women and men with every convenience, while a large reception room is found to be a comfortable place to stop and enjoy a rest.

The house committee consists of Mrs. W. L. Saunders, Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, Jr., Mrs. C. W. McCutchen, and the greens committee comprises C. W. McCutchen, H. D. Hibbard and W. J. Buttfield. These committees have received flattering comments for their earnest efforts. The membership of the club comprises the very best peopeople of the borough and many residents of this city. The opening took place a little late in the season, but there will be playing for at least a month yet. Next season this course will no doubt be one of the finest in the State, and will be patronized largely by golf enthusiasts. The grounds are located on Charles Hyde's property near the mountains and are easy of access by trolley, carriage or bicycle.

RUSSIAN FAMILY SERVANTS.

Ambition of a Land Owner to Have Everything Made at Home.

We were a family of eight, occasionally of ten or twelve, says Prince Kropotkin in the Atlantic; but fifty servants at Moscow, and half as many more in the country, were considered not one too many. Four coachmen to attend a dozen horses, three cooks for the masters and two more for the servants, a dozen men to wait upon us at dinner time,—one man, plate in hand, standing behind each person seated at the table,—and girls innumerable in the maid-servants' room,—but how could any one do with less than this?

Besides, the ambition of every landed proprietor was that everything required for his household should be made at home, by his "own" men.

"How nicely your piano is always tuned! I suppose Herr Schimmel must be your tuner?" one of the visitors would remark.

To be able to answer, "I have my own piano-tuner," was in those times the correct thing.

"What beautiful pastry!" the guests would exclaim, when a work of art, composed of ices and pastry, appeared toward the end of the dinner. "Confess, prince, that it comes from Tremble" (the fashionable pastrycook).

"It is my own confectioner, a pupil of Tremble, whom I have allowed to show what he can do," was the reply which elicited general admiration

To have embroideries, harnesses, furniture,—in fact everything,—made by one's "own" men was the ideal of the rich and respected landed proprietor.

HE AT LAST GOT OUT HIS COMMAND.

It Was Badly Mixed, but the Boatswain's Mate Was a Veteran.

While the Philadelphia was lying at the Brooklyn navy yard several years ago, a young ensign was called aft one morning and placed in command of the deck. It happened that only one item remained on the list of the morning's duties. It was not a very martial command to give, but as the time approached the officer (protem) of the deck waxed extremely nervous. He imagined that the eyes of all hands were upon him, and almost that the safety of the ship depended upon his giving the order in the proper voice. At three minutes of seven bells he again scanned the order book. It read: "Seven bells: Pipe sweepers." It was plain enough and the embarrassed young officer took his stand near the mainmast and called out in a very weak voice: "Bo's'n's mate!"

The man addressed sprang to his feet with finger touching cap. "Ay, ay, sir!" he replied. Then glancing hastily about, the scared officer muttered hoarsely, "Swipe sweepers!"

It was an entirely new order to the boatswain's mate. He touched his cap inquiringly. The ensign, more confused than ever, stammered desperately, "Peep swipers, my man." His words were overheard by several of his brother officers, and the laugh which followed proved the last straw. The ensign drew himself up, and with withering scorn exclaimed: "Sweep pipers, and be d——n quick about it, too!"—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

KEEPING COOL IN OTHER LANDS.

Glass Walled Palaces Sunk in the Lake During Hot Weather.

Of all delightful methods for keeping cool in hot weather the "sinking rooms" of Persia commend themselves most to one's conceptions of the luxurious and delightful. When not required, these gilded, glass walled palaces float gracefully on the blue waters of Lake Niris, the most lovely of Persian lakes. When the heat ceases to be comfortable their happy owners enter the floating palaces, which are drawn by heavy weights down into the transparent depths of the lake, and with an ample supply of air from above, luxurious surroundings, iced drinks and fan waving houris, the Persian millionaire who cannot enjoy 100 degrees in the shade must be difficult to please.

The Prince of Agra has a similar palace moored in one of the reaches of the Jumna. Its furniture and appointments are superb; the very chairs are made of gold and incrusted with jewels, and the curtains are of the most exquisite silks. On sultry days the Prince and his suite enter their river palace, which is at once unmoored and floats gently on the bosom of the Jumna at the will of the tide, catching every breeze that blows and gliding to the soothing music of harps played by fair hands. Who would not be the Prince of Agra?

In India the well to do Englishmen and natives fly from the plains at the first blast of heat and take refuge in the hills, where the cool breezes blowing from the snow capped mountains drive away all thought of the simmering plains below.—New York Herald.

He Thought the Dry Ones Best.

Admiral Farragut used to relate that a pretty girl on a Mississippi steamer was anxiously sought in marriage by five of the passengers. Viewing them all with favor, the girl applied to the captain of the boat for advice in making her selection. He suggested that she leap overboard, after he had made arrangements that would make injury to her impossible. She did as he said. Four of the suitors promptly were in after her and united in bringing her safely back to the deck.

"What shall I do now?" she perplexedly inquired of the captain.

"I don't rightly know, miss," he answered, "but it seems to me I'd take the dry one."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

TRAFFIC IN KANGAROO HIDES.

Half a Million Australian Pelts Used In America Last Year.

"Not many people have any idea how extensively kangaroo hides are utilized in this country," said a leading wholesale leather dealer. "Last year there were over 400,000 such skins received in New York and about 80 per cent of these were tanned in one large establishment in Newark, N. J. The hides all come from Australia and New Zealand, where the kangaroos are killed, some 350 miles back from the coast, and shipped from Melbourne, Sydney and Newcastle, Australia, and from Masterson, in New Zealand.

"Prior to 1859 kangaroos were killed and eaten in Australia, and their hides were cut up and made mostly into shoestrings and belts. But an Englishman named Brown in that year made some experiments, which resulted in his discovering the remarkably tough character of the leather, and he brought several hundred hides to America as a speculation. He tried hard to sell the skins to various tanners, but they were shy of the novelty, and he at last had to sell them at a sacrifice to a New York bookbinder. The latter merchant made triangular corner pieces for ledgers and commercial books out of the skins, and thus ascertained the good qualities of the leather. One of these books got into the hands of the proprietor of a large Newark tannery, and his attention was at once attracted by the peculiar appearance of the leather binding. He made some experiments with the skin and found that it possessed a remarkable tenaciousness and compactness of grain, which prevented it from absorbing water, while the acids in blacking met with an almost impervious substance. Several hundred skins were soon after tanned and put upon the market, and so large was the demand for the new leather that it was hard work for years to get a sufficient quantity of hides to supply the trade. In 1880 the Newark tanner sent agents to Australia and made arrangements to ship such numbers of skins as would satisfy the demand for the article here.

"The characteristic climate of Australia and the pugnacity of the kangaroo have, however, always made the hunting of the hides dangerous, and these difficulties continue to limit the supply and keep up the price of the animals' skins. Winter starts in May and ends in December in that country. The rest of the year the heat is intense, the thermometer frequently reaching 140 degrees. Eight men hunt together for kangaroos. They are called a 'set.' When brought to bay the kangaroo jumps like a flash for a hunter's chest and tries to crush it in with his fore feet. To prevent this each man wears across his chest a piece of matting two or three inches thick. Armed with a spear, with a club attachment at the other end, they ride upon swift horses into a herd. With the agility and equipoise of circus riders they stand erect upon their horses and use their spears and clubs. The kangaroo is able to jump clear over a horse.

"As soon as the animal is killed it is skinned and the hide is stretched on the ground and pegged down securely to prevent shrinkage. The flesh furnishes meat for the camp. Each man places his private mark upon his booty, and when they have 100 skins they return to civilization. There are twenty varieties of kangaroos, among them the blue, red, wallaby, black, gray and forester, the latter furnishing the best leather, as it lives mainly in wooded sections. When the shipping ports are reached the hunters dispose of the skins by auction to the highest bidder and receive about 80 cents a pound for them. Kangaroo hunters make large profits. One man is known to have cleared $6,000, free of living expenses, last year."—Washington Star.

A TALE OF GOLD.

Dawson City Miners Are Remarkable For Their Honesty.

Much has been written of the wonders of the Klondike goldfields, a correspondent writes, but practically nothing has been said of the almost phenomenal honesty of the miners. What amazed me most during my first few days in Dawson City was the reckless way in which miners left thousands of pounds' worth of gold exposed in empty cabins and tents, as if inviting the first comer to help himself. There were millions lying about without anyone looking after them, and so far as one could see, they belonged to nobody.

I explored many of these cabins during their owners' absence, and in the very first cabin I entered I saw a dirty, tattered blanket carelessly thrown over two mackerel kits. I lifted the blanket and found that the kits were almost full to the brim with gold dust and nuggets to the value of at least £5,000. The miner was out prospecting on Bear Creek, and had no more anxiety about his pile than if it were safely housed in the Bank of England.

It was the same in nearly every cabin I entered. Gold greeted me everywhere. There were shelves full of oil-cans, meat-tins, fruit-jars; and buckskin and walrus bags packed with the precious metal, all as unprotected as if they were full of potatoes.

One Norwegian miner on Hunker Creek had made a strong-box of a pair of canvas overalls, the legs of which he had sewn up. I lifted the uncanny "safe" and found that it weighed a good 100lb., every ounce of which was virgin gold; and the least value I could place on those dirty overalls was £5,000.

There were five gallon oil-cans full of gold carelessly pushed under the miners' bunks, every one of which held a fortune, for which most men strove a lifetime.

Out on Eldorado Creek there is a settlement of miners who have no fewer than fourteen rich claims, and are washing out gold at the rate of many thousands of pounds a week. Their strong room is a common galvanized washing-tub, and when I was there it was three-quarters full of gold, and much too heavy for two strong men to lift. Had I been inclined I might have pinched thousands of pounds' worth. Gold abounded on every side which seemed to belong to nobody.

Even if a miner leaves his cabin for a week or more, he simply leaves a notice to this effect attached to the walls. He never thinks of putting a guard over his pile.

Of course there have been attempts at theft, but the perpetrators have been invariably detected. In one recent case the thief managed to carry his booty a distance of ten miles, when cold and exhaustion compelled him to take shelter at the cabin of one of the miners. His host's suspicion was aroused by the man's conduct and by the bags of gold, for which he could not satisfactorily account.

The miner detained his guest, communicated with some of his fellows; and fifteen of them assembled in the hut and sat in judgment on the thief. He was found guilty, and half-a-dozen bullets put a sudden end to his career.

Such cases, however, are very rare: and it speaks volumes for the honesty of the 40,000 men who are now gathered in Dawson City that they can see hundreds of thousands of pounds' worth of gold lying about, without even thinking of laying hands on it.

To my mind by far the luckiest man in the Klondike is a man you have probably never heard of—Halsey Putnam. Before coming to the Klondike, Halsey had tried and failed in almost every calling a man can follow, from blacksmith to laborer in the Brooklyn parks, and from printer to barman. When he reached Dawson he had not the necessary 50 cents for a shave; and ½lb. of meat at 70 cents a pound would have put him in the "Bankruptcy Court."

Within a few months Halsey had mined and sold £14,000 worth of gold; and to-day, after little more than a year at his last lucky venture, he could write you a cheque for £50,000, and yet retire on a fortune.

NURSERY OF THE SEA

DISCOVERY OF THE WINTER HABITAT OF SALT WATER FISHES.

In the Deepest Hollows of the Ocean They Congregate During January and February—Thousands of Pounds Recently Caught.

The most important discovery in coast fishing so far has been made by the fishermen off shore of Beaufort N. C., and there is reason to believe that there will be far-reaching results obtained in the future through improved methods of deep-sea seining. In the two winter months of January and February, all of our littoral species of fish disappear almost entirely from the waters off our coast, and fishermen are compelled to fold up their seines, and wait until spring for the reappearance of their favorite game.

Scientists have concluded that the fishes go to some unknown region or depths of the ocean to breed during these two cold months, and upon their return in the spring they are accompanied by innumerable hosts of young fry. The discovery off shore at Beaufort is nothing less than that of a winter nursery of our littoral species of fish. From six to eight fathoms below the surface of the water the fish have been found to be literally swarming in countless numbers, and hooks and seines let down to that depths invariably bring up rich hauls. No amount of coaxing and temptation can induce the fish to leave their warm winter habitat far below the surface and the fishermen have to adopt new methods of catching them.

The discovery is important in modifying our prevailing methods of catching marketable food fish, and in cheapening the supply in winter and in furnishing the needy workers with employment at an off season when poverty and hardship often press most severely upon them.

The fish are found off Beaufort and Morehead City in deep holes or corrugations. In the summer time they come ashore further and swarm around the oyster beds and the bays and inlets. A great variety of food fish is found in this winter nursery, such as the red drum, gray trout or weak fish, spotted sea trout, bluefish, croakers and many others.

A new sort of seine has been used at Beaufort. It is designed just for this deep-water fishing. It closes up in the shape of a long, narrow eel pot with a heavy weight at the lower end. It dangles over the side of the fishing smack by several ropes, which are manipulated either by the men or a tackle. When the lead reaches the bottom the seine is allowed to rest for some time, while the men spread it open. This is done by means of ropes. Four rowboats leave the smack and each one pulls a rope attached to a corner of the seine. Thus it is spread out on the bottom of the sea directly under the flocks of sea fish. Then it is gradually hauled up. A deep pocket in the bottom of the seine is quickly filled with so many fish that they threaten to break through the meshes by their very weight. In each haul the fishermen bring up at least 500 pounds of fish.

The number of fish seem inexhaustible. When one hiding place is pretty well cleaned out the fishermen hunt around for another. The bottom of the sea off the coast is undulating, forming deep hollows or holes in which the sea fish hide. They are never found on the ridges of the bottom, but always in the hollows. Consequently the fishermen carry sounding leads with them in search of a new hiding place or winter nursery. When the water is six to eight fathoms deep they drop the net, and leave it there for a short time before hauling it up. If they strike it rich, they haul it up and let it down until their boat is loaded.

The fact being established that the fish merely sink to a good depth off the coast in winter instead of migrating to some tropical sea, the question of discovering the hiding place of other species becomes interesting. It is thought that the same sort of fishing may be applied to the codfish off the Newfoundland banks, and to the red snappers off the Florida coast. If the winter habitat of these fish is not too deep, they may be caught right through cold weather with properly constructed seines. It is believed now that countless millions of shad, salmon, herring, striped bass and other anadromous fish are hidden away in the fields of the ocean a short distance off our coast, and that only a small per cent. of them enter our rivers to spawn in a given season. In fact, if one-hundredth of all that are in the ocean should make a simultaneous movement in this direction they would completely choke up every river in the country. Hence, it is quite important that their winter hiding place should be discovered. In the nets off Beaufort an occasional striped bass, bluefish, salmon, herring and shad have been caught, demonstrating that they are aground somewhere in the deep corrugations of the ocean's bottom. The man who discovers their winter hiding place will open a new industry of tremendous importance to the country.—Cor. St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

TRICKY TRICKS OF THE RAVEN.

As Strategists, These Birds are Something Remarkable

Many stories are told of the cleverness of the raven, a bird which really seems to have reasoning powers. One of these stories tells how a raven, by a skillful stratagem, got a young hare for his dinner. It had pounced upon the little animal, but the mother hare drove it away.

Then the raven slowly retreated, encouraging the mother to follow him, and even pretending that he was afraid of her. In this fashion he led her to a considerable distance from her young one, and then, suddenly, before the hare had time to realize the meaning of the trick, he rose in the air, flew swiftly back, caught the young hare in his beak and bore it away.

A similar plan was adopted by some ravens that wished to steal food from a dog. They teased him till he grew so angry that he chased them from the spot, but the artful birds turned sharply round, easily reached the dish before him, and carried off the choicer bits in triumph.

As to the raven's power of speech, the following story—which is given on the authority of Capt. Brown, who vouches for its truth—will show how aptly it can talk. A gentleman, while traveling through a wood in the south of England, was startled by hearing a shout of "Fair play, gentlemen; fair play!" uttered in loud tones. The cry being presently repeated, the traveler thought it must proceed from some one in distress, and at once began to search for him. He soon discovered two ravens fiercely attacking a third. He was so struck with the appeal of the oppressed bird that he promptly rescued him.

It turned out that the victim was a tame raven belonging to a house in the neighborhood, and the cry that it had used so opportunely was one of many that it had been taught to utter.—Philadelphia Times.

Queen Isabella Ascended the Throne When Only Three Years Old.

Spain is always the land of the Infante. To-day it is the kingdom of an infant, just as it was sixty-five years ago, when the king's grandmother, Isabella II., ascended the throne at the age of three, assuming the actual government when she was thirteen. If our own Prince Alfred had not declined the crown of Greece in favor of the Dane, he would have been a king at nineteen, and carried on the traditions of the many child-monarchs of Great Britain, including his mother, when she was wakened on that historic night in June at Kensington palace to hear that her uncle, William IV., was dead, and that she reigned in his stead. Henry III. had become King of England at the age of ten; Edward III at the age of fifteen, Richard II at the age of eleven; Henry VI. at the age of eight; Edward IV. when he was twenty, while his son, Edward V., became king at the age of thirteen, which again proved an unlucky number, for he was murdered in the Tower with his only brother, the Duke of York, after he had reigned less than twelve weeks. Henry VIII. was only eighteen when he came to be king; his son, Edward VI., was just ten and was dead before he was fifteen, while his would-be successor, the hapless Lady Jane Grey, was proclaimed queen before she was eighteen, and lost her pretty head before she was nineteen.

Pets Travel In Baskets.

Not to be debarred from carrying Fido on railroads where dogs are not allowed, except in baggage cars, the up-to-date woman has adopted an ingenious device. Some of the large stores have been displaying unique wicker baskets of a pattern and finish which immediately attract the attention of the shopper. These baskets are shaped like an ordinary market basket, though finished a little more artistically, and are opened at one end for ventilation, but barred by rattan rails to prevent Fido from escaping. Madam can carry her pet on board a train and, provided the dog or tabby makes no noise, she is free from detection.

Other shops are showing bags for cats, parrots, monkeys and dogs. These bags come in all sizes, are oilcloth lined, and shield the pet from the conductor's objecting eyes. Each end of the satchel has heavy wire gratings, which admit the air, and may be instantly covered by canvas screens in case a railroad official comes uncomfortably near.—Philadelphia Press.

Labouchere's Clever Wooing.

Mr. Labouchere, father of the first Lord Taunton, was employed as a young man in the great mercantile house of Hope. He applied to Sir Francis Baring for leave to pay his addresses to his daughter. Sir Francis demurred, as Labouchere, though a rising young man, had no fortune.

"But if Hope takes me into partnership?" said Labouchere.

"Oh, yes, if Hope takes you into partnership."

Labouchere then went to Hope and intimated his wish for this arrangement. Hope in his turn demurred.

"But if I marry Baring's daughter?"

"Oh, if you marry Baring's daughter—"

So Labouchere married Baring's daughter and became a partner in Hope's.—New York Mail and Express.

"That musical young man's voice is remarkable for its volume, isn't it?" remarked Mrs. Blykens.

"Volume," echoed her husband. "When he gets to telling you what he knows it's a whole library."—Washington Star.

Berlin. Einen Urnenhain zu schaffen, beabsichtigt der hiesige Verein für Feuerbestattung. Die Verwaltung des städtischen Friedhofs in Friedrichsfelde soll ersucht werden, einen Theil des Friedhofes für die ober- und unterirdische Beisetzung von Aschenresten zu reserviren. Dieser Theil soll durch ein Gitter abgegrenzt und in besonderer Weise mit Cypressen, Taxus und ähnlichen Gewächsen bepflanzt werden. —Für seine jüngsten Söhne läßt der Kaiser auf dem sogenannten Pflasterterrain in der Nähe der Ringbahnstation Grunewald ein Schloß erbauen, weil die Wasserverhältnisse dort gesunder sind, als im Marmorpalais bei Potsdam.—Die 58 Jahre alte Frau eines Tischlers Schulze dahier, welche mit ihrem Manne beständig in Streit lebte, hat sich, nach einem heftigen Auftritt mit ihrem Gatten, gemeinsam mit ihrem Schooßhündchen vergiftet.—Seine Zahlungen eingestellt hat einer der größten hiesigen Rinder-Engrosschlächter, Albert Meye. Derselbe betrieb sein Geschäft seit mehr als 20 Jahren und galt stets als reicher Mann. Er hat früher wöchentlich regelmäßig 200 bis 300 Rinder geschlachtet, in der letzten Zeit immer noch 100 bis 150. Die Schulden belaufen sich auf 50,000 Mark, von denen Meye seinen Gläubigern 40 Prozent angeboten hat.

Gifhorn. Der Stadtförster Weidna stieß im Forstort Barmbruch auf zwei Wilddiebe. Als sich diese mit einem soeben geschossenen Rehbock entfernen wollten, rief sie der Förster an. Die Wilderer drehten sich um, legten auf den Förster an und schossen nach ihm. Die Kugeln gingen fehl. Nun schoß der Förster bei der Verfolgung auf die fliehenden Männer und traf einen derselben im Rücken; dieser stürzte nieder, erhob sich aber wieder und ist auch trotz Verfolgung mit seinem Komplizen unerkannt entkommen.

Papenburg. In Folge des ungünstigen Ausfalles der Honigernte in Deutschland und der billigen Preise in Holland treffen jetzt täglich ganze Wagenladungen mit Honig beziehungsweise mit lebenden Völkern auf den Stationen Salzbergen, Meppen und Lingen ein. Die Stöcke und Körbe werden mit lebenden Völkern hier eingeführt, die sofort nach dem Passiren der Grenze abgeschwefelt werden. Eine Firma in Meppen bezog an einem Tage über 1500 Körbe aus Holland. Der diesjährige Preis für Honig, wie er eben den Körben entnommen wird, stellt sich auf 48 Mark pro 50 Kilogramm.

Provinz Hessen-Nassau.

Marburg. Der Bau einer Eisenbahn von hier durch den Ebsdorfer Grund nach Londorf ist genehmigt worden. Die Vorarbeiten werden demnächst in Angriff genommen. Mit der neuen Bahn wird eine der Bodenindustrie sehr günstige Strecke erschlossen und verhütet, daß Gießen der Stadt Marburg den Verkehr mehr und mehr entreißt.

Wiesbaden. Dieser Tage fiel beim Arbeiten an der Telephonleitung ein Draht auf die Leitung der elektrischen Straßenbahn herab, so daß an der Berührungsstelle die Flammen emporschlugen. Die Feuerwehr mußte requirirt werden, um die Drähte zu zerschneiden. Auf dem Telephonamt fielen in Folge der Berührung fast sämmtliche 700 Klappen herab.

Der Stadtverordnete Brinck ist wegen Wuchers bestraft und sollte nach dem Antrage eines Mitgliedes aus dem Kollegium ausgeschlossen werden. Nach lebhafter Verhandlung, in welcher betont wurde, daß das Kollegium keine Disziplinargewalt über die Mitglieder habe, wurde festgestellt, daß Brinck sein Mandat nicht niederlegen will. Ein Antrag, ihn zur Niederlegung aufzufordern, wurde als zwecklos zurückgezogen.

Provinz Posen.

Posen. Der Reichstagsabgeordnete für den Wahlkreis Pleschen-Jarotschin-Wreschau, Rechtsanwalt Dziembowski (Pole) legte sein Mandat in Folge moralischen Druckes seitens der polnischen Volkspartei nieder, die die Rechtmäßigkeit seiner Aufstellung bemängelte. IN A JOKE FACTORY.

AN HOUR SPENT WITH MARSHALL P. WILDER.

How Fun Is Prepared For the Laughter-Loving Public. A Few of the Noted Humorist's Latest Jokes. The Repair Department.

The public is pretty well acquainted with Marshall P. Wilder as a humorist and entertainer; but people who have heard him run wild in an evening of miscellaneous funmaking are hardly prepared to be told that he is one of the most methodical and systematic of mortals.

The late William Davidge, the actor, was one of the most systematic men that ever lived. He was constantly keeping books with himself. If he invested five cents in carfare, bought a newspaper, had a shave, shampoo, or haircut, it all went down in his books. When he died it was disclosed that he had kept an itemized account of every penny earned and expended, and a record of every mile traveled during the twenty-five years and more that he was on the stage, up to the very day of his death on board a railroad train, en route to play in San Francisco. By examining this wonderful record one could see exactly where Davidge was on any given day during his long professional career, and how much it cost him.

Mr. Wilder's system does not include the petty outlays of everyday life, but he has a way of systematizing his business that is hardly less complete than that of Davidge. All the good jokes, stories, and anecdotes, for example, he labels and lays away, as a bugologist would a strange new specimen of beetle or butterfly. It can be said of Wilder that he can put his hand on any particular joke or story at any hour of the night without striking a match. He has jokes and jokelets, stories and anecdotes, labeled, indexed and cross-indexed, and can turn instantly to any given dog or cat story of any stated breed or color.

The little joker's business system includes an index of every person of prominence he meets, and turning to his books he can tell at a glance just how much he is indebted to any particular individual for contributions to his jund of jokes.

"Harrison—Harrison—Harrison," reiterated Wilder as he ran his twinkling eyes down the long list of H's; "it seems to me I have heard of that name somewhere. Ah, here it is. 'Harrison, Benjamin. President of the United States.' I was almost sure I had heard it somewhere."

Mr. Wilder grew reminiscent for a moment.

"First time I met Benjamin Harrison was in the White House. I carried a letter from his son. I didn't want an office, had no claim to an office, and of course I was a little out of my atmosphere. 'How do you do, Mr. President?' 'How do you do, Mr. Wilder?' That was all. Not a joke or a funny story. Not a word about the weather. Not a word about the crops. I waited long enough for the President to limber up; he didn't limber. I withdrew with great dignity, pausing only long enough in the waitingroom to request Private Secretary Halford to kick me with great severity."

Wilder had a later meeting with President Harrison, some of the particulars of which are best told by another. It occurred when W. J. Arkell entertained President Harrison at Mt. McGregor. Mr. Wilder was one of the guests. The party was on its way down to the village. "Mr. President," said the little humorist, with mock gravity, "I regret the fact exceedingly, but I feel sure there will be a large concourse of people down here to greet me. I understand they have a brass band and I fear they will raise a great hullabaloo. I sincerely trust the cheering and noise generally will not disturb your Excellency."

When the party reached the foot of the mountain there were carriages to receive them, and the inevitable crowd to cheer the President. The band, of course, struck up "Hail to the Chief." By some misunderstanding on the part of the cabby who drove Wilder—or was it by Wilder's own hocus pocus?—the crowd fell apart for him. Hats were swung, handkerchiefs fluttered, and the air was split with cheers. Wilder's quick wit enabled him to seize the situation by the horns. Hat in hand, he bowed to the right and left, and, as they say on the stage, "took the whole scene." The ovation was all his own.

Wilder's joke foundry is an interesting place. The walls of his library in The Alpine, on Broadway, are literally papered with photographs of celebrated men and women, most of which bear the autographs of the originals, with some pleasant greeting to the "prince of entertainers," as Mr. Cleveland dubbed him—"the entertainer of Princes"—as he dubbed himself.

"How are jokes made?"

"Jokes are like poets," said Wilder, "they are born, not made. They develop. They evolute. There is a grub and then there is a butterfly. Julius Caesar compiled a book of puns, but he never made a joke, even though he was the victim of a few. Every great event has its jokes. The greater the event, no matter how serious, the more jokes. They drop around and spring up everywhere. The late war with Spain gave birth to more jokes than any event since the flood.

"Here are a few:

"'The Madrid Government is trying hard to keep the Bible out of Spain.'

"'Why?'

"'So that the Spanish people will not know the exact strength of Sampson.'

"That's bad, of course; but it's a war joke, and we had to accept it.

"'Why is Courtlandt street, in New York, like Cuba?'

"'Because it's between Liberty and Dey.'

"Nothing could be worse than that, but it went. There are about a lion things like that, and the spirit of patriotism kept them afloat. Camara's fleet couldn't sink one of them There are others not so bad:

"'Did you curry the horse this morning, John?'

"'Yes, s'r.'

"'Did you comb out his tail?'

"'Yes, sir.'

"'Did you remember the Maine?'

"Here's another on the same lay:

"'Do you remember the great blizzard in New York?'

"'Oh, yes.'

"'Forget it, and remember the Maine.'

"If we have another war," said Wilder, "I intend to propose a war tax on every joke, and make it pay its own way."

The humorist explained the repair department of his factory.

"Sometimes a joke is a little lame. Maybe it has the heaves, mumps, bumps, thumps, grumps; or probably the blind staggers. I can generally cooper it up so that it will pass muster.

"Very often one idea serves for a good many jokes. General Sherman once wrote me a seven-page letter about jokes and other solemn things. It was by way of acknowledging a copy of my book, 'People I Have Smiled With.' In that letter he told the story of the Irishman who was too much given to strong drink. 'You must sign the pledge and stop drinking,' said his priest, 'or you will be so saturated with the fumes of liquor that sometime when you try to blow out a candle your breath will take fire and you will burn up.'

"'Then give me the pledge,' said Pat, and he wrote: 'I hereby solemnly promise never to blow out a candle again.'

"That is General Sherman's story," continued Mr. Wilder, "and here is the way I fixed it so as to make it fit a particular occasion:

"'You must stop drinking, Pat, or you'll soon be totally blind.'

"'Well,' said Pat, 'I guess I've seen about everything.'

"Here is one of the latest baseballisms:

"'A foul, a foal,' howled a crank from the grand stand.

"'Nonsense,' said his wife, 'I see no feathers.'

"'Of course not. This is a picked nine.'

"Speaking of Mr. Depew's latest dog story reminds me of another.

"'Rory O'More, there,' said an Irishman, pointing to his canine asleep in the corner. 'Rory O'More is the most intelligent beast I ever saw. That dog understands every blessed word I say to him. Begorra, I'm studying German just to see if I can throw him off.'

"Ever hear the story of the great statesman who resembled Daniel Webster? A politician settled himself in the chair of an old colored barber who had shaved the Massachusetts statesman and orator.

"'They tell me, Uncle, that I resemble Daniel Webster. What do you think of it?'

"'Well, boss, I tink myself dat you done resember my ole fren'.'

"'Just in what particular do you see a resemblance between me and the great statesman?'

"'Well, I don't 'zactly see de resembrance, boss; hit's mostly in yo' bref.'"

ROBERT W. CRISWELL.

Tackle Making.

Save shooting, no sport, perhaps, has connected with it more steady-going business in the way of appliances than has angling, and it will rather surprise many to know that there are hundreds of patents—some of them bringing in thousands a year—dealing with fishing appliances.

The trade, too, is notable for the fact that, save in the making of rods and hooks in the rough, women are the chief workers, almost the whole of the dainty flies and well-secured hooks being tied by girls and women, some of whom can fabricate hundreds of trout-flies in a day. At least four-fifths of the fishing tackle-making employees are women, many of whom possibly never saw a man fishing in their lives.

Another notable fact in connection with the trade is that many of the manufacturing firms have been established for from fifty to one hundred years. England and America — but chiefly the former—supply the fishing tackle of the whole world, and all the principal manufacturers have special stocks for India, the Australian colonies, and the most remote waters of the globe.

As to patents, one man has made a fortune out of an artificial spinning bait, and another who invented so apparently simple an appliance as a novel kind of rod ring for the line to run through sold the patent for $50,000.

Where Noah Kept His Bees.

Dr. James K. Hosmer, while recently visiting Boston, had occasion to visit the new public library. As he went up the steps he met Edward Everett Hale, who asked the Doctor his errand.

"To consult the archives," was the reply.

"By the way, Hosmer," said Dr. Hale, "do you know where Noah kept his bees?"

"No," answered Hosmer.

"In the ark hives," said the venerable preacher, as he passed out of earshot.—Ladies' Home Journal.

He Knew What He Wanted.

"Do you want my daughter for her money or for herself?" demanded the old gentleman.

"It's this way," stammered the young man, as he tripped backwards over the edge of the rug. "I want her for myself and I want her money for herself, and I want both of them for ourselves, and you certainly must understand."

A GIFTED POETESS.

PORTO RICO'S "NIGHTINGALE OF THE HILLS."

An Interesting Sketch of the Career of Lola Rodriquez de Tio, Whose Songs Have Added Fuel to the Freedom Forging Flames.

Lola Rodriguez de Tio is a woman with three reputations, each of them excellent and extraordinary. She ranks high among the world's conchologists, as a poetess she is read with keen emotion and delight wherever the Spanish language is understood, and as a public speaker she is one of the leaders of Porto Rican thought. An exile from her native island of Porto Rico, and a refugee from Cuba, whence she fled from the wrath of Weyler with her husband, also an exile, some time before the butcher was recalled, she is living now in New York city, with Signor Tio and their daughter, a graduate in philosophy of the University of Havana. The Tio home is a charming center of the intellectual life of the Porto Rican colony and affords an admirable illustration of the hospitality for which Porto Rico is so famous. There the poetess holds court, and with her husband, formerly the editor of those outspoken papers, La Razon and La Patria, debates before her friends upon the future of the island they love so fondly.

Signora Tio, "the nightingale of the hills," as the Porto Ricans call her, was born in the Villa de las Lomas, San Yerman, in September, 1851. Her grandmother had been a writer of distinction and an admirable linguist. Her father was a doctor of laws, a scholar and an eloquent advocate with practice extending over the whole island. His example was her inheritance. She learned unconsciously from him to speak directly and agreeably and to write gracefully. He was an autonomist, though at that time the government of Porto Rico forbade the use of that word by any political party on the island, saying it was only a synonym for Separatist. The daughter took kindly to her father's ideas, and when hardly in her 'teens was an out and out Separatist. She wrote many popular songs and ballads full of the spirit of freedom. These had a wide circulation and were the lullabys of many a Porto Rican household.

Dr. Nalverde, a political exile from San Domingo, and a friend of Signor Rodriguez, interested himself in the girl's education, being attracted by her gift of poesy, and instructed her in the Spanish classical style. She was an apt scholar and soon composed verse that attracted attention throughout the Spanish West Indies and even in Spain. In 1873, the year that saw the end of slavery in Porto Rico, Lola Rodriguez, then just 22 year old, made an address at the graduation exercises of the college in Mayaguez. She was the first woman in the island to speak publicly before an audience. It was a time of much political excitement. Porto Ricans were eager for reform. They wished Spain to separate the military and civil departments of the government. They were willing, they said, to have a captain general, but let him confine himself to military affairs exclusively and let another man hold the chief civil office. They wished also to elect their own provincial governors, instead of having them sent over by Spain, who appointed them not because of their fitness, but because she wished them out of the way. These worthy Spanish appointees shed tears on leaving their beloved Spain, but swore upon their honor to return again as soon as they had stolen enough to pay their debts. Another thing the native Porto Ricans wished was freedom of the press. The captain general's regulations demanded that at least four hours before any paper was issued the proof sheets should be sent to the censor for approval. His blue pencil was a judgment against which there was no appeal.

The signorita spoke eloquently, though guardedly of all these things. She besought Spain to give a mother's love to her child, far from her, almost hidden in the bosom of the sea, and she prayed that the child should show herself worthy of such love and deserving of perfect trust. The grace of the speaker's manner, the beauty of her language, won all hearts, and the brave words she spoke wrought her audience to the highest pitch of enthusiasm. In a day she had added to her fame throughout the island. She was poetess and prophetess in one. Her college address was the beginning of an active propaganda in Porto Rico that ended only when she and her husband were offered their choice between jail and the wide, wide world.

La Razon and La Patria were suppressed, but the words of the patriot editor remained in the minds of the people. Even a captain general cannot imprison an idea. Nor could the ballads and poems of the sweet singer of the hills be exiled. The first volume, "Mes Cantares," appeared in 1876, and soon was in every book stall in Mexico, Central America, South America, the West Indies and even in Spain. A second volume appeared in Caracas, Venezuela, in 1878, followed by "Mis Poesias" in 1880, and "Mi Libro de Cuba" in 1892. In Caracas a warm friendship sprang up between the Tios and Professor Hostos, who was then at the head of educational affairs in Venezuela. After two years in Caracus a new governor general came from Spain to Porto Rico and the poetess returned to her native island, where she and her husband continued the work they had done so much to promote in earlier years. In the meantime Signora Tio' poems were gaining fame for the authoress. An Italian critic known as Amicis, was adding to his reputation by translating them. Fasteurath was calling them to the attention of the Germans and several French critics, among them Pierre Loti, were putting them into copy for the Parisian publishers. In Spain Mendez Pelayo, a member of the academy, a distinguished critic, called a meeting of his confreres, among whom were Peuaranda, Balayuer, Campillo and Lepoldo Alaz, who sent a testimonial of congratulation to Signora Tio and a diamond brooch in the symbolic design of a harp. This is the proudest of her possessions.

In 1887 Porto Rico was again too uncomfortable, owing to official persecutions, and the Tios came to New York, whence they soon went to Cuba. Then the poetess, who for some years had been gathering and classifying the shells of the Antilles as a recreation and diversion from her political and literary work, made the acquaintance of several eminent naturalists, who brought her to the notice of their friends in other parts of the world. She received many contributions from distant lands. One enthusiastic conchologist in the Philippines, no less a personage than the captain general himself, wrote that the interest her exquisite verse had awakened in him had been augmented intensely now that he learned from his esteemed friend, Carlos de la Torre, that the queen of verse had rare knowledge of shells as well as rythm. He begged her to accept a few specimens from the island of the Pacific. With the letter came a complete collection of the shells of the Philippine islands.

While the Tios were in Cuba Signorita Tio entered the University of Havana and in due course was graduated from that famous seat of learning with the degree of doctor of philosophy. Signor Tio was busy with his editorial work and the poetess carried on her propaganda against Spanish oppression. In 1892 her fourth volume of poems appeared and the Spanish speaking world accorded it a hearty welcome. The outbreak of the revolution gave much encouragement to the cause for which the Tios had dedicated their lives, but with the coming of Weyler they soon suffered a persecution compared to which their troubles in Porto Rico were mild indeed, and they were glad to escape with their lives.

POP CORN FOR INSOMNIA.

New cure That Has Proved Efficacious Wherever Tried.

A northern business man living in the south has found an agreeable cure for insomnia. It answered perfectly in his case, and no longer needing it as medicine he continues it as food. It is a most agreeable dish of pop corn. The corn is popped in the usual wire basket, and while hot it is put in a hot bowl. Scalding milk is poured over it, and in two minutes it is soft and ready to be sprinkled with sugar, unless salt and pepper are preferred. The addition of a little vanilla transforms the juvenile favorite into a delicate hasty pudding. To keep the corn after gathering, put it (on the cob) in a cool place; if shelled it loses its moisture sooner, and after a while will not pop. The place where other corn is kept is best to preserve it in. Pop corn hot served in bowls of hot milk is a southern refection at card parties.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Ingrowing Toe Nails.

This is a very common and troublesome affection, and most usually occurs by the side of the big toe. The surrounding soft parts first become swelled and inflamed by constant pressure against the edge of the nail from the use of tight shoes. If this is allowed to continue, an ulcer is formed in which the edge of the nail is imbedded. The pain from this, in some instances, is sufficiently severe to prevent walking. When this condition is arrived at a doctor's treatment becomes necessary.

The first object is to remove the cause, the tight shoe, then proceed to lessen the irritation and reduce the swelling. After soaking in hot water, the nail should be thinned by scraping, and, if very painful, a linseed poultice will give relief. When the irritation has thoroughly subsided, soft cotton should be pressed between the flesh and the nail, and then, if the skin is not broken, it should be slightly saturated with tincture of iodine. Repeat the treatment for several days, after which the tenderness will disappear.

Notes of Interest.

Among the queen ants captured in and around Buluwayo, for which a prize of half-a-crown is paid by the sanitary board, have been some specimens measuring four and a half inches and as thick as a man's thumb.

The curfew law obtains in Seoul, Korea. When the huge bronze bell of the city proclaims the hour of sunset and the time for closing the gates, every man is obliged to retire to his home, under pain of flogging.

Germany and Austria have about 150 cooking schools. A four years' course is necessary before the student obtains a diploma. Most of the hotel chefs have diplomas from these schools.

The time necessary for the conversion of a forest tree, or a part of it, into a printed paper, in a recent test made in Germany, was two hours and twenty-five minutes.

A proposal has been made by a French chemist to obtain easily assimilable iron tonics from vegetables by feeding the plants judiciously with iron fertilisers.

A Reason For Her Hope.

SPORTING.

GOLF.

At the monthly meeting of the trustees of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club Monday night the following active members were elected: Miss Marion P. Bowen, Messrs. Duncan W. Taylor, Frank A. Pattison, William W. Moore, Ellis W. Hedges, Francis G. Moore, Brockholst K. Miller, Frederick W. Perry, Walter J. Moore, W J. B Thiers and Edgar S. Hyatt. S. Durell Lounsbery, of Somerville, was elected a non-resident member, and Mrs. Walter J. Moore, Mrs. Frederick W. Perry, Mrs. Marion S. Ackerman, Miss Anna W. Miller, Mrs. Frank A. Pattison, Mrs. Duncan W. Taylor, Richard L. Minford and Lewis W. Minford.

Yesterday was comparatively quiet at the course of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club. The event of interest was the play of the first and second rounds for the Chapman championship cup. In the first round W. L. Glenny beat Reeve Stockton, Augustus Shepard beat W. R. Richards, C. W. Fisk beat J. H. P. Wharton, A. R. Fisk beat H. D. West. In the second round Augustus Shepard beat W. L. Glenny, C. W. Fisk beat A. R. Fisk. The finals will be played next Saturday between C. W. Fisk and Augustus Shepard. During the day there was a large complement of players on the course and there was a great deal of individual play. The usual tea was given in the afternoon in the clubhouse and was well attended. Many who were present during the day attended the opening of the Park Golf Club later in the afternoon. This had a tendency to decrease the attendance at the grounds somewhat.

AT THE TRAPS.

The final shoot in the Central New Jersey Trap Shooters' League and the regular monthly shoot of the Climax Gun Club will take place next Saturday on the grounds of the Climax Gun Club. The Climax Gun Club has scored three wins, the New Brunswick two, and the Dunellen two. If either the Dunellen or New Brunswick club wins on Saturday this will leave a tie with the Climax Club in the contest for the Peters' Cartridge Co's. trophy, and the tie will be shot off Saturday.

CYCLING COMMENT.

JAPAN'S CRYSANTHEMUM.

A National Authority Writes Concerning Its Origin.

James Morton, who has spent years in the culture of the chrysanthemum and is the national authority on its culture and history has written the following concerning its oriental status:

There are good reasons for supposing that the chrysanthemum was cultivated with much devotion by the gardeners of both China and Japan for centuries before its importation into Europe. A well known traveller in those countries tells us in one of his works that "so great a favorite is the chrysanthemum with the Chinese gardeners that no persuasion will deter them from its culture, and they will frequently resign their situations rather than be forbidden by their employers to grow it." In support of this statement he relates the experience of an English resident in that country, who, without the slightest interest in the plant was compelled to allow his native gardener the pleasure of cultivating it solely on that account. The Chinese often train the chrysanthemum into curious and fantastic forms, such as pagodas, horses, stags, ships, etc. Another peculiar method of culture practiced at Cheayuen, where it is entensively cultivated, is the grafting of cuttings into stout stems of Artemisia indica as a stock. Among the Japanese the chrysanthemum is no less prized than in China, and they display great skill in its culture, calling it the Queen of Flowers. At the most popular of the Japanese festivals the people display effigies of their traditional heroes constructed of massive chrysanthemum blossoms, Benkei, the Japanese Hercules, appearing gorgeously appareled in white, yellow and purple pompons.

In many other ways the Chinese and Japanese reveal their love for this plant, but probably in no more apparent and lasting manner than by applying the talent of their most skillful artists to portray its fair form and vivid coloring on their pottery and household fabrics, as well as in numberless illustrated books and pamphlets.

In Japan the Imperial Order of the Chrysanthemum is the most distinguished decoration of the empire. It was founded in 1876, and consists of a star and collar hung around the neck by a riband, the whole work being in gold, silver and enamels. Bestowed, with rare exceptions, only upon royal personages, it is consequently considered a very high distinction among European sovereigns who have been wearers of this mark of the Mikado's favor. The chrysanthemum, or "kiku," as it is called in Japan, is also one of the crest badges of the imperial family, and is used as an official seal. The hilts of the swords forged by the Empero. Go Toba, who ascended the throne in 1186, had the kiku figured upon them.

The chrysanthemum season in Japan is looked forward to with much pleasure, and the different communities manifest the greatest enthusiasm in its culture. A certain day is set apart as a festival, when all turn out to pay due homage to their national emblem, the many-hued chrysanthemum. During their blooming period the gardens of all the prominent florists present an exhibition of great beauty. Each evening for many weeks the notables of rank, as well as the peasants in holiday attire join in the happy festivities. The fetes are always held in the evenings and the grounds are beautifully illuminated, presenting a scene brilliant beyond description. His Majesty also opens his gardens at the imperial palace on this grand fete day. All the highest native officials and foreign residents of distinction are present, and invitations are highly prized and much sought after. It is one of the few occasions when the Empress is to be seen in public. She delights in having the most dainty handkerchiefs of gauze embroidered in chrysanthemums of all colors. Her ladies of honor also appear in gorgeous dresses with chrysanthemums worked upon them. Upon this occasion the display of the national flower is said to be unequaled. Nowhere can they be found in such profusion, so fully developed and brilliant in color, while the rich imperial violet silk with which the tents and buildings are draped bear upon them the heraldic kiku in all its pristine loveliness. As the day draws to a close the people return to their homes to complete the slow process of intoxication by drinking saki, into which are thrown the blooms of chrysanthemums, which, they suppose, will preserve them from evil the coming year.

A Nice Distinction.

It was the unusual duty of a Los Angeles clergiman of great physical and intellectual girth to deliver the dedicatory address at the opening of a new cemetery. The burying ground was swept by a high wind which was blowing from the sea at the time. The parson showed himself as wise as witty in his apology for keeping his head covered during his mental performance.

"I do not remove my hat," he remarked, "because, while I am willing to be the first incumbent of this cemetery, I do not want to be its first occupant."—San Francisco News Letter.

A medical journal advises against the excessive use of salt. It is first of all a perversion of taste, the condiment destroying the flavor of delicate dishes if too pronounced. Furthermore, it is asserted that an excessive use of salt seriously overtaxes the kidney to remove it, and that many cases of derangement and disease are due to this excessive use. The salt habit, it is added, is easily acquired, and persons indulging themselves soon reach a point where nothing is palatable that it is not strongly impregnated with salt.

TO SAVE MARIA TERESA.

Navy Department Orders Two Vessels to Cat Island to Rescue Her.

Washington, Nov. 9.—The navy department is without advices concerning the Maria Teresa, but, acting on newspaper statements of her reported stranding on Cat island in the Watling group, has sent orders to the Vulcan, at Norfolk, and the Potomac at Santiago, to leave immediately for Cat island, and if the vessel is found to do everything possible to save her.

The expedition will be under the command of Captain McCalla, who commanded the Marblehead in the Spanish war, and is now in charge of the Norfolk navy yard.

The Vulcan should reach the scene in forty-eight hours, and the Potomac in less time.

Secretary Long and Assistant Secretary Allen expressed great hope that the reports about the Maria Teresa were true.

They acknowledge that they have only the newspaper dispatches to go upon, and nothing official.

Yet the secretary thought they were sufficient to order the searching party of the Vulcan and the Potomac.

The two vessels will coast and cruise up and down the Atlantic until they meet each other, and if the Teresa is afloat they will certainly come across her.

The Vulcan has on board everything to render assistance to the cruiser and she can be repaired if necessary.

Assistant Secretary Allen said if anybody could save the Teresa, if she is afloat and can be saved, Captain McCalla is the man, and that is why he was sent on the Vulcan.

No News at Nassau.

Nassau, New Providence, Nov. 9.—No information is obtainable here which in any way tends to confirm the report in circulation in the United States that the cruiser Infanta Maria Teresa, which was abandoned in a sinking condition off Watling island on November 1, has been sighted aground off Cat island of the Bahama group.

The rumor that the cruiser has been sighted is discredited here.

Maria Teresa Located.

Norfolk, Va., The Merritt Wrecking Company has received information that the former Spanish cruiser Infanta Maria Teresa is ashore at Cat island.

Captain Chittenden will leave here with the steam tug Merritt at once for Cat island.

Troops for Manila.

San Francisco, Nov. 9.—The transport Newport has sailed for the Philippines with General Miller and staff. On this ship were thirteen ladies, wives of officers who are going to and some of whom are at Manila.

The troops were the First battalion of the Twentieth Kansas regiment, the Wyoming Light Battery, Assistant Surgeon Charles S. Huffman and Acting Assistant Surgeon Hanna, members of the Hospital Corps, and clerks attached to headquarters.

The war department has chartered the steamer St. Paul from the Alaska Commercial Company to sail to Manila November 7, carrying supplies for the army.

The United States training ship Adams on or before December 1, will start on a seven months' cruise after receiving her batteries at Mare island.

She will proceed from here to Magdalena bay, where she will spend the month, and then go to Honolulu and Oriental ports.

The Panama Arrives.

New York, Nov. 9.—The United States transport Panama, from Santiago via Havana, arrived at quarantine yesterday with ninety officers and soldiers. The Panama left Santiago October 31, touching at Havana on November 3, for a few hours, where Congressman Dalzell and party of five landed.

The transport then proceeded on the voyage and experienced variable winds and weather.

She will remain at anchor off quarantine until she is ordered to proceed to the city.

Captain Hanlon was much surprised to learn that any uneasiness had been felt for the ship's safety.

He said that shortly after leaving Santiago he ordered the vessel cleaned up between decks. Numerous boxes and other material were thrown overboard, and drifted toward shore, and this no doubt gave rise to the report that the transport had been wrecked.

The Nova Scotia Fisheries.

Montreal, Nov. 9.—The Nova Scotia shore fisheries are by far the worst in years. This is true alike on the western and eastern coasts, except in parts of Cape Breton.

Notwithstanding this, the receipts just now at the port of Halifax are fair, but this is considered due to all the available fish being hurried into market.

The close of next month will show a decided shortage.

In the herring fishery there is not half an average. The bank catch, it is estimated, will be 13,000 quintals less than last season.

The Magdalen islands mackerel catch is the best for two years, but in Nova Scotia very little has been done.

Heavy Snow-storms in Alaska.

Port Townsend, Wash., Nov. 9.—The City of Topeka arrived Monday night from Alaska, bringing 114 passengers. She reports that heavy snow storms have visited various sections of Alaska and nearly all mining operations have been suspended, except quartz mills, located near tidal water.

On November 2 four feet of snow fell on Chilkoot and White passes, which completely put a stop to travel.

Telephone messages from Lake Linderman to Skaguay announce that about four hundred persons are snow bound there.

A Pittsburgh Brewery Scheme.

Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 9.—Negotiations are in progress for the formation of a corporation, capitalized at about $20,000,000, to take in all the local breweries.

The intention of the promoters is to merge the interests of the sixteen breweries in Allegheny county and operate them as one great company.

FEATS OF THE CAVALRY HORSE.

Douglas' Plucky Ride Through Rain and Mud to General Ewell.

The one sad feature about the war is that the cavalry horse was not tested. In fact the muddy roads, the long distances required for transportation made this almost impossible. Yet some wonderful feats have been performed by our horsemen to train them for the campaigns of actual warfare. General King tells of a plucky ride made in the seventies by Lieut. James F. Bell, of the Seventh, just to show what our mounted soldiers could have done had the campaign developed. Bell was ordered to Medora, a little town at the crossing of the Little Missouri by the Northern Pacific railway, where he found important dispatches for his brother officer, Lieutenant Garlington, then in the field, and, all alone, Bell rode away from Medora at sunrise on an August morning, covered fifty to fifty-five miles through the roughest country in the Northwest by noon, got a fresh mount in Captain Varnum's camp, and just after sunset reached Garlington. The distance covered was at least one hundred miles, and the gait was trot or gallop all the way.

The records of the cavalry regiments on duty in Arizona or Wyoming during the Indian campaigns of the last twenty years furnishes numerous instances of long rides of this character.

The annals of the great war have many more—perhaps the most remarkable being that of Henry Kyd Douglas, now Adjutant-General of Maryland, but at the time a young officer selected to bear despatches for Stonewall Jackson, through pitchy darkness, over river and mountain, from Harrisonburg in the Shenandoah valley, around Massanutten mountain, over the Blue Ridge through Swift Run gap, then by way of Stannardsville, Madison Court-House, Culpeper, and Brandy Station, to General Ewell, then "in the field." Douglas started just after sundown of an April evening, and in a pouring rain splashed through mud and mire and the blackness of Erebus over the mountain trail; exchanged his gallant blooded mare for a big, raw-boned racer some forty miles from the starting point; used up mount No. 2 in a fifteen-mile spurt to Madison C. H., where he swapped him for a little gray which stumbled in the mire and darkness after a run of barely a mile, and could not be induced to rise. The magic of Jackson's name won him mount No. 4, who carried him nine miles and gave place to a gaunt roan. The next stage was the eleven-mile dash to Culpeper, where, in the faint, cold glimmer of dawn, the young officer reached General Dick Taylor, who steered him on to Brandy Station and beyond. Just twenty hours from the start, Douglas found General Ewell and delivered his rain-soaked despatches. He had covered the entire distance, of one hundred and five miles in less than twenty hours.

NEWS READINGS IN DAWSON.

Enterprising Man Makes $300 Reading to the Miners.

A novel story is told by the Portland Oregonian about the way the news of the blowing up of the Maine was received in Dawson City. An enterprising Yankee got hold of the first copy of a newspaper containing the account. He made arrangements for getting the news abroad in this business like fashion:

Renting a vacant saloon building, he caused bulletins to be issued giving an inkling of the character of the news that had been received, most judiciously worded, and announcing that the full account would be read in public in the evening in the mammoth one story log edifice next the Blue Ruin dive on Brimstone street; admission two pennyweights of gold, ranging in value from $1.50 to $1.75.

At the appointed time the miners gathered to hear the news, and two hundred or more of them tossed their gold dust into the door keeper's scales and crowded inside. The reading was satisfactory, if the news was not, and there was no grumbling about the investment. No less than $300 and probably much more, was realized from that idea. The reader was a liberal sort of chap, and he read the other news in the paper merely as a courtesy to the assembly.

This practice grew as the nation neared war and after the war began, and it is a frequent occurrence for a public reading of important news to be given in Dawson at so much per head for permission. And the cooped up men pay for nothing more cheerfully than war news. Their liberality in this matter is sometimes taken advantage of, and stale stuff palmed off for news, and even the Dawson City public is discriminating in this particular, and is strongly disposed to resent the swindle.

Sacred Fires of India.

The sacrtd fires of India have not all been extinguished. The most ancient, which still exists, was consecrated 12 centuries ago in commemoration of the voyage made by the Parsees when they emigrated from Persia to India. The fire is fed five times every twenty-four hours with sandalwood and other fragrant materials, combined with very dry fuel. This fire, in the village of Oodwada, near Bulsar, is visited by Parsees in large numbers during the months alloted to the presiding genius of fire.

Mr. Gotrox—But you are a poor man, and my daughter has been accustomed to every concelvable luxury. Do you think she could stand such a change?

Impecunious Lover—Certainly, sir. Just see how readily those rich Rough Riders took to hard tack and bacon. —Judge.

WILL APPOINT A SUCCESSOR TO HIS LATE OPPONENT IN ESSEX.

A Number of Prosecutors and Judges Will be Appointed by Mr. Voorhees, Among Them a Successor to Judge Bartine in Somerset County—High Salaries and Great Power Go With Many of the Selections.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, Nov. 10—The Governor-elect Voorhees will have a large number of offices to fill, but not as many as were filled by Governor Griggs in his term of but little over two years.

The appointments to be made by the next Governor will be found below:

In 1901 the term of Chancellor McGill will expire. The Chancellor will then have completed two terms of seven years each as the head of the Court of Chancery. In the same year the fifth term of Supreme Court Justice Depue will expire, and in the year previous, 1900, Justice Lippincott will have finished his first term on the Supreme Court bench. Chancellor McGill is a Democrat, as is also Justice Lippincott. Justice Depue is a Republican. None of the terms of the appointed (so called "lay") Judges of the Court of Errors will expire during the term of the next Governor.

The terms of Circuit Court Judges Child and Miller, both Democrats, will expire in 1900. The names of the outgoing County Judges and Prosecutors, together with the year of their retirements and their politics are as follows:

In 1899: Judges—Joseph H. Gaskill, Rep., Burlington; Jas. R. Hoagland, Dem., Cumberland.

Prosecutors — William A. Logue, Dem., Cumberland; Elvin W. Crane, Dem., Essex.

In 1900: Judges—Robert S. Woodruff, Dem., Mercer; J. Clarence Conover, Dem., Monmouth; John D. Bartine, Dem., Somerset.

Prosecutors—Peter W. Stagg, Dem., Bergen; Eckard P. Bull, Dem., Burlington; Wilson H. Jenkins, Dem., Camden; Jonathan W. Acton, Dem., Salem; Nelson Y. Dungan, Dem., Somerset.

In 1901: Judges—Henry S. Douglass, Cape May; H. Burdett Herr, Hunterdon; Woodbridge Strong, Middlesex; Clement H. Sinnickson, Salem; all Republicans.

Prosecutors—Lewis Starr, Gloucester; Walter F. Hayhurst, Hunterdon; John H. Voorhees, Middlesex; Eugene Emley, Passaic; Geogre A. Angle, Warren, all Republicans.

Besides the above judicial appointments the next Governor will have the naming in 1901 of successors to the following named District Court Judges: Jeline, Camden; Atwater, Elizabeth; Bedle, Jersey City; Guild and McCarter, Newark; Bellstab, Trenton, and Lewis, Paterson. Judges Bedle and Guild are Democrats, appointed by Governor Griggs, and all the others are Republicans.

The term of Chancery Clerk Lewis A. Thompson will expire in 1901, as will also the terms of State School Superintendent Charles J. Baxter and State Road Commissioner H. I. Budd, in 1899; Bank and Insurance Commissioner Wm. Bettle, and State Prison Inspector E. J. Anderson, in 1900, and State Factory Inspector John Ward, in 1901; all of these are Republicans.

The next Governor will also have the appointment, in 1899, of successors of the six members of the Board of Prison Inspectors and of the four members of the Riparian Commission. These boards are both bi-partisan, as is the State Board of Taxation. Of the members of the latter board, the terms of Commissionrs Black (Dem.) and Lentz (Rep.) will expire in 1901. All of the members of the State Board of Assessors will retire within the next three years; Messrs. Green and Meeker (Dems.) in 1900, and Messrs. Spencer and Gibbs in 1901. In the latter year the terms of the four members of the State Board of Arbitration will also expire.

Among the less lucrative offices that will become vacant are: All sixteen of the places on the State Board of Education, five of the eight places on the board of managers of the State Hospital for the Insane at Morristown, and two on the Trenton Asylum Board, six Commissioners of Pilotage, the four places on the Fish and Game Commission and two members of the State Board of Health.

There are also minor places, from a political standpoint, such as on the State Board of Medical Examiners, State Board of Pharmacy and State Board of Dentistry.

A FANWOOD MARRIAGE.

CELEBRATED IN ALL SAINTS EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

The Edifice Handsomely Decorated for the Occasion—Miss Grace Estelle Kyte Was the Charming and Pretty Bride.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, November 10.—A pretty church wedding took place in All Saints Episcopal church, last evening, when Grace Estelle, daughter of Henry Kyte, and granddaughter of Charles Kyte, of Fanwood, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Stanton William Pentz, of Bergen Point. The church was filled with friends and relatives.

The marriage has been looked for ward to by all as one of the leading society events of the season. The church was handsomely trimmed with white chrysanthemums, evergreens and holly. A large arch of chrysanthemums and evergreens had been erected over the centre of the chancel rail, and under this the couple pledged their troth.

To the strains of the wedding march first came the four ushers, Messrs. Marclay Pentz, brother of the groom, L. V. B. Cameron, Howard Tyrell and George Wicks, all of Bergen Point, followed by the maid-of-honor, Miss Elizabeth Kyte, sister of the bride.

Then came the four bridemaids, Miss Alice Maud Kyte, Miss Marguerite Kyte, Miss Ethel Kyte and Miss Jean Pentz. The bride appeared leaning upon the arm of her grandfather who gave her away. The bride's gown was a creation of real valenciennes lace and white organdie.

The bridal party was met near the chancel-rail by the groom and his best man, Adam Pentz, a brother. The party then proceeded to their positions under the large arch, where they were met by Rev. Lewis Cameron, rector of the Holy Communion church, of South Orange, who performed the ceremony, assisted by Rev. Edward True, rector of the church.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's grandfather after the ceremony, but only the relatives and a few intimate friends of the couple attended.

After a short wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Pentz will take up their residence in Bergen Point.

THIS MAN IS A FREAK.

APPEARS TO HAVE TWO HEARTS AND TWO SETS OF RIBS.

Can Move Them at His Own Will Without Pain—Is an Aged Colored Man Depending on Charity for His Living.

There is a colored man in town, William King by name, who is exciting the wonder of some few people who have examined him, among the curious being members of the medical profession. King is a wonderful human being, for he claims to have two hearts and two sets of ribs, which he can move from place to place in his body without pain.

King struck town Saturday night and was taken charge of by Thomas Martin, warden of the city jail. Tom provided King with a bed in the jail and furnished him with meals.

Yesterday morning to a group of officers and press representatives King consented to demonstrate his peculiar anatomy. Baring his broad chest, the spectators were invited to listen attentively with ear pressed close to the breast, on the left side, where the heart usually is, and there it was beating away in a regular manner.

The ear was removed and placed close to the chest on the right side, and sure enough the steady throb of another heart could be distinctly heard. A few convulsive movements of the chest and stomach on the man's part, and then at his invitation hands were placed low down on his stomach, and the two organs on the right and left sides could be felt beating as though in their natural position.

King claims to have two sets of ribs, one of which he is able to bring out from some concealed position and lay across his stomach.

He carries a letter signed by Dr. M. B. Long who has given him an examination and who testifies to the man's peculiarity of construction. The doctor says that King has no diaphragm, but a double sternum which he keeps behind the normal one.

King's last exhibition was undertaken with an iron cane, one inch in diameter. Taking the cane in his right hand, and swinging it around his head rapidly, he brought it down with all his force upon a bunch of muscle on his left forearm, just below the elbow. Repeating this four or five times, he handed the cane to the spectators who could easily perceive that the bar of iron was bent at least one inch. He straightened it out again in the same way.

King says he was born in Massachusetts, and has traveled over most of the globe, and been examined by physicians everywhere.

The stranger is of medium height, broad and strong, and has repulsive features. He looks no older than 50.

WHO STOLE THE PUMPKIN?

No One Knows, But a Good Time Was Had Just the Same.

Several weeks ago a prize pumpkin was taken from the residence of James Lewis on Grove street, and it was a mysterious question as to who had made made way with it. Last evening a social was given in honor of the event at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Tigar, of Duer street.

During the evening a mock trial was held for the purpose of determining who stole the pumpkin, but after considerable dispute all decided to let the matter drop. The whole affair caused a great deal of amusement. The guests were served with refreshments, and before they departed for home each one was presented with a small pumpkin pie.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. James Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. George O. Strayer, Mr. and Mrs. John VanHorn, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Doeringer, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Blackford, Mrs. William Colthar, Miss Adelaide Lewis, Miss Ada VanHorn, Miss Estella Brooks, Miss Minnie Winkleman, George W. Bird, Chauncey Colthar, Vanderveer L. Brown and Raymond Strayer.

KNEW NOT WHAT HAPPENED.

But Her Face Was Bruised and Covered With Blood.

With her face bruised and covered with blood, a young colored woman was arraigned before City Judge DeMeza this morning. She has spent the night in jail, having been arrested last night for being drunk and disorderly. She pleaded guilty to the charge, but could answer none of the Judge's question as to how her face happened to be in its present condition. She didn't remember anything about it at all, she said. The Judge fined her $5.

BATTLED WITH HOBOES IN BROAD DAYLIGHT.

Fanwood Citizens Captured Them at Graceland Station.

DEFIED W. R. STANBERY.

WHEN HE STOPPED THEM THEY PREPARED TO SHOOT.

Man in United States Army Uniform Promised to Convert Mr. Stanbery Into a Sieve—Mr. Stanbery Reinforced—Hoboes Prepared for Action—The Fanwoodites Retreat—Hoboes Caught.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Fanwood, Nov. 10—Wm. R. Stanbery has again distinguished himself in the eyes of his fellow-townsmen. This time it was chicken thieves that he attempted to run to earth. He met the enemy, but when the latter brought their artillery to bear, he beat a retreat and called on a minion of the law to capture them, all of which was accomplished in due time.

Yesterday noon Mr. Stanbery was returning home from Plainfield on his wheel. As he sped along between Scotch Plains and Fanwood his meditations on the result of the election were suddenly interrupted by the hail of Mr. Wright, a resident of that neighborhood, who told the passing Fanwoodite that there were three strange men in the barn of Fred K. Clark, near by. Just at that moment three men appeared out of the barn door. One wore the uniform of the United States Army.

As the strangers sighted Stanbery, they growled forth some unseemly remark, and slinging a bag over their shoulders started down Forest avenue. The olifactory organs of Mr. Stanbery scented trouble from afar off, and, mounting his wheel, he followed them. He slipped around Park avenue and met them as they entered Midway avenue, the name now applied to the old railway cut.

"What have you in that bag," remarked Mr. Stanbery as he confronted the strangers.

"None of your —— business," replied the soldier, where upon he promptly drew a revolver and pointing it in the direction of Mr. Stanbery, made some remark about converting him into a sieve. Declining the challenge to single combat, Mr. Stanbery started to retreat when he was reinforced by Fred K. Clark and LeRoy Day who came running across the fields.

Marshalling his uniformed array behind him, the servant of Uncle Sam prepared to do battle. He informed Mr. Clark that they were prepared to fight for their liberty and warned him away unless he and Mr. Stanbery both were anxious to appear as sieves. Then the men departed.

Now a hour before this had happened, V. L. Frazee, of Plainfield, had driven past the barn of Mr. Clark and seen three men chasing chickens and shooting them. He had told Mr. Clark who had hastened to the scene of action just in time to come to Mr. Stanbery's aid.

After the victory of the strangers, the defeated detachment of Fanwoodites hurried to Scotch Plains for aid and artillery. Constables Walpole and Traynor and several other good citizens turned out and the posse went in pursuit of the strangers.

At the old Graceland station, they found the strangers awaiting a coal train to carry them to parts unknown. Each had a dead fowl under his arm. The strangers sprang up at the approach of the posse and warned them to keep away unless they were all prepared to act as targets. The representative of the army flourished his revolver and vowed to shoot the first man who approached.

The representives of law and order held a short consultation and then closed in on the strangers. The soldier singled out Mr. Clark and prepared to follow out his threat. Mr. Clark closed in at once and had the satisfaction of partially disfiguring the stranger's face with a blow from his fist. Seeing the defeat of their leader and artillery, the other two surrendered after a short struggle and were escorted back to Scotch Plains.

At Scotch Plains, the three men were arrigned before Justice Clark on the charge of killing and stealing Mr. Clark's chickens. The one in the uniform gave his name as Joe Bowers and the other two as Joe Cummings and George Brooks. They lived out of the State, they said. Judge Clark committed them to the county jail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Dr. Westcott was sent for and identified the two ununiformed ones as his assailants of several nights ago, the story of his encounter with which was told in The Daily Press at the time. He immediately made a complaint to which they will have to answer in time.

MOTHER DEFIED POLICE.

SAYS JERRY CASH CLUBBED HER SON WITHOUT CAUSE.

Young O'Keefe Objected to Remarks of Colored Folk—Made a Dash for Them—Colored Men Scattered—Trial Saturday.

Just how it started City Judge DeMeza and the police are puzzled to know. At any rate, the neighborhood of Liberty and West Third streets was suddenly converted last evening from an orderly and law-abiding place to the scene of a fight and almost a riot. As a result, a white man, two colored men and a colored woman were locked up and haled before the City Judge this morning.

It was soon after 6 o'clock last evening when Mrs. Clara White, colored, her son, William Green, and a friend, William Raines, stood on the corner of Third and Liberty streets in friendly converse. Old "Pop" Jones was with Raines. Just then Thomas J. O'Keefe walked by. He admits that the fumes of strong drink had him in their grasp.

A remark made in the little group of colored people floated to the ears of O'Keefe. O'Keefe's mother was near at hand and says that the remark was intended for her son. O'Keefe's mind is an utter blank regarding the incident. The colored folks say that they had no idea that O'Keefe was within half a mile of the place and made no reference to him.

At any rate O'Keefe started for the crowd. A few hands fanned the air and then the two colored men left hurriedly while O'Keefe went sailing forth into the street. Mrs. White screamed when O'Keefe started for her son and started the latter to a place of safety. O'Keefe toppled over into the gutter.

Sergeant Kiely and Patrolman Cash were coming down the street. They heard the screams and ran to the place. They found O'Keefe rushing about the street with a crowd, headed by Mrs. White, close behind him. When Jerry Cash attempted to arrest O'Keefe the latter's mother tried to lead the boy away.

Jerry says she resisted him and fought when he tried to arrest her son. Mrs. O'Keefe claims that she would have led her son home without trouble only Jerry rushed at him and pounded him over the head with his club. Jerry is very wroth at this last statement and declares that Mrs. O'Keefe should go to jail for perjury.

This morning, City Judge DeMeza heard the various sides to the story. He wanted to hear the testimony of more witnesses and so set the trial down for Saturday morning.

The ceremony took place at the bride's home, in the presence of the members of the immediate families of the two.

The bride wore a handsome traveling dress of cadet blue cloth trimmed with white satin, and a hat to match. She carried white roses and was attended by Miss Anna Templin as flower girl, and Harold Thompson Leach, the groom's brother, as page.

The couple left for New York on a wedding trip and when they return will take up their residence in Dunellen. The groom is an electrician, and is in business in Bound Brook.

FIREBUG DOES HIS WORK

BARN SET ON FIRE IN THE BOROUGH EARLY THIS MORNING.

Flames Were Discovered by Marshal Campbell, Who Sent in an Alarm—Fire Department Did Good Work.

At 1 o'clock this morning an alarm of fire was sent in from Box 162, corner of Linden avenue and Grove street, by Marshal William Campbel. The fire was in a barn on Grove street near Greenbrook road, owned by Mrs. Rick, of Vine street, and was undoubtedly of incendiary origin. Only a short time before the marshal passed the place and everything was all right. He had not gone far when a bright light appeared and illuminated the sky for a considerable distance. The officer hastened to the fire box and sent the alarm in.

Considering the hour, the department responed quickly and succeeded in saving the greater portion of the barn. In the barn there was a team of horses and a quantity of hay, besides some wagons owned by Chris. Lubeck, a teamster. Everything was saved, and only the top of the building was burned off. The firemen did good work in protecting the adjoining property which was threatened with destruction.

There was every indication that the barn was set on fire, for Mr. Lubeck left everything all right when he put his horses in for the night, and nothing suspicious was noticed when the officer passed the place only a short time before the fire broke out.

HOME FROM CUBA.

Plainfield Boy a Member of a Gallant Illinois Regiment.

W. I Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Smith, of Prospect avenue, who is a member of Comany B, Third Illinois Volunteers, who has been in Cuba for sometime past, arrived in New York yesterday afternoon on the Government transport Roumania, with his regiment, and he was met by his parents, brothers and sister. He secured a leave of absence for two hours through the courtesy of Rev. D. D. O'Dell, chaplain of the regiment, and he came to Plainfield during that time. He related briefly to his folks something of his experiences in Cuba. His regiment took several important parts in the war. The regiment left New York last evening for Illinois where they will be mustered out.

Mayor Wilson, of the borough, who is an intimate friend of Mr. Scott, heard of the latter's sickness yesterday afternoon and he immediately telephoned to the hospital and had a private room reserved for the sick man. Mr. Scott was soon after taken to that place, where he will remain as the guest of Mayor Wilson until he has fully recovered from his sickness.

Settled Out of Court.

The contract case of Eulalie Morel against John Watta, which was to have come up in the Court of Common pleas, has been settled out of court. Murphy & Blatz represented the plaintiff, and S. S. Swackamer the defendant.

Roundsman Flynn to Build.

Roundsman John Flynn has purchased from William Martin, of West Front street, a piece of property located near West End Park on Front street, and he will erect a house thereon. Plans are now out for the building.

—The attention of The Daily Press has been called to the way Westervelt avenue is numbered in the borough. People living on the street are much annoyed by the system now used, which is anything but satisfactory. It should be numbered to correspond with the system used on the same street in this city.

A CORPORATION CAN BUY ITS OWN STOCK.

Important Decision Handed Down by Supreme Court.

MURPHY & BLATZ'S VICTORY

THEY ENFORCED THE CLAIM OF WALTER L. CHAPMAN.

The Plaintiff Secured a Position by Buying $800 Worth of Stock, But When He Was Discharged Declined to Purchase the Stock as Agreed Upon—Supreme Court Declares They Can do so.

The Supreme Court of this State has just rendered a decision in an important case which means a great deal to corporate bodies and their supporters. The court has decided that a corporation has a right to purchase shares of its own stock for legitimate purposes.

The decision was rendered in answer to a demurrer filed by Besson, Stevens & Lewis, a firm of Hoboken lawyers, who represents the Iron Clad Rheostat Company, a Westfield concern. Murphy & Blatz took issue on the demurrer, and the matter was argued before the Supreme Court last summer.

Walter L. Chapman is the plaintiff in the case. He is now operating a bicycle repair shop at Somerville, but two years ago, when the Iron Clad Rheostat Company was incorporated, George Colgate, the president of the company, and a warm friend of Chapman's, induced him to enter the employ of the company. The terms under which he went to work were that he was to receive a stated salary, but must purchase 10 shares of the stock. This stock, however, was to be repurchased by the company at its par value when Chapman was discharged or left their employ.

Soon after this another set of men succeeded Mr. Colgate and others. The new president had no use for Chapman in the office, where he was employed, and sent him out in the shop to work. Chapman refused to go, and resigned his position. Through Murphy & Blatz he demanded that the corporation purchase his $800 worth of stock as they had agreed to do. Acting upon the advice of their counsel they refused to do so, so Chapman brought suit in the Supreme Court for $1,000, the extra $200 being for damages.

Murphy & Blatz filed their declaration, and then the defendants' lawyers filed a demurrer to which the plaintiff took issue. The defendants claimed that the contract entered into by their successors was beyond their power to perform. First, because a corporation cannot deal in or agree to purchase its own stock; second, that the corporation had no authority to make an agreement to enter into any such contract as they had made with Chapman.

The argument was made at the June term of court before Justices Ludlow, Collins and Dixon by Clarence L. Murphy for the plaintiff. As there were no decisions on record in such cases it made new law, and the Court took until November 7th to hand down their decision which is in favor of the plaintiff, that a corporation has a right to purchase of its own stock when it is to be used for legitimate purposes.

FACILITATED COUNTING.

Use of the Murray Tally Sheets a Success in Some Districts.

Although it was not used through all the election districts, the Roger F. Murray tally sheets were given a good trial election day and its usefulness demonstrated. It was used in the First and Third wards and the third district of the Fourth ward. In the first district of the First ward, the election officers did not quite understand the new sheets and had considerable trouble with them. Even then, however, it was only 1 o'clock when they had completed the third count while it is usually 3 o'clock in the morning before their work is over.

The Third ward, where the count usually lasts until long after midnight, the count was all completed at 9:30 o'clock. The Third district of the Fourth ward was also completed early before the other districts of that ward were half through their labors.

Put Over the Term.

The case on contract of Woolston & Buckle against Ambrose Male, which was to have come up this term in the Court of Common Pleas, is off this term by consent of counsel.

ROOSEVELT'S ELECTION

Later Returns Decrease His Plurality Somewhat.

LEGISLATURE REPUBLICAN

The Congressional Delegation However No Better Than Sixteen Out of Thirty-Four. A Sound Money Senator Certain to Succeed Edward Murphy. Citizen's Candidate Fared Slim.

New York, Nov. 10.—Colonel Roosevelt has carried fifty-two--probably fifty-three—counties out of the sixty-one in the state, and his net plurality over Van Wyck on present figures is 19,553.

The figures are being slightly altered as complete returns come in, but there is little probability that Roosevelt will lead Van Wyck by more than 20,000 at most.

In 1896 Black carried every county in the state except Schoharie, but this year Roosevelt lost Albany, Erie, Kings and New York, Queens, Rensselaer, Richmond and Schoharie, and possibly Clinton also, though the latter is now claimed for Van Wyck by 38 votes.

The total Van Wyck pluralities in nine counties are 86,892, and the total Roosevelt pluralities are 106,425.

Bacon, the Citizens' Union candidate, did not get a dozen votes in some counties.

The legislature will in all probability stand in the senate twenty-nine Republicans and twenty-one Democrats, and in the assembly ninety Republicans and sixty Democrats.

Collier, elected by the Republicans in the Tenth district of Kings to the assembly by 32 plurality, and Davis, Republican, elected to the senate in Kings by 191 plurality, may have a larger or a smaller vote when the soldiers' ballots are counted.

This will also apply to Irving Brown, Democrat, elected to the assembly in Rockland, and David N. Heller, Democrat, elected in the Chemung district. In any event the Republicans are sure of both houses, and from 44 to 46 majority on joint ballot for the election of a United States senator to succeed Murphy.

The congressional delegation, at the present time having only 6 Democrats out of 34 members, will stand 18 to 16 at best from the Republican viewpoint. That may be changed by later returns.

The districts in doubt are the First, comprising Queens and Suffolk counties, where James M. Belford is running a close race with Townsend Scudder.

In the Thirty-second district, comprising Niagara county complete, and part of Buffalo, Rowland B. Mahany, Republican, hopes to pull through over William H. Ryan.

The chances favor the Democrats, however, in both of these districts.

TO SUCCEED MURPHY.

New York Republicans Already Discussing Senatorial Possibilities.

New York, Nov. 10.—With the assurance of a strong majority on joint ballot in the next legislature, Republican leaders are beginning to discuss the question of a United States senator to succeed Edward Murphy and represent the Empire state for six years from March next in the highest legislative body of the nation.

There are quite a number of aspirants for the position and the contest bids fair to be a most interesting one.

Elihu Root, who gave his services at the Saratoga convention in behalf of Colonel Roosevelt in establishing his constitutional right to fill the office of governor, is talked of as a possibility.

General Stewart L. Woodford is also talked about, and he has declared that he would like to be elected.

The general's chances for the position are not considered bright at the present time.

Colonel Roosevelt has been talked of, but he has declared, if elected governor, he would serve out the term as governor, and would under no circumstances leave the position for another to fill.

Chauncey M. Depew, it is also said, has an eye upon the position, and, it is said, would feel honored to have it, but no one is yet in a position to say he is a real candidate, as he has not expressed any opinion.

The latest person spoken of in connection with the position is Lieutenant Governor Woodruff, and Senator-elect Davis said yesterday morning that he thought it would be an excellent idea to send the lieutenant governor to the United States Senate and give to Brooklyn a lively representative in Washington.

Governor Black, who refused to take the position when it was offered to him as a solace for being retired from the gubernatorial contest, it is said, will also be in the fight when the legislative contest begins. He has the reputation of being able to charm members of the legislature, and it is said that he will make the contest a memorable one because of the interest it will create.

THE NEXT CONGRESS

The Administration Will Have the Support of Both Houses.

SMALL MAJORITY IN HOUSE

Republicans Gain Nine Seats in Senate. In the House the Republicans Will Have from Ten to Fifteen Majority. A Conservative Estimate Gives 186 Republicans, 164 Democrats and 7 Populists.

New York, Nov. 10.—Present returns seem to indicate that the Republicans have carried both branches of Congress and will have a fair working majority in each house.

In the Senate at least nine seats have been gained through the election of Republican legislatures in California, Delaware, Indiana, Nebraska, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, West Virginia and Wisconsin.

At present there are forty-four Republicans in the Senate, and this gain of nine seats would increase the Republican vote to 53, as against a combined opposition of 37. This gives an excellent working majority for the Republican side.

Among the defeated senators are White of California, Gray of Delaware, Turpie of Indiana, Smith of New Jersey, Murphy of New York, Roach of North Dakota, Faulkner of West Virginia and Mitchell of wisconsin.

In the present House of Representatives the Republicans have a majority of fifty-five. This will be materially reduced as a result of the elections, but still the Republican majority will vary anywhere from ten to fifteen. The exact majority will not be known in many cases until the results have been determined by an official count.

In the table which is given below the estimate is conservative and based upon the best information obtainable. This table gives the Republicans 186, Democrats 164 and Populists 7, a Republican majority over all of 15. In addition to the figures set forth in the table, it is claimed by the Republicans that Jerry Simpson, Populist, of Kansas, has been defeated; that one of the North Carolina districts has gone Republican; and that the congressional situation through the West looks favorable to the Republicans wherever a district is doubtful.

It is believed also, that the Republicans will carry Dayton's district in West Virginia, and that they may make gains in Missouri, where Silver Dollar Bland and Champ Clark are threatened.

The Senate.

The senate of the next congress will be made up as follows:

Alabama—John T. Morgan, Dem., E. W. Pettus, Dem.

THE BETTING ON ELECTION.

Estimated That $500,000 Changed Hands in Wall Street.

New York, Nov. 10.—Altogether it is estimated that fully $500,000 changed hands on the result of the election. Bell & Co., stock brokers at No. 80 Broadway, handled about half of this sum. They were the representatives of the big Tammany bettors.

Edward Bell, the senior member of the firm, and Edward Talcott, also a member, wagered large sums on their own accounts. Mr. Bell declined to say how much he had wagered, but people who ought to know declare that Roosevelt's election will cost Mr. Bell and Mr. Talcott something like $60,000.

Some of the biggest winners in Wall street are Jacob Field, a new member of the Stock Exchange, who is said to be about $55,000 ahead. Alfred De Cordova, whose winnings are estimated at from $40,000 to $50,000; Wasserman Brothers, stock brokers, $22,000; Washington Seligman, $12,000; Richard H. Halstead, stock broker, $10,000; H. P. Frothingham, $8,000; F. T. Adams, $8,000. Then there is the $20,000 bet made by Chairman Odell last Saturday, and also half a hundred other wagers, ranging from $200 to $1,000.

Richard Croker's loss will be more than $50,000, and John F. Carroll, Maurice Untermyer, Chairman McCarren of the Democratic state committee, all wagered large sums that found their way into Wall street.

The amount of money lost by the members of the Democratic Club, Croker's own particular organization, is believed to be over $200,000.

The Cuban Tariff.

Washington, Nov. 10.—The treasury's temporary tariff customs for Cuba will probably soon be modified in some particulars, especially in the tobacco schedule.

It is complained by persons engaged in the tobacco industry in Cuba that German tobacconists have discovered a method of competing with them which is liable to prove disastrous in more than one way.

The Germans can make a cigar for five dollars a thousand which they can send to Cuba, pay the present temporary duties, and ship from Cuba to the United States as Havana cigars, selling them here at eight dollars a thousand, and yet realizing a very neat profit over all expenses.

Eight dollars a thousand is as low a figure as the Cuban remonstrants say they can reach with the first cost of the cigars, and they consider the competition very unfair as regards prices alone, to say nothing of the damage done to them indirectly through the sales of inferior German stock under the Havana name.

The treasury will probably impose the Dingley cigar schedule in place of the temporary schedule of which complaint is made.

Deserters on Cruiser.

Newport, Nov. 10.—The cruiser Buffalo, Commander J. H. Hemphill, which left New York a few days ago for Manila, put in here during the night to await orders.

She had on board about seven hundred and fifty men for the ships of Admiral Dewey's fleet, but a considerable number deserted before the vessel left New York.

It is not known whether the Buffalo will proceed to the Pacific by way of the Suez canal or go around Cape Horn.

The Buffalo's machinery has broken down. Captain Hemphill asked for an investigation to fix the responsibility, and Secretary Long appointed Commander John McGowan, superintendent of the training station; Commander S. H. Stockton, president of the War College, and Chief Engineer R. S. Griffin of the Mayflower, a court of inquiry, with Lieutenant W. I. Chambers as judge advocate.

Race Issue in North Carolina.

Washington D. C., Nov. 10.—A special to the Star from Wilmington, N. C., gives the details of a mass meeting of six hundred citizens of that city yesterday to assert the supremacy of the white man.

Ex-Representative Waddell presided and read a series of resolutions declaring the determination of the whites to forever rule the city and to commence the work immediately, declaring that hereafter white labor should be given preference over colored and calling for the banishment of the negro newspaper publisher who printed an objectionable editorial recently.

An amendment was offered calling on the mayor and chief of police and the board of aldermen to vacate their offices now instead of waiting until their terms expire in March.

Well, Mr. Merchant-who-thinks-of-advertising, this is only one of the many corners in THE DAILY PRESS—it isn't the best located one, either; we can give you better—and if this attracts your attention in our endeavor to tell you how good advertising will get you a hearing before the purchasing public, doesn't common sense teach you that if you were having people reading your trade story instead of you're reading our argument about it, that it would be better for your business.

THE DAILY PRESS reaches the purchasing public that makes the profits for the merchant.

THE GENERAL RESULT.

Largely Increased Majorities for Republicans in Many States.

New York, Nov. 10.—The returns of Tuesday's elections show that large and important Republican gains have been made in Nebraska, Missouri, California and other sections of the West that were regarded as the stronghold of free silver and Populism.

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt has been elected governor of the state of New York and the legislature is Republican in both branches. A sound money Republican will be elected to the United States Senate to succeed Edward Murphy, who voted for the Teller resolution last winter. The Democrats have gained several congressmen in this state, in Illinois and the South, but they have lost in Missouri, California and other western states.

The Republicans will elect senators in New York, New Jersey, Delaware, West Virginia, Wisionsin and California to succeed Democrats, and they also gain two more in Missouri and Nebraska. The next Senate will be Republican and will be for sound money by a working majority.

The Democrats have gained a number of congressmen, but the Republicans will control the next House by a small majority and Thomas B. Reed will be re-elected speaker. Chairman Babcock of the Republican congressional campaign committee asserts that the next House will contain 199 or 200 Republicans.

In this state the Republicans made gains in many country districts and lost some votes in the cities. The plurality for Colonel Roosevelt is about 18,000. This may be changed slightly by the votes of the 9,000 volunteers in the field. These votes will not be canvassed until December 22, but they cannot materially change the result.

Tammany carried the ten Congress districts in New York county by large pluralities. Congressman Quigg in the Fourteenth district is beaten by 6,000 That was regarded as the strongest Republican district in the city. In this county the Republicans lose two state senators and gain one or two assemblymen. They also elect regular Republican assemblymen in two districts now represented by independent Republicans.

The result throughout the country shows some falling off in the Republican pluralities in Republican states, but in the West, where free silver was the only issue before the people, the Republicans have made large and important gains.

The Republican plurality in Massachusetts is 85,000. Connecticut is Republican by 20,000, and a Republican will be elected in the United States Senate. New Hampshire is Republican by a reduced majority, and the Republican plurality in Pennsylvania may not exceed 150,000. The Democrats gain five congressmen in that state. New Jersey and Delaware are safely Republican, insuring a gain of two United States senators. The Republicans have lost two congressmen in Maryland and other districts are close, but the Republicans have carried West Virginia, including the legislature, which will elect a senator to succeed Charles J. Faulkner, free silver Democrat.

In Ohio the Republican plurality is larger than last year, and there is no change in the political complexion of the delegation to Congress. Illinois goes Republican by 30,000, but the Democrats gain three congressmen. The Republicans have carried Indiana and will probably control the legislature, which will elect a successor to Senator Turpie, free silver Democrat.

The Democrats have made some gains in the southern states. In North Carolina the white Democrats have overthrown the Republican and Populist fusion and have probably elected a solid delegation to Congress.

No Republican congressmen have been elected in Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Texas and Arkansas.

The Republicans elect two congressmen in Kentucky and one district is doubtful.

Two surprises of the election are the votes in Kansas and Nebraska. In Kansas the Republicans elected the state ticket and six out of eight congressmen. Nebraska has gone Republican by about 25,000. The party will control the legislature.

W. J. Bryan's home city, county and congressional district have gone Republican. Lincoln county, in which Bryan lives, shows a Republican gain of 1,400.

The Republicans have apparently made almost a clean sweep of California, electing their state ticket, a large majority of the legislature and six of the seven congressmen.

The legislature will elect a successor to Senator White, free silver Democrat, who opposed the annexation of the Hawaiian islands.

Quay Says He is Safe.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 10.—The next Pennsylvania legislature, which meets in January and elects a successor to United States Senator Quay, will consist of 254 members on joint ballot, 128 votes being necessary to elect.

The friends of Senator Quay claim that they have 131 votes on joint ballot for Mr. Quay, three more than necessary.

The anti-Quay people claim they have elected sufficient members of the assembly to defeat the re-election of Senator Quay.

Senator Quay conceded the election of two Democrats to the legislature from his home county of Beaver by 400 majority.

Emperor William and Spain.

Madrid, Nov. 10.—Inquiries made here concerning the proposed visit of the Emperor of Germany to Spain, show that the Spanish government has been notified that two German warships, one of them having the emperor and empress of Germany on board, will arrive at Cadiz on November 20.

But it is claimed that it is not yet known whether the visit of their majesties is of a private or of an official character.

The Klondike Gold Output.

Washington, Nov. 10.—The reports which have reached the director of the mint show the Klondike gold output as reflected by the deposits in San Francisco and Seattle, to have been between $10,000,000 and $11,000,000 from July 1 to November 1.

These figures in detail will go into Director Robert's annual report.

SPAIN GIVEN ANSWER

The U. S. Peace Commission Replies to Her Queer Claims.

MUST OBSERNE PROTOCOL

American Peace Commissioners Will Not Yield to Demands for Return of Customs Collections at Manila. Will Insist That America Shall Observe Faithfully All Clauses of the Protocol.

Paris, Nov. 10.—Yesterday's session of the peace commissions began at 12.12 p. m., and ended at 3 p. m. The Americans presented the answer of the United States to the claims submitted on Friday in behalf of Spain.

The document consisted of nearly fifty sheets of typewritten matter.

The American presentation was a refutation of the Spanish allegation that because the words "possession," "ownership" or "cession" do not occur in the protocol clause touching upon the Philippine islands, the peace commissions have no right to discuss them here, and that even if they did it must be in the light of the alleged fact of an exterior agreement that Spain's sovereignty should not be impaired.

The Americans also answered Spain's claim for the restitution to her of public money and customs collections taken by the United States officials since the capitulation of Manila, and made reply to Spain's claims for an indemnity on account of the alleged imprisonment by the United States authorities of Spanish troops of Manila and for their consequent restraint from being of service to Spain in the suppression of the insurrection and the preservation of property.

Paris, Nov. 10.—The Gaulois says. "It is certain that the Spanish peace commission will maintain that all clauses of the protocol must be faithfully observed by the Americans, as they have been by the Spaniards, regarding Cuba and Porto Rico. The Spanish commission holds that no discussion on the Philippines can be tolerated, and that the sovereignty of Spain over these islands will be maintained.

"Spain, before admitting the possibility of any agreement in regard to the archipelago, exacts that the United States recognize that her rights in the Philippines are unassailable."

TROOPS FROM PORTO RICO.

The Roumanian Here With the Third Illinois Volunteers.

New York Nov. 10.—The United States transport Roumanian, Captain Walcott, which sailed from Arroyo and Ponce, Porto Rico, on November 3, arrived at quarantine yesterday morning, with all well.

She brought the Third Illinois volunteers, commanded by Colonel Bennett; forty-two officers and 984 men.

After a brief inspection at quarantine the Roumanian proceeded to Weehawken, where they arrived at noon.

The transport was made fast to freight dock H of the Erie Railroad and the work of unloading the baggage was soon commenced.

This was loaded on to one of the special cars in waiting. The work was slow. The regiment left in three section trains for Chicago.

FRENCH NAVAL PREPARATIONS.

The Mediterranean Fleet Ready for Sea.

Paris, Nov. 10.—The Echo de Paris publishes a dispatch from Toulon that says the entire French Mediterranean squadron is ready for sea.

It adds that Admiral Fournier, its commander, received a cipher dispatch yesterday evening, whereupon he signalled to the Forbin, a third class cruiser, to bank her fires, and the fastest torpedo boat conveyed orders to the admiral commanding the squadron of French cruisers and torpedo boats to assemble his fleet immediately at Toulon.

All the vessels there are prepared for action, and the arsenals and shipyards have been worked all night.

Later it was announced that Admiral Fournier had been summoned to Paris.

Dr. Parkhurst to Col. Roosevelt.

New York, Nov. 10.—The Rev. Dr. C. H. Parkhurst has sent to Colonel Roosevelt the following telegram:

Theodore Roosevelt, Oyster Bay, N. Y.:

Notwithstanding my regret for some circumstances attendant upon your nomination, I nevertheless cordially congratulate you upon your election, and shall show myself loyal to your administration in so far as it aims with a single eye to promote the collective interests of the state and the individual interests and well being of its citizens.

(Signed) CHARLES H. PARKHURST.

Soldiers Back from Santiago.

Norfolk, Nov. 9.—The transport Port Victor, which came up from Santiago yesterday afternoon, landed about forty immunes from the Fifth and Sixth regiments, some civilians, and a few sailors, whose times had expired.

She then sailed for New York. The Victor is the vessel which started from Santiago with miserable accommodations for the soldiers, and was held up by General Wood, military governor of Santiago, who ordered her back, and the ship was refitted.

More Outrages in Porto Rico.

Paris, Nov. 10.—Spaniards here having interests in the island of Porto Rico have been disturbed by private cable advices saying that the lives and property of Spaniards there are threatened by seditious persons in the country districts and suburbs of the cities, where assassinations and the burning of coffee plantations are said to be continuing.

The Government of Crete.

Constantinople, Nov. 10.—Great Britain, France, and Italy, have accepted Russia's proposal to appoint Prince George of Greece high commissioner of the powers in the island of Crete.

The Turkish government has appealed to Germany and Austria against the proposal; but the appeal has been ineffectual.

SURGEON-GENERAL WYMAN'S PLANS

The Marine Hospital Officers There.

Washington, Nov. 10.—Dr. Wyman, surgeon general of the Marine Hospital service, when questioned yesterday as to the letter Dr. Brunner is reported to have written him from Havana, urging his immediate presence there, said that he had not yet received this letter, and was not in a position to say what he should do when he did receive it.

Two physicians of his service, he said, are already on the spot, where they are doing duty as inspectors to prevent the transmission of yellow fever to the United States, and two others, who were engaged in a scientific investigation of yellow fever when interrupted by the outbreak of the war, are on their way to Cuba to renew this work.

The intimation conveyed by his comments was that he did not personally feel that he was called upon to go to Cuba.

At the treasury department it was stated that there seems to be no necessity for Dr. Wyman's going, and that the department would feel very loath to let him leave the country at this juncture on account of his remarkable organizing powers, and the need of keeping an officer of that sort at the head of affairs at home.

Movements of Battleships.

Brooklyn, Nov. 10.—Repairs to the battleship Massachusetts at the navy yard are practically completed and she is taking on ammunition. After coaling she will leave the yard on Wednesday, November 16, and anchor off Tompkinsville waiting orders.

A consignment of six hundred men arrived at the navy yard yesterday by way of the Pennsylvania railroad from Newport News to take the places of the men who went on the Buffalo last week to Manila to fill the complements on the ships under Rear Admiral Dewey. They were taken to the receiving ship Vermont and are ready for draft.

When the navy department decided to lay up the torpedo boats the Brooklyn yard was selected as the place of rest. With a view of accommodating these vessels there is now being laid in and along the slip from which the Maine was launched a marine railroad, and alongside the slip heavy timbers are being placed, twenty feet apart, to which the boats will be shifted and laid away, it having been decided that this is the best way to preserve the vessels, which have a skin of but three-sixteenths of an inch, from the corroding and rusting influences of the water.

When the boats are thus laid up a shed will be built over them for protection from the influences of the elements. The torpedo boats coming to Brooklyn are the Foote, Rodgers, Porter, Ericsson, Winslow and Cushing.

South Carolina Race Trouble.

Charleston, S. C., Nov. 10.—A special from Greenwood, S. C., says:

Intense excitement prevailed here all day yesterday because of the shooting of Boaz Etheridge, one of the election judges at Phoenix, and a subsequent riot between the whites and the blacks at that place, in which J. R. Tolbert and several negroes were mortally wounded.

The negroes had a separate box, in charge of Tolbert, in which those who could not vote in the regular boxes could deposit certificates that they were not allowed to vote for R. R. Tolbert for Congress, which certificates he expected to use in his contest for Latimer's seat.

Mr. Etheridge attempted to take the box in charge and was shot dead by one of the negroes who were crowding around it.

Immediately the few white men who could procure arms or had them, opened fire on the crowd.

The whites, several hundred strong, are well armed and determined, and if the leaders in Tuesday's trouble are caught no power on earth can save them from a lynching.

The Lord Mayor's Show.

London, Nov. 10.—The lord mayor's show yesterday was favored with fine weather and was witnessed by the usual crowds of people.

The enthusiasm was divided between the car representing the Soudan, with the soldiers of the regiments which took part in the battle of Omdurman, and the car representing the English speaking races.

The latter displayed, among other things, Britannia and Columbia seated beneath a canopy, while the American flag was borne by a British sailor and the British flag was carried by an American sailor.

There was also an illustration of Admiral Tatnall's "Blood is thicker than water" and of Admiral Kimberley's repetition of the same expression to Captain Kane after the disaster at Apia, Samoa. This car was warmly acclaimed.

The Death of Harold Frederic.

London, Nov. 10.—Miss Kate Lyon, a member of the household of Harold Frederic, the late correspondent here of the New York Times, who died on October 19 at Kenley, and Mrs. Athelie Mills, the Christian Scientist, who attended Mr. Frederic, and against whom a verdict of manslaughter was returned by a coroner's jury Tuesday, were arraigned in the police court at Kenley yesterday on this charge, and were remanded for a week. They were admitted to bail.

A Great Flood in China.

London, Nov. 10.—A dispatch has been received here from the Baptist mission in the province of Shan-Tung, China, which says the Hoang-Ho, or Yellow river, has left its bed near the city of Tsi-Nan-Fu, capital of Shan-Tung province, and flooded 2,000 square miles of territory.

Hundreds of villages have been destroyed, and a million people are threatened with famine.

The Fashoda Dispute.

Paris, Nov. 10.—The French newspapers generally approve the silence of the Chamber of Deputies on the subject of Fashoda, and congratulate M. Brunet on his withdrawal of the interpellation which he intended to address to the government on the subject.

The Siecle says that it regrets that Major Marchand did not observe the same reticence at Caire.

Aftermath of Election.

In the aftermath of knowledge of exact results and the natural dispelling of gloom that always comes to the defeated party for the moment, the Democrats are looking about and seeing that they have in their hour of general defeat, at least made encouraging gains in some sections. The complete returns from the twenty-one counties tn ihe State show that Voorhees is elected by a plurality of 5,864. The official figures may change this a few hundred one way or the other, but in a general way the figures are correct.

The returns show that the Democrats have carried six counties for Crane against three for McGill three years ago, and have total pluralities of 16,645 against 7,241 in 1895. From a Republican standpoint, of course, the three years ago is regarded as an extraordinary one and the result of which they do not anticipate will be duplicated under such conditions as prevailed this year.

For the past four years the Republicans have had a solid Congressional delegation from New Jersey, but this time two Democrats were successful. The later returns make no changes in the Legislature as indicated by the earlier calculations. The Republicans elected seven of their eight Senatorial candidates, the one Democrat being Allan L. McDermott, in Hudson county. With the seven hold-over Senators the Republicans will have a total of 14 members and the Democrats 7, a Republican majority of 7. In the Assembly the Republicans will have 36 members and the Democrats 24, a Republican majority of 12. This gives a Republican majority on joint ballot of 19, and practically assures the election of John Kean to succeed United States Senator James Smith.

Chemical Proof of God.

A singular argument was recently presented before the British Association in advocacy of the existence of supreme intelligence by Professor Zapp. Long ago Pasteur discovered the connection between the visible activity of certain chemical bodies and a peculiar asymmetry in their structure, like the relation between the right and left hand, where the want of symmetry is strictly complementary. When light passes through solutions of bodies with molecules in twin pairs, it is unaffected. When the solution has an excess of right or left hand structures, light is twisted accordingly. When organisms act on a neutral solution, they transform it into an active one by selective absorption of one set of the component parts. Organisms alone produce isolated bodies of right and left handed asymmetry. It also appears to be the case that in artificially formed organic bodies the twin halves are in such equal proportion that they neutralize each other.

Professor Zapp applies to these facts a peculiar sort of reasoning. Chemists are able through the help of the microscope to pick out and combine these asymmetric molecules in compounding pairs and so to make optically active bodies. Here is the operation of man, a living organism, acting through the microscope to produce active organisms. At the first beginning of life there must have been some selective agency comparable to the action of the chemist with his microscope. This was the thing to be demonstrated. The reader may be left to himself to decide how far the learned professor proves his point. But it may be remarked in passing that it is to the infinite satisfaction of man that he has far more conclusive reasons for believing in a first cause than any which can be deduced from molecular chemistry.

CRUISING TO SAVE LOST SOULS.

A unique expedition is the cruise of the Countess Schimmelmann, a Danish noblewoman, who sold her jewels and left home as a Christian missionary. After cruising the most important ports of Europe she, with her three adopted sons, set sail for America in her splendid yacht Duen. Pictures are from the New York Herald.

The Daily Press does not do things by halves, as was emphasized in the manner the election returns in this vicinity were presented in yesterday's paper. It was aimed to make the returns complete, correct and concise and it was accomplished. By glancing over the tabular forms presented in this paper those interested could tell in a look just what they wanted to find out. The system of the arranging the vote made it very easy to make comparisons between various candidates and to quickly arrive at information that election figures show to the politicans and others interested in the exact results.

Now is the time to commence agitating the matter of bringing before the next Legislature the project of consolidating Plainfield and North Plainfield into one municipality. There is a similar plan on foot to consolidate all the municipalities in Hudson county into one city. It is urged that if such action was taken it would reduce the taxes by the elimination of unnecessary officers and the reduction of other expenses that each town now as to maintain separately. What is true of Hudson county is true of the Plainfields.

Colonel Snyder, the Democratic candidate whom Congressman Fowler defeated, takes the Bepublican victory cheerfully and philosophically. Col. Snyder takes the following view of the election:

Naturally I would be more pleased had I been victorious, but I am beaten clean and clear and I heartily congratulate Mr. Fowler on his re-election, and I hope that he will enjoy the fruits of his victory. He is a gentleman and a scholar and he makes a good Congressman. I am a sort of a good loser, however, and I want to say this much, the Democrats will be in the fight again, you know, and we will get there next time.

Political gossip has connected the names of Councilman Barrows, Marion Ackerman, J. F. Hubbard and Nelson Runyon, of the Republicans, and James E. Martine and Leonard Spangenberg, of the Democrats, with the Mayorality nomination to be made in a short time.

On Monday a conservative Republican leader in Union county figured that Voorhees would receive a plurality of 1,575 outside of Elizabeth. He was just about 500 out of the way.

While other sections of the State will now settle down to the even tenor of their way Plainfield is scheduled for more political excitement than is usual within the next month.

Evidently the voters misconstrued the advice of David B. Hill in New York. Instead of knocking down the election officers they knocked down the Democratic candidates.

Mr. Voorhees has the distinction of not only being a former Governor but a Governor-elect of New Jersey. He is the only man who has ever had that distinction.

Foster Voorhees was once a school teacher, but it can't be that it was in that position that he learned to wallop the Democrats so dexteriously.

We wonder how much the Democrats would have given to have had such weather as prevails today arrive two days earlier.

Crokerism doesn't seem to be a favorite political morsel for the up-State Republicans of New York.

The way the Democrats spell it now is i-i-c-k-e-d.

Well, what are going to do about city election.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

"I've heard roosters crow one day that had their heads chopped off the next" is a truism that is aptly illustrated in "The Sleeping City," which comes to Music Hall tomorrow night. The plot, which is skillfully woven, tells of the trials of one, Jack Morton, who, through the machinations of his arch enemy, is sent to prison and afterward to an asylum. You may have seen all the so called new plays, but until you witness "The Sleeping City" you will not have seen the latest in stage craft, the acme of realism so far as the limitations of the stage will permit. The sensational escape from Sing Sing and the burning asylum are thrilling in the extreme, and these scenes enthuse the audience to the uttermost. Manager A. Q. Scammon has a company without a weak spot, and it is said that each player is thoroughly suited to his or her part. The specialties are sparkling and up-to-date. There are four acts and from first to last there is interest and amusement enough to entertain and satisfy the most exacting critic.

"Kit, the Arkansas Traveler," will be seen at Music Hall Tuesday of next week. Henry Cranfrau, son of the famous original of this great play, appears as Kit and will have a strong supporting company, special scenery, etc.

PASSING COMMENT

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

There are two little towns, one in western New York and the other in Rhode Island, that are brought in rather close connection with Plainfield owing to the fact that, like this city, they are gathering places for Seventh Day Baptists. Alfred, N. Y., is particularly well-known here as the site of Alfred University, the educational institution of that denomination. Alfred is a quaint little village half hidden away among the hills of western New York. It lies in a fertile valley with hills rising sharply on either hand. There is a terra cotta works, a machine shop and several stores which occupy the attention of part of the eight hundred people that make up the population of the village. The attention of the remainder is devoted to the cultivation of the soil. The university is the principal part of the town with its two hundred students. The buildings are scattered about the side hill above the village and are well equipped. The latest addition is the Babcock Hall of Science, a gift of the late George H. Babcock of this city. It is a co educational institution and is attended by students from all over the country although many are drawn from right around in that section. Many of the students board around the village but there are two dormitories for those that prefer that phase of college life. It seems more like a great family than a college for everybody knows each other and the parts of college life, prominent in many other similar institutions are absent here.

A CONFESSION.

"Do!" said she, holding out the innocent-looking little book with the flowered cover. "You promised."

"I must have time to think it over," I protested.

"That would never do. The confessions have to be quite impromptu."

I turned over the leaves doubtfully and shook my head. "The questions are terribly searching. Why, I should have to confess enough to hang me!"

"Why not—if you deserve hanging? I dare say you do, you know." I hadn't looked at it like that.

"Now," said she, firmly. "This is a J pen—you use a J, don't you?" She planted the writing materials in front of me with an air of determination.

"Well—if I must—" I took up the pen and stared blankly at the ceiling. "What am I to do?"

"First you write your name—here." She came and stood beside me and pointed over my shoulder. So I subscribed myself hers to command. "Now your age."

"What does that matter?"

"It shows how much wisdom may be expected."

"Thirty-one, then, if I must. It's awfully old, isn't it?"

"No—o; not for a man. Now the date. That's right."

"Now you must answer the questions. What is the thought uppermost in your mind?"

"Your pleasant company."

"O! whatever will people think?"

"That I've got one answer right." I leaned back triumphantly in my chair.

"Now you must be quite serious, please. This is a very important question. Is life worth living? No! You are not to write till you have told me the answer."

"In the present company—yes."

"You are not to mention me.

"Then my inspiration's gone." I laid down the pen.

"Please!" I took it up again.

"If the liver works. Will that do?"

"It isn't original," she objected. "Four people have written it already."

"I know," said I, seizing the book and writing rapidly. It depends on the answer to another question, when I ask it.

"That's altogether too vague."

"Shall I make it more explicit?" I looked right at her, and she went prettily pink.

"There's no room for any more," said she, hastily. "Now you turn over. You have a lot more questions to answer."

Then I committed myself to the statements that my favorite author was Shakespeare, (she wouldn't hear of Kipling!) my favorite composer, Wagner, (which wasn't true,) my favorite drink, beer, (which was,) and various other important facts.

"Now for your aesthetic tastes. Your favorite colors?"

Blue in eyes and brown in hair;
Whatever color my lady wear!

"Shall I add, 'gray,' at present?" I inquired. Of course, that was what she was wearing.

"I don't know what color your lady wears. I didn't know you had 'a lady.'"

"There is one I should like to have."

"But that isn't the question," she said quickly.

"But it's going to be."

"Never mind. Go on. Your favorite name?"

"Edith, of course. That is her name, you know."

"You're making game."

"Indeed I'm not."

"Now your favorite qualities in woman. Seriously, mind! I really want to know."

"Yours," I announced, decidedly. She hastily removed the ink-pot.

"I won't have any more nonsense."

"You told me to put down the truth."

"I shall have to tear it all out."

"Well," I sighed, "I'll put something else; but it won't be so true." She released the ink. "All," I wrote.

"The next question is a poser," I remarked, "If not yourself who would you be?"

"Some great hero—or writer—or painter?" she suggested, looking over my shoulder. Her hair just brushed me—and that made my mind up.

"I'm not so ambitious as that."

"Well, put down whatever you wish, so long as it's something nice."

"She—it—is very nice."

"But it mustn't be anything silly."

"Um! I'm afraid, perhaps, what I want—"

"Want to be?"

"To have."

"Oh, no! That's not the question at all."

"But suppose that my ambition is to possess something—or somebo—"

"That isn't the point," she interrupted. "Do answer it properly."

"I know. Whomever you liked best."

"Every one will laugh at you."

"I don't mind." I nibbled the penholder thoughtfully. "Is marriage a failure? What am I to say to that?"

"Well—er—you don't know."

"I might say I'll try."

"Yes—er—but—"

"With someone's assistance?" She blushed furiously. "Do you know, Edith, it's a very difficult question to answer—alone?" She toyed with her handkerchief.

"Perhaps you'd better skip it," she advised.

"I don't want to skip it," I answered, firmly, laying down the pen. "What I want is someone to help me in answering it. Someone of whom I'm very fond, very fond." I stood up and took hold of her hands. "Will you try, Edie, my dear?"

The answer is going to be a very big "No"; for little Edie—my Edie—said "Yes."—Black and White.

NUNS AS WAR NURSES

SISTERS CARE FOR OUR FEVER-STRICKEN SOLDIERS.

President McKinley Expresses His Gratitude For Their Services In the Spanish War—Prominent Part Played by Them During the Civil War.

Hundreds of Sisters of Charity and Sisters of Mercy are nursing the heroes of the Cuban campaign back to health at the various army hospitals throughout the south.

The sisters have been famous as nurses in wartimes, and there have been few big battles in modern history where the wounded have not been nursed by them. Their work has been perpetuated in song and story, and their deeds of mercy are recorded along with the deeds of armies and nations.

During the civil war in America the sisters played prominent parts on both sides, and there are but few survivors of that great struggle who will not testify to their kindness, bravery and gentle ministrations. They were on the battlefield, in the hospital, in the camp and in the cities. Their own private institutions suffered while they were engaged in alleviating the sufferings of the wounded and dying.

Among the soldiers who bore testimony to the skill of these sisters was Major William McKinley, now president of the United States. In one of the many battles in which he participated he received a wound that necessitated a lengthy stay in one of the hospitals. There he came to know the sisters and to admire them. Near the end of the war he met the mother superior of the order in America, and, after praising the work of her companions, exacted a promise from her that in case America should ever become involved in another war she or her successor would supply it with nurses.

Major McKinley became president after many years, and the war with Spain broke out. Though pressed with a thousand cares and his attention distracted frequently, he had time to consider the question of nurses. Then after long years came back remembrances of the work of the sisters and the promises he had received from the then mother superior. She had long since died, but he immediately wrote to her successor, Mother Superior Marietta, stationed at Emmitsburg, Md., where is located the head house of the order in America.

President McKinley asked her for 100 nurses, and she immediately agreed to furnish them. Orders were sent to the various institutions throughout the country for all the sisters to hold themselves in readiness to start for the front at an hour's notice. Then, as they were needed, the president called for the nurses, and they were promptly supplied. Forty went to Santiago, more to Porto Rico, to Tampa, Jacksonville, Fort Thomas, Ky., and Chicakamauga, until the 100 had been exhausted.

But they had again shown that they were excellent war nurses, and the president found that he could use more of them, so he asked Mother Marietta for another 100.

When the call came for the nurses to qualify for service as nurses at Santiago, Mother Marietta accompanied the band to Washington. Her headquarters were at the Providence hospital, which is under the charge of Sister Beatrice. When President McKinley was told of Mother Marietta's presence in Washington, he asked that she call at the White House that he might express to her personally his appreciation of the offer of the sisters to serve whenever or wherever needed. Sister Beatrice accompanied Mother Marietta on the visit to the White House. The call was necessarily a brief one. But the president was most cordial in his expression of appreciation. He said that he remembered the services the sisters had rendered during the civil war and was glad to welcome them back to the army.—San Francisco Monitor.

Method of Catechizing.

When children can repeat their catechism, their parents should begin to exercise their reason and teach them to think by little short questions, such as may help them to understand the meaning of words and the sense of what they learn. For here lies the main difficulty of catechists—how to engage the attention of children and impress on their tender mind a due sense of what is contained in the catechism. Boudon in his excellent treatise on this subject observes that the catechism is often of no use to children, because they learn it only by rote, without understanding it. He says that he had found children of 12 or 14 years of age who knew perfectly well how to answer the questions in the catechism and who nevertheless had no knowledge of God. They would say and repeat that "there is one God and three persons—that one mortal sin was sufficient to damn a person," etc., but they pronounced all this like parrots, without any meaning and without having any proper ideas of religion.

To Celebrate the Century's End.

Pope Leo has put in the charge of an international committee, Italian, French and German, the duty of providing for a proper celebration of the end of the century. This committee has arranged pilgrimages to various holy places, to Lourdes in France, Loretto in Italy, St. Iago de Compostella in Spain, etc., and especially to Rome. In particular there is to be "a dedication of the Catholic world anew to the divine heart of Jesus." In Germany the bishop of Munster proposes to build a grand church in honor of the heart of Jesus to be dedicated June 16, 1900.—Public Opinion.

Woman.

Shall she come down and on our level stand?
Nay, God forbid it! May a mother's eyes—
Love's earliest home, the heaven of babyland—
Forever bend above us as we rise!
—Father Tabb.

CORRECTION OF CHILDREN.

Parents Must Exercise a Good Deal of Discrimination and Discretion.

Provoke not your children to anger, but bring them up in the discipline and correction of the Lord.—Ephesians vi, 4.

The passions of children are certain motions or affections of the soul, which from the disobedience of our first parents are become rebellious and exceedingly dangerous. These corrupt inclinations must be prudently restrained in their infancy, that they may be brought under the government of reason. When by proper management their inordinacy is pruned away, the passions may prove excellent instruments of virtue, but if cherished or not restrained in children they soon grow unruly, pervert the judgment and precipitate them into all kinds of vice and wretchedness. It is the duty of parents therefore to curb the passions of their children, to make them subject and obedient to reason and to discountenance everything that savors of pride, vanity, envy, furious anger, etc. It is also proper to show them the unreasonableness and deformity of any such passions and to accustom them to frequent disappointments by checking their eager desires for this or that favorite object. The correction of children ought to commence as soon as they begin to discern between good and evil. This branch of education will appear to be of more consequence than parents generally imagine, if we consider the nature of true religion and how the authority of parents may be made subservient to it. True religion consists in choosing and following the will of God in preference to our own will.

His authority is absolute; it should silence all our perverse reasonings and obtain from us an implicit obedience to all his commands. When a parent therefore requires from the child an entire submission to his authority, such submission will prove an excellent handmaid to religion. Let the object only be changed and filial obedience to the parent become piety toward God. With respect to the correction of children, a good deal of discrimination and discretion must be exercised by the parent. In cases of obstinacy, whether it take the form of violence or sullenness, if candor and calm representations produce not the desired effect on the child's mind, punishment must be resorted to, but it should be sparing and moderate and inflicted gradually, so as to give time to the child to recover itself from its fit of perverseness, and when its temper is altered and bends to the yoke with docility, the punishment should cease. On some occasions it will be proper to punish a child in the way of some restriction or by exacting some moderate sacrifice (such as staying in the house for some hours) in order to prevent salutary impressions from slipping too soon from his mind through youthful levity. Undoubtedly the faults of children are to be counteracted, but by moderate measures, unaccompanied by anger and violence in the parent. As to the system of those who reprobate all punishment of children, it is certainly founded on an erroneous view of human nature.

What can be more false than to represent and treat man as a creature always disposed of himself to act rightly and to cultivate every good disposition as the best means of promoting his happiness? Had this been the case we should have seen virtue clearly predominant in the world and vice merely an exception to the general state of things. The great business of education therefore should be to counteract the natural bent of the mind to evil, and to instill and foster, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, a new nature, the very reverse of that which we all bring into the world as children of sinful Adam.

Catholics In Cuba and Porto Rico.

If, as seems most probable, says The Ave Maria, Cuba and Porto Rico ultimately become a part of the United States, the number of Catholics added to our census will be about 3,000,000. Three new sees—one of them, Santiago de Cuba, is the oldest in the western hemisphere—will most probably, though not necessarily, be attached to the hierarchy of the United States. Just at this juncture it will interest our readers to learn that Cuba was once known to the world as "the Isle of the Ave Maria."

Brief Catholic Items.

The pope has sent the queen of Holland, together with an autograph letter of congratulation, a magnificent mosaic table.

It is stated that Spain supports from her treasury 117,000 monks, nuns and other persons under religious vows.

Vatican statistics state that from 600 to 700 converts to Rome are made every month in England and Wales.

Father Richard Henebery of the Catholic university at Washington occupies the only chair of Gaelic in the country.

Leo XIII has created 117 cardinals during his pontificate, and during the same period 123 members of the Sacred college have died.

The new Chinese embassador to France is a Catholic. His name is Tsching-ta-Jen, and he belongs to a family that was converted 200 years ago and has stuck to the faith ever since.

News comes from Rome that the "war has already resulted in a loss to the papal revenues of 300,000 francs. The receipts of Peter's pence, both from Spain and America, have been greatly diminished."

When news came to the Vatican of the passing away of the Iron Chancellor, the pope, says "M. A. P.," turned familiarly to Dr. Lapponi and said with a smile, "After all, my poor body proves more resistant than those of the giants of the century."

It is said that Bishop Becker of Savannah has now on hand money enough with which to commence the rebuilding of his cathedral, which was destroyed by fire some time ago. The new edifice will be built on the same lines as the old cathedral.

Provinz Ostpreußen.

Ortelsburg. In dem königlichen Forst Dzadken bemerkten zwei Forstbeamte, daß mehrere russische Offiziere auf preußischem Gebiet jagten. Der Aufforderung der beiden Förster, die Gewehre abzugeben, wurde nicht stattgegeben. Die Offiziere verhöhnten vielmehr die beiden Beamten. Nachdem diese ihre Aufforderung noch mehrmals vergeblich wiederholt hatten, schossen sie und verletzten einen der Offiziere. Diese ergriffen nunmehr die Flucht und nahmen den verwundeten Kameraden mit. Hinter dem Grenzgraben angelangt, befahlen sie dann den russischen Grenzsoldaten, auf die beiden Förster zu schießen. Die Soldaten thaten dies auch, trafen aber nicht.

The Talk of the People

It's of Interest to our Readers Because it Refers to Plainfield People.

It's astonishing how good news will spread. From every ward and street we hear of our people talking about the workings of the little conqueror. Merit and honorable methods receive their just reward. So many cases are cropping up that it is next to impossible to investigate them all, but we have taken a few in hand and give them publicity for the benefit of our readers. Our representative obtained the following statement of facts in a personal interview. They are true in every particular and no stronger evidence can be obtained than home endorsement.

Mrs. Maagaret Reville, of 732 West Third street, says:— "For a long time I was troubled with a lame and weak back and I obtained a box of Doan's Kidney Pills from L. W. Randolph's drug store and began using them according to directions. It was only a short time before I felt the good effects and from that time on I improved steadily under the treatment. My back had before pained me and was so weak and sore that I dreaded to bend over and when I had a cold or over-exerted myself I suffered severely. I used several different kidney remedies but did not get but little if any relief. I give Doan's Kidney Pills all the credit for my improvement. I think they are a fine medicine for a lame back. My experience with them has been very satisfactory and I do not hesitate to recommend them to anyone suffering from kidney troubles."

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers, price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

THE YOUNG COWBOY.

By Oscar Thomas.

"The finest horseman I ever saw," exclaimed a gentleman who, with a party of pretty and fashionable girls, was watching the performance on the track from a box on the grand stand.

"Perfectly lovely!" exclaimed one of the girls, while "And so handsome, too!" said another charming admirer; and then there arose a chorus of "Ohs!" as the rider gracefully performed a daring feat.

The object of their admiration was Tom Baker, formerly cowboy, but now "doing" country fairs in New England States with a troop of rough riders.

Tom was only twenty, and never until a month previous had he been a hundred miles from Western life. Now here he was, "showing off," as he put it, before thousands of well-dressed people, who "howled like young bucks at a war dance" every time he shot at the glass balls.

It was easy work for Tom to break the globes at each shot, for Jim threw them, and he and Jim had signals that no one else understood; so after Tom had finished his fancy riding with Wild Fox, his trained broncho, Jim would ride ahead, cantering this way and that, tossing into the air colored glass balls which Tom broke in a graceful manner at each crack of his superb rifle.

Tom was a picture as he sat astride Wild Fox, a thoroughbred, dressed in his cowboy costume of buckskin, a large felt hat poised carelessly on a perfectly shaped head while his bronzed face, with its deep thoughtful expression was set in a frame of golden curls that contrasted strangely with the rest of his appearance. He rode a horse as though he were part of it; he was the envy of every small boy on the grounds, and the admired of hosts of maidens—and not a few matrons also.

But while many who watched talked of Tom and the wonderful skill he displayed, Tom was thinking of practical, every day matters, and as the last "crack" sounded from his rifle he wondered if "Oily Skin" as he called the manager, would 'ante up" his week's wages when due.

Tom seldom laughed. His life had been too hard and dreary for that; but a peculiar smile stole into his eyes as he thought what might happen to "Oily Skin" if he didn't pay up.

He pulled Wild Fox far back on his haunches, right in front of the well-filled boxes, and with a graceful bow touched his slouch hat and the show was done. So said the gentleman in the box; but he didn't know, neither did others. A show not on the bills was already beginning.

The first Tom knew, there was a great commotion down the track, a scattering and mad scrambling of the crowd, which seemed to break away before there burst into view a pair of frightened runaways attached to a fashionable turnout, the driver's seat empty! Tom pushed in towards the fence to give them room to pass, and as they went by in their mad rush, the carriage swaying and snapping, two little frightened faces peered over the seats pitiful to witness.

With the words, "At 'em, Fox!" Tom was bending low in the saddle, tearing after the maddened animals and with each step getting nearer.

How the crowd watched! Every one stood up who could and how the faces blanched when crack! went a rear axle and a side of the carriage dragged in the dust. But a cheer arose as Wild Fox, now close behind, lightly cleared the broken wheel with a bound, and in a few strides reached the frightened horses' heads.

"He's motioning to the children!" excitedly spoke a girl.

"He's trying to reach the horses' heads," exclaimed the gentleman. "But he can't stop the beasts that way."

"Oh, look!" shouted another girl, for Tom had half risen on his feet on the back of Wild Fox, and with a spring landed on the back of the nearer of the horses both of which were now madly plunging.

A shout went up from the grand stand. The runaways were half way around the track. Tom heard the shout, though faintly and muttered.—

"If they dont stumble, I'll fix the cusses."

And now a wail went up from the onlookers for Tom had apparently fallen from the horse and dropped out of sight; but he had only slipped to the pole between the runaways, and holding on with his legs tightly gripped, and getting badly bruised at each lunge, he was reaching for the ribbons dangling from the bits.

Another moment a mighty roar was heard from thousands of throats for there stood Tom between the horses, braced back with all his might, and—well, even wild horses know a master, and a minute after they came up along the grand stand at a dog trot.

A frightened father and weeping mother held two darling children to their breasts while Tom, with apparently no effort, jumped astride of Wild Fox (who had followed his master closely) and tried to ride away.

But the crowd wouldn't let him go. They shouted at him, cheered him, and "gave me a great bluff," as he afterwards said. Then a portly gentleman made his way to him and his lips trembled when he talked. He held out his hand and wrung Tom's hand, and said.—

"My boy, how can I thank you?"

"Don't want any thanks sir. Why, that's nothing to punchin' steers," he added. "The little fellers (they happened to be girls) was scared a bit, but I guess not hurt, eh?"

The gentleman talked on; he must do something for Tom—why, he had saved his children! What was Tom's name, and where did he live? to which Tom answered, "Tom Baker, sir, and I live twenty miles west of Agents Station, near Cherokee strip. It's a ranch," he added indifferently.

The crowd closed in, and a rousing three cheers, with a tiger, came from the grand stand, and Tom looked up, and amid the waving of kerchiefs his eye caught sight of the prettiest girl he had ever seen in all his life. She sat in a box with a number of other girls, and she was waving her handkerchief and smiling at him, too. Tom was so taken aback that for an instant he nearly fell from his horse; but in another moment he had recovered from what was to him a fright, and sitting very erect in his saddle, he gracefully lifted his big hat, blushing through his tan as he did so, and then in a manner boyishly shy, tossed a kiss to the pretty face before him.

As he rode rapidly away, he heard a chorus of voices exclaim with mingled amusement and dismay,—

"Oh, Nan!"

"And so her name is Nan," he thought.

* * * * * *

A number of years after this episode, a man paused before a picture that hung in a conspicuous position in the gallery of the Metropolitan Art Museum. The picture was nearly life size, and represented a cowboy seated on a rugged horse. It was eventide, and in the distance could be seen the camp fires of his comrades, while in another direction was a black mass—the tired steers. He was dressed in buckskin and wore a big slouch hat that half shaded his eyes while across the pommel of his saddle rested his rifle, the barrel gleaming in the last rays of the setting sun. On either side and just below the filled cartridge belt protruded the butts of heavy revolvers. One hand hung idly by his side, while the other carelessly held the bridle rein.

You might, indeed, have turned away after noting these details of the picture were it not for the face of the subject, but that face would hold you to the spot.

Under the slouch hat clustered ringlets of golden hair, which framed the bronzed face and seemed to cause the bright blue eyes to fairly twinkle, eyes at once boyish and again strong and manly. You could almost see the bright face break into a smile; the next instant it took on a look of deep thought, and was a face full of resolution, strength and courage.

"The Young Cowboy," the picture was labelled, and hundreds gazed at it, for it was a masterpiece of its kind.

On this day the gallery was empty save for the man who stood in front of the painting. He was tall and well built, and his dress at once proclaimed him of the "well to do;" yet his face was a deep tan, showing his exposure to outdoor life.

He stood looking at the portrait before him, seemingly in a revery, which was broken by the words,—

"Well, Tom, you did well."

Footsteps approached and he turned away; but before taking many steps he passed a girl whose face instantly caused him to pause and watch her. She walked up to the painting and gazed earnestly at the figure on the canvas.

He noted her trim figure and the womanly grace of every movement, and as she half turned her face he stood irresolute a moment, then went forward boldly.

Just before he reached her side she turned; meeting his look, a flush of recollection rushed to her face which quickly changed to one of mingled confusion and gladness, the last of which he was quick to notice.

"Pardon me, but is not this"—hesitatingly—"Nan?"

He spoke with a tinge of emotion.

"Yes," she answered frankly, "and this is—she glanced quickly up at the painting and then back at him—"Tom?"

Well, it rained outside, but these two found a settle in a cosy corner and heeded not the storm.

A long time afterward, the girl and the man passed down the entrance steps together. As he raised an umbrella, he bent low and asked,—

"Nan, are you afraid of the rain?"

"I fear nothing when Tom"—how she lingered over the name—"is near."

Down the steps they went. Of course it rained slightly and there was only one umbrella, and they walked close together—yes, very close.

Making Up a Boston Mind.

"Do you love me, sweetheart?" he asked, passionately.

"I think I do, Henderson," she replied demurely. "But love is such a funny term and means so many things. In Boston it involves so much that is abstract, in Chicago so much that is passionate, and in New York so much that is plainly business, that I hesitate to say."

"Still, dear, do you love me?"

"I think I do, Henderson. I am an American girl. Born in Boston, I think of you as differentiated from yourself. Educated in Chicago, I am not indifferent to love. And since you are rated as a millionaire in New York I rather think I can be happy with you. Yes, Henderson, I will come to your arms."—Harper's Bazar.

THE FOOTBALL HERO.

GETTING INTO FORM FOR THE GREAT COLLEGE GAMES.

The Leading Players of the Four Most Important College Elevens in the United States and What They Have to Accomplish.

In the east football will begin this year with three youngsters at the head of three of the most important college elevens in the United States, and a seasoned player as captain of the fourth team of the big four.

Dibblee of Harvard; Outland, of Pennsylvania, and Chamberlin, of Yale, cannot measure their years of experience with those of Kelly, of Princeton. In spite of Kelly's prestige, his knowledge of the game and his great ability as an aggressive player, his task, with that of Dibblee's, is the hardest in the quadrangular group standing for the best of American football.

The reason for this lies in the fact that each man finds it neccessary to build up not only a team that can play, but a team that thinks it can play. The spirit of Harvard and

Princeton was crushed by the unexpected reverses received at Yale's hands last year, and it will take much first-class missionary work to put the men into the proper humor for winning work.

Outland's task is not entirely an easy one, as he succeeded a winning captain, and at the outset was something of a stranger to the duties that are required of the head of an eleven. One thing in his favor, however, is the hitherto cordial relations between the members of "Pennsy's" football eleven and the harmonious support with which they always "back up" the head of the team. They seem to be keeping up their record this year.

If any one of the four might be said to have comparatively easy sailing, Chamberlin appears to be the man. He is the leader of an eleven that finished the season of 1897 with an overwhelming stock of confidence in its ability to defeat anything in the football line. Criticised, abused, even sneered at when the season was in its infancy, Yale made a finish that startled the sporting world and sent the youngsters of the eleven home with pride beaming from every lineament of their features—and it was pardonable pride, too.

Something about the personal characteristics of the present captains is not amiss.

Dibblee and Kelly belong to the dashing class of players. The latter, particularly, when the sky seems overcast for Princeton in important matches, has evoked the wildest enthusiasm from his college partisans by making an extraordinary run upon the field, which appealed even to the frigid sensibilities of the cold-blooded critics.

Dibblee is a good general as well as a good football player. He is reputed to possess those most important qualifications of a leader which combine the knack of getting the best of everything out of his fellows, and at the same time making each man on the team believe that but for him the game would have been lost. Much is expected of Dibblee by the college men, and if he fails to pull Harvard out of the ruck something like the gloom of absolute discouragement is likely to settle upon the entire institution. Of course, he cannot accomplish wonders without the assistance of good players, and W. Cameron Forbes who is again coaching the Crimson eleven, is expected to render much assistance to the new captain.

Outland, of Pennsylvania, is one of the universally popular men to be found at one time or another at every big educational institute. Whether he is as great a football player as the man who preceded him is a question to be solved largely by the results of 1898. His ability as a player is not confined to one position on the eleven, and there is considerable discussion whether to play him at half back or quarter back.

Outland is said to possess great shrewdness upon the field. He is quick to recognize the weakness of an adversary, and just as quick to take advantage of it. If there is a weak place in the opposing eleven none grasps the fact with more avidity than he, and last year he rendered valuable assistance to his captain by his marked ability in counsel. The Pennsylvania men are disposed to believe they have the best captain on the gridiron this year.

Chamberlin is exactly the type of a player that the Yale eleven needed last year and it had more like him. Aggressive in the spirit with which a bulldog is aggressive; persistent, as the waves are persistent in beating upon the beach; combative, as the Americans were combative when they rushed up the slopes of El Caney, he never knows when he is defeated or when to "let up" on an adversary.

Whether he will be a successful leader is another problem. A player may be game to the backbone, pugnacious from crown to heel and still not be a good leader of his fellows. Yale's coaches and advisers say Chamberlin is all right. Certainly he has little of which to complain in his team, as compared with the other three of the "big four," and if he is as successful as the Sons of Eli hope he will finish his season with more glory than lighted about the heads of the "late comers" last year when they successfully walloped Princeton, after a preliminary campaign that tried the heart of every man at New Haven.

The Cornell team is somewhat crippled by the loss of many of last year's best men, including Captain McKeever and Tracy at the ends, Schoch and Tangeman at the centre, Wilson at half-back and Faville at guard. The team is being coached by ex-Captain Glenn S. Warner, of Buffalo, who was so successful last season. He is assisted by Thomas F. Fennell, of Elmira, who formerly played in the Cornell line.

Among the old players who are candidates for the team are Dempsey, Bassford, Alexander, Porter, Morrison, Starbuck, Cross and Captain Whiting.

The football team of Princeton University is being coached this year by the finest assortment of ex-football men that ever stepped foot on the Tigers' gridiron. "Biffy" Lee, captain of the Princeton team in 1895, has been selected as head coach, and he is assisted by Howard Brokaw, the star end of the 1896 team, whose name is still in the mouths of Princetonians; Moffat, the famous full-back, and George and Balliet, men who formerly played centre rush. Tyler, who was one of the Princeton representatives at the Olympic games at Athens in 1895, is looking after the work of the tackles. Fine, whose strategy has counted for Princeton in days of yore, is directing the headwork of the team.

THE STAFF OF LIFE IN MEXICO.

Tortillas, the National Bread, Is the Food of All Classes.

A table of various commercial data of the City of Mexico shows that 5,000,000 tortillas are consumed daily in the city. The tortilla, the national bread of Mexico, is made of maize. It is an unleavened bread, the food of rich and poor alike. For common use it is sometimes made quite thick; for the tables of the better class it is small, four or five inches in diameter. It is prepared now as it has been for a thousand years. The maize is parboiled to cleanse and soften the grain, and then left to cool. Afterward it is crushed on a metate, or block of lavastone, about sixteen inches broad and twenty inches long, and mixed with water. The paste is patted by hand until it is as thin as a pancake, and then toasted on a brasero, or native charcoal brazier. Tortillas cost about three cents a dozen, and a family of ordinary size will consume on an average eight dozen a day. There are nine factories in the city of Mexico where the tortillas are turned out by machinery. The importance of the industry is further shown by the number of "maicerias," or maize shops, in the city, which are said to number not less than two hundred. In the early part of the meal of the working classes in Mexico the tortilla is used as a plate, receiving the meat or other edible which forms the principal course. When this is disposed of, it is the turn of the tortilla, which is curled up and eaten with great gusto.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

An inventor has produced an electric cane lamp. The handle of the cane contains an incandescent lamp, the two poles of which are connected with the plates of a battery. Below this is a small chamber to carry the battery fluid. When it is desired to use the lamp the cap is taken off and the cane inclined, so that the liquid it contains comes in contact with the electrodes. A current is thus produced that will, it is asserted, keep the light going for an hour.

SPORTING.

GOLF.

Mixed foursomes for the Gilbert cup will be played on the course of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club Thanksgiving morning at 10 o'clock. The finals for the Chapman cup will be played next Saturday.

Among those present at the opening of the Park Golf Club last Tuesday was Mayor Wilson, of the borough. His Honor took quite a lively interest in the event and he watched the players with evident satisfaction. He was charmed with the location of the course, and he thinks, he too, may learn the game and indulge in the healthful exercise.

STRIKES AND SPARES.

The bowling team of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. went to Westfield Tuesday evening, and won two games from the junior team of that place. Both teams rolled in rather poor form and the scores were all small. One of the Plainfield team failed to put in an appearance and so the other four had to take turns in rolling for the missing man. The scores were as follows:

SHOE DEALERS ORGANIZE.

Dealers Get Together to Determine Trade Affairs.

An organization of the local shoe dealers was effected last evening in the rooms of the Board of Trade. The object of the association is somewhat similar to the Grocers' Protective Association, with some changes to suit the members. All of the dealers were present last evening but Flynn Bros. and A. Willett & Son., but they have signified their willingness to join the association. For good reasons they could not be present at the first meeting.

Those present include Seeley Edsall, J. H. Doane, J. J. Kenney, H. M. Sherwin, M. Abrams, B. R. Force, William Schloss and Morris VanArsdale. The following officers were elected: President, Seeley Edsall; secretary and treasurer, Morris VanArsdale. The president appointed J. J. Kenney, Wm. Schloss and H. M. Sherwin a committee to draft a set of resolutions to be presented at the next meeting to be held next week. The resolutions will embody specifically the objects of the association.

During the evening the question of trading stamps and prizes was discussed, but nothing definite was decided in the matter. The association will probably meet quarterly after the organization is thoroughly completed and will from time to time discuss such things as will be of interest to the local trade.

G. F. Rittenhouse, of Lambertville, is now connected with the dry goods house of I. H. Boehm.

ENCHANTED GROVE OF BEES.

Peculiarity of Two Trees, the Cause Of Which Cannot Be Explained.

On the site of an old Shawnee village is a spot which seems to have been the thickest settled part of the town, is a grove of black oak trees. In this grove are two very large post oak trees, one in the south and one in the north end of the grove. In the grove can be heard most any day the buzzing of a swarm of bees so plainly that the noise has fooled many old bee hunters, but all their search has never revealed a single bee.

Now comes the most peculiar part of this most peculiar tale. The large postoak tree standing at the north end of the grove is the curiosity of the bunch, for not long ago a young man hearing of the bees went to the spot and proceeded to look carefully up each tree in the grove until he came to the north tree. He was within two feet of this tree, loking up, when he heard a noise just like a carpenter at work nailing on boards, and the noise seemed to come from the tree. He went around it several times, trying to locate the hammering, but it still seemed to come from the tree. The hammering continued until he happened to touch the tree with his hand, when it suddenly stopped. The man then went away amazed. A day or so afterward this man had occasion again to pass that way. He slipped up to the tree and listened for the hammering, and sure enough, it was as plain as ever. He touched the tree with the end of his finger, and as before the noise stopped at once. This man and several others have tried touching the tree several times since, with the same result.

They say that the humming of bees and the curious hammering can be heard any day, but no one has been able to explain the mysteries of this enchanted grove.—Galveston News.

A Strategic Servant.

A good story is told, which, by the way, goes to show that officers were not feasting while the men were living on ordinary army rations. One of our generals in Cuba entertained, it seems, some visiting officers at his field quarters near the fighting line before Santiago. The fare resembled in simplicity the legendary roast sweet potatoes of Revolutionary times, but the host's hearty welcome and still more his wealth of good stories carried along the meagre menu. At length, however, there came a pause, both gastronomic and conversational. The guests were awaiting "what next" when the old negro servant was heard to hiss into the general's ear: "Give 'em another big one, Gen'l; de cook dun scorch de hardtack."—Philadelphia Press.

Richer Than Hetty Green

Mrs. Richard King of Texas is probably the richest woman in the United States, not excepting Mrs. Hetty Green. Her wealth is partly inherited from her father, a pioneer Presbyterian clergyman, the first who ever went, staff and Bible in hand, to preach the gospel to the Indians and mixed races that peopled the vast domain over which his own little daughter was destined to hold sway as a landed proprietor. Mrs. King is a widow, and her landed estates in southern Texas amount to 1,250,000 acres, or about two thousand square miles.—Exchange.

The residents in Vienna last year ate 18,207 horses.

SARATOGA'S "HORSE HAVEN."

The Water and Good Air Prove a Beneficial Resort for Equines.

One of the features of Saratoga is a sealed book to those visitors who are not interested in the races, and even the old, regular guests, to whom every nook and corner of the Spa is familiar, and who have watched the improvement and the development of the popular resort, know nothing about the place opposite the race track which is designated by a sign as "Horse Haven."

To men who are interested in racing and who follow the races, the place has more fascination than the great hotels with their artistic courts, grand drawing rooms, monster dining halls and luxurious surroundings. It is the place where the horses which compete for prizes during the racing season are housed, and where other horses, weary and worn with work for race track honors, are brought to recuperate and gain new vigor for coming contests.

In 1863 the old track was abandoned and the new running track on the opposite side of Union avenue was opened, and since that time the old track, with the houses and the barns which grew up there, became Horse Haven, possibly the greatest horse summer resort in the world.

When horses finish their work at Sheepshead Bay, Morris Park, Gravesend, Brighton and the various other race tracks, not only in New York and its vicinity, but in all other parts of the country, when hard work and rigid training have made rest and additional care necessary, they are brought to the Haven, and within a few days a change for the better is noticed in them. The water and the air do the business and prove as beneficial to horse as man.

There are many stables in the enclosure, and these have 1,030 boxes, which will accommodate nine hundred horses. The rest of the box room is given over to help and supplies. The old track is kept in repair, and additional smaller tracks are arranged for the accommodation of the horse guests. On these tracks the rehearsals for the performances on the track across the way take place, and there owners and lovers of horses congregate every morning and evening to watch the filers taking their constitutionals. The gates of the Haven are never closed, and Mr. Puckett and his sons, who assist him in the management of the place, are always anxious to show the place to visitors. —New York Tribune.

How Spurgeon Converted Him.

Spurgeon once passed a stone mason who, after each stroke of his hammer, cursed and swore. He laid his hand on the man's shoulder and, looking kindly at him, said: "You are an adept at swearing. Can you also pray?" With another oath he replied: "Not very likely." Holding up five shillings Mr. Spurgeon said if he would promise never to pray he would give him that. "That is easily earned," said the man with a fresh oath, and put it in his pocket. When Spurgeon left the man began to feel a little queer. When he went home his wife asked him what ailed him, and he told her. "It is Judas's money!" said the man, and, on a sudden impulse, he threw it into the fire. The wife found it, and took it out, and discovered who had given it to him. The man took it back to Spurgeon, who conversed long with him, warning him, and at length was the means of saving him. He became an attached member of his flock.—New York Tribune.

Too Quick for the Stock Brokers.

Down the postoffice steps Rev. Dr. Fyfthly carefully picked his way, and then his feet suddenly shot out, and he went down right in the midst of a group of stock brokers.

"Ah, good morning, doctor!" laughed the stock brokers, recognizing the minister. "You remind us of the wicked man whose foot slippeth."

"Nay," retorted the good minister, "but rather do I seem like the man who went down to Jericho."

"How is that?" chorused the brokers.

"Because he fell among thieves," murmured the doctor as he got up and moved decorously away.—Anglo-American.

ESTABLISHED MAY 10, 1887. PLAINFIELD, N. J., FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 11, 1898. TWO CENTS A COPY—$5 A YEAR.

THOSE TO BE CHOSEN AT CITY ELECTION.

Mayor, Judge and Collector to be Elected.

ALSO FOUR COUNCILMEN.

EACH WARD WILL SELECT A NEW COUNCILMAN.

On the Result Will Depend the Political Complexion of the New Council—Terms of Three Republicans and Four Citizens Do Not Expire—Term of Dr. Jenkins, Board of Education, Expires

While the rest of New Jersey has returned to its usual interests, Plainfield is still deeply interested in the subject of politics. The State election is over, but now the eyes of the local voters are turned toward the municipal election which will take place Tuesday, December 6th.

The city election this year will be of more than the usual importance. The highest executive officer of the city, the Mayor, will be elected. The three-year term of Mayor Charles J. Fisk will expire on the first day of January, 1899, and his successor will be chosen at the coming election.

The term of City Judge DeMeza will also expire with the new year, and the citizens will have a chance to select another one. Elias R. Bird was the last city tax collector elected. He resigned last summer to accept the appointment as postmaster. James A. Martin was chosen by the Common Council to fill Mr. Bird's unexpired term. That will expire with this year and a new Collector will be voted for.

All these candidates will be voted upon in the city-at-large, and the candidates for them will be chosen at the city conventions of the political parties, or by petition. Then there are four ward Councilmen whose terms expire this year, and the successors to whom will be elected in their respective wards.

In the First ward, C. J. Newman will be the retiring Councilman. William N. Runyon, of the Second ward has completed his two years' of service. J. T. Baker, president of the Common Council, is the retiring Councilman from the Third ward. Elmore D. Moffett, who was elected last year to fill the remaining year of Isaac Randolph's unexpired term, leaves the Council as the representative of the Fourth ward.

Of the city officials whose terms expire this year and whose successors are to be elected at the coming municipal election all are Republicans, and were elected to office on that ticket, except one. Elmore D. Moffett is one of the leading Democrats in the city and was elected last year on the Citizens' ticket.

Of the Councilmen now remaining in the Council whose term of office does not expire until the year following, there are three regular Republicans, Messrs. Barrows, Buckle and Andrews. The other four were elected to the Council on the Citizens' ticket last year. They are Messrs. Hetfield, VanHerwerden, Liefke and Homan. The result of the election in the wards will therefore determine the political complexion of the next Council.

There will be one new member of the Board of Education to be chosen by the voters of the city-at-large. The term of Dr. O. L. Jenkins expires this year. The term of office is five years.

HOWELL IS ELECTED.

Convery Had But 252 Majority in Monmouth; Howell Wins by 767.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, Nov. 11—Complete returns filed at Freehold for Monmouth county make it evident that Benj. F. Howell, Rep., has been elected in the Third Congressional district. The returns give Patrick Convery, Dem., a majority of 180. Mr. Howell had a plurality of 649 in Somerset county and a plurality of 299 in Middlesex county, making a total of 947. Deducting the plurality of Convery in Monmouth county—180—and Mr. Howell still has a plurality of 767, indicating his election beyond peradventure. This will be Mr. Howell's third term, he having been elected in 1894 and again in 1896.

W. C. T. U. Fair a Success.

The W. C. T. U. fair closed last Wednesday evening and was in every way a success. Most everything was disposed of and the Union will receive a nice sum of money clear of expenses for their efforts. The attendance each night at the fair was gratifying, and in spite of other attractions the people came and patronized liberally the fair. As soon as the expenses are paid, an announcement will be made regarding the profits.

FIRE IN THE CITY HOTEL.

HEROIC EFFORTS OF JAMES LAUGHLIN PREVENTED ITS SPREADING.

A Lamp Left in the Hall was All Afire When He Discovered It Early This Morning—His Prompt Action.

James Laughlin, a barkeeper in the City Hotel, proved himself a hero early this morning by preventing a serious fire in the City Hotel, which, had it got under headway, might have endangered the lives of the guests in that hostelry.

Laughlin went up to third floor at 6 o'clock to get the key to the barroom, and as he reached the hallway he was startled to see the lamp, left there during the night, afire on the inside, the flames leaping up in a threatening manner.

He grabbed the lamp to throw it out of the window, but before he could accomplish this it exploded. The oil spread over the floor and commenced to blaze fiercely. Laughlin had on a heavy overcoat, and hastily divesting himself of this garment he covered the flames with it, meanwhile calling for help. The guests were not long in responding and he was aided by others in extinguishing the fire.

Laughlin was slightly burned and inhaled considerable smoke. Had it not been for his timely discovery and heroic efforts a serious fire would probably have occurred.

The damage was $50, covered by insurance.

A BIG GAME TOMORROW.

HOW PLAINFIELDERS CAN SEE THE YALE-PRINCETON GAME.

Pennsylvania Railroad Will Run Two Specials to Princeton—Plainfielders Can Take Them at Elizabeth or New Brunswick

As the Jersey Central railroad does not pass through Princeton and Princeton Junction, the crowd of football enthusiasts who expect to attend the great Yale-Princeton game at Princeton, tomorrow afternoon, will have to go by the Pennsylvania railroad. The game is called for two o'clock but the average spectator will want to reach the field sometime before the game is called.

The game is to be played at Brokaw Field which is close by the station of the Pennsylvania railroad. That railroad will run special trains to the game and sell special excursion tickets for those trains only.

One special train will leave New York, Cortlandt and Debrosses streets ferry, at 10:30 o'clock. It will stop at Elizabeth P. R. R. station at 11:07 and New Brunswick at 11:30. Plainfielders can either go to Elizabeth by the Central and change there or take the trolley to New Brunswick.

The second special train will leave New York just an hour after the first, stopping at Elizabeth at 12:07. It makes no stop at New Brunswick. The trains will reach Princeton at 12:05 and 1:05 respectively. The excursion fare from New York will be $2, from Elizabeth, $1.50; and from New Brunswick 75 cents. The specials will return at the close of the game.

As the restaurant facilities of Princeton are small, those who attend the game will do well to provide themselves with a lunch if they start in the morning or partake of something before they leave on the noon train. By leaving Plainfield for Elizabeth on the 11:10 train, there will be time for lunch at Elizabeth before taking the P. R. R. special at 12:07.

POOR TROLLEY SERVICE.

Brunswick Traction Company Not Doing as Franchise Calls for.

(Special to the Daily Press.)

Dunellen, Nov. 11.—People living along the line of the Brunswick Traction Company between this town and Bound Brook, which was opened two weeks ago, are complaining bitterly of the service that is being furnished by the road. Though the term of the franchise call for cars every half-hour, the present schedule allows only one car every hour. Unless the cars are run oftener an attempt will be made to discipline the traction company through the municipal bodies. The Brunswick Company connect with the Plainfield line, which runs cars under a schedule of 12 minutes, and during the time that elapses between the hour trip of the Brunswick company the Plainfield company generally furnishes more than enough passengers to fill the car for Bound Brook when it leaves Dunellen. On several trips Sunday the Brunswick company's cars carried over a 100 passengers at a time. The Brunswick company say they are short of cars.

To Speak Particularly to Men

END OF AN ACTIVE LIFE.

JACOB LONG DIED AT HIS HOME LAST NIGHT.

He Was Eighty-nine Years of Age and Had Led an Eventful Life—Started Life as a Farmer—Once a Freeholder

Jacob Long, one of Somerset county's oldest and most active citizens, passed away last evening at 10:30 o'clock at his residence on Craig place. He was hale and hearty up to within four months of his death, and suffered but little from illness throughout his career.

Mr. Long was born a farm near Martinville, Somerset county, on September 27, 1819. Thrown upon his own resources at an early age, he soon learned the secret of self reliance. When only a lad of seventeen years, he purchased a farm a mile from his birthplace and began work there with great success. There he lived for forty years.

Although he began his career as a farmer, he early began a live stock dealer or "drover" as they were then called. The business was a productive one and extended all through this State, New York and Canada. He formed a partership with Harvey S. Moore, then of Rahway, both now residing on West Front street, this city.

The firm met with success and did an extensive business until 1873, when it was dissolved by mutual consent after having lasted thirty years. Then both men retired.

In 1840 Mr. Long was married to Miss Thursa Moore, of Liberty Corner. There were six children, all living, who grew up on the farm and then went out into the world. On Mr. Long's retirement from business, he and his wife moved to Rahway, leaving their son, John S. B. Long to run the homestead farm.

Three years after, Mr. Long moved to North Plainfield to be near his son, Dr. Monroe B. Long, who had located in Plainfield, and remained there until the time of his death.

Mr. Long cast his first vote for Gen. William Henry Harrison, the Whig candidate for President. When the Republican party was formed, he voted for their first candidate, John C. Fremont, and has remained a faithful follower of the party ever since.

In 1860-61, he was elected a chosen freeholder from Bridgewater township, Somerset county, on the Republican ticket. He served well and afterwards held several other minor offices in the county. He never took a very active part in politics, however.

Last June his wife died and he was left alone. Since then his health has steadily failed. For the past month he has been nearly helpless and it was known that the end was close at hand. He was conscious to the last and then passed away without pain. His death was caused by exhaustion and old age.

He leaves six children. William H. Long, of Somerville, ex-Surrogate of Somerset county; John S. B. Long, who is living on the old homestead near Martinville; Mrs. George W. VanNest, whose husband owns an adjoining farm; Jacob Long, Jr., of Walden, Orange county, N. Y.; Dr. M. B. Long, of Park avenue, this city, and Mrs. S. O Staats, of West Second street, this city.

The funeral services of Charles A. Haynes were held at his late home on First place yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Rev. J. W. Richardson, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, officiated, assisted by Rev. Robert Lowry, D. D. A sextette composed of Mrs. W. L. Lowry, Miss Ada Runyon, Miss Adelaide Runyon, Miss Emma V. Fish, William A. Stimpson and Thomas A. Cuming sang three favorite hymns during the service.

The interment was today in Greenwood. Among the floral offerings was a pillow of pink and white roses and chrysanthemums from the members of the Park Avenue Baptist church, of which the deceased was a member.

Big Reception for Voorhees.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Newark, Nov. 11—A scheme is under way among leading Republicans here to give to Governor-elect Voorhees a big reception in Elizabeth within the next few days. The idea originated with the Frelinghuysen Lancers. When Attorney-General Griggs was elected Governor three years ago Essex County Republican organizations invaded Paterson 1,000 strong and gave a rousing congratulatory reception.

TROLLEY CAR STRUCK AND KILLED A HORSE

First Accident on the Dunellen-Bound Brook Line.

NO PASSENGERS INJURED.

MOTORMAN AND DRIVER BOTH ESCAPED UNHURT.

Accident Occurred at the Western Limits of Dunellen Borough—C. T. Rogers' Horse That Was Killed—Car Was Evidently Running Too Fast—Traffic Was Delayed for Two Hours.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, Nov. 11—The first accident on the new trolley line between Dunellen and Bound Brook occurred early last evening, and as a result travel was delayed for over two hours on that line. The accident happened on the upper borough line near W. J. Winges' residence, where the tracks make a short sweep around a curve in the road. It was car No. 77 of the Brunswick Traction Company, and three passengers were aboard. Conductor Smith, of New Brunswick, was in charge. Some people say that the car was going at a moderate gait, while others say it was traveling at a high rate of speed. The lights were out in the car, and a lantern was being used, but there was a headlight.

Just as the car struck the curve in the road there appeared coming toward Dunellen C. T. Rogers, of New Market, driving his team of horses. There is no doubt but what Mr. Rogers was on the track, and was unable to get off quick enough to let the trolley car pass. The car struck one horse with such force as to kill him instantly, and from all appearances the animal's neck was broken. When the collision occurred the force threw the motorman out of the front of the car, but he escaped uninjured. The front of the car was a complete wreck, and the motor-box was in such condition that it could not be used. A large number of panes of glass were broken, but the three passengers in the car were uninjured. Mr. Rogers, who was driving his horses, was also uninjured, but his wagon suffered considerable from the collision.

Assistant Superintendent Ferbe, of the Brunswick Traction Company, who is located at Bound Brook, was sent for and he reached the scene of the accident in a short time with Car No. 75. After considerable difficulty he managed to get the disabled car back to Bound Brook, where it is being repaired. In the course of a couple of hours after the accident, Mr. Rogers succeeded in getting home with his wagon and one horse. One horse did not receive a scratch. The dead horse was left by the roadside last evening, and a lantern was placed there to warn passersby. This morning the horse was removed. Traffic has been resumed on the road.

NOT AS BAD AS REPORTED.

The Alleged Disappearance of Gustav Gast Was Not so.

The recently published reports concerning Mrs. Wedemeyer, formerly of the borough, but now of Newark, are in a great measure untrue, for she has not been duped, neither has her love affair been disturbed. Her intended husband, Augustave Gast, who was reported as missing, is now in Newark conducting a saloon which he purchased for Mrs. Wedemeyer, and the two expect to be married at an early date. Mr. Gast left Plainfield a short time ago for Newark, for the purpose of buying a saloon. He was unable to secure the place he was after, and while away he visited New York and Philadelphia. He had in his possession $350 given to him by Mrs. Wedemeyer, and not $1.500 as stated previously. He returned a few days later and saw Mrs. Wedemeyer. He then returned to Newark and purchased a saloon, which is now being conducted by him for Mrs. Wedemeyer. In a short time an opening will be given, and the couple will be married, after which there will be a wedding reception. Several Plainfielders will be invited to the wedding, which will be a large affair. This statement of facts is made in justice to Mrs. Wedemeyer and Mr. Gast.

Corle to Resume Business.

C. V. D. Corle, the liveryman, has leased the City Hotel stables and sheds, and will open up a livery stable in connection with the hotel. Mr. Corle will repair the stables and rebuild and enlarge the sheds. The latter will fill a long-felt want, as there are no good sheds in town except those in connection with Blimm's Hotel.

DEATH OF CARL L. WALZ.

WELL-KNOWN AND POPULAR AS TENNIS AND GOLF PLAYER.

Just Entered His Manhood—Caught a a Heavy Cold Some Time Ago Which Developed Into Fatal Typhoid Fever.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest L. Walz, of 302 LaGrande avenue, was saddened last night by the death of their son, Carl L. Walz, a young man just past his majority. Young Mr. Walz had been ill since the middle of last month, but his ultimate recovery was fully expected until a few days ago when he suffered a relapse, and the end came last night.

Walz graduated from Leal's School in 1896 and in the fall of that year entered Yale. But his health being so poor he was forced to leave, although he hoped to return later and complete his course. While at Yale Walz entered the intercollegiate tennis championship and made a good showing.

Two years ago Walz played for the State championship at Orange and came out with high honors.

When the Hillside Tennis Club introduced golf, Walz was one of the foremost players, and his enthusiasm led him to play in all weather and was the cause of his illness.

He was out with three friends on the afternoon of October 14th playing golf. It was raining hard that day and Walz took a severe cold which eventually developed into malarial fever and later into typhoid. He was getting along nicely until a few weeks ago when he suffered a relapse. Although not an invalid, Walz has never been real strong, and it is to this that his long illness and final death can be attributed. Funeral arrangements will be made later.

Walz was an ardent lover of all outdoor sports, and was recognized all over the State as an authority on tennis and golf. He was one of the first members of the Hillside Tennis Club, and for several years held one of the championship cups. The first championship cup ever put up was won by him.

Walz was a member of the Crescent Avenue church which he attended regularly, and also belonged to the Christian Endeavor Society of that church. He was numbered among the members of the Bachelors' Club, the members of which remembered him with flowers during his illness. He was also a wheelman, and was popular with the young people of both sexes. His loss will be keenly felt.

DANCE TO BUY UNIFORMS.

Pleasureable and Profitable Time Given by Warren Engine Company.

Considering the disagreeable night, a goodly number of people attended the dance given last evening in Saengerbund Hall under the auspices of the members of Warren Engine Company. Eugene O'Reilly and his orchestra furnished the music, which was excellent, and while it was raining without the dancers were having a merry time within. The dance was arranged for the purpose of securing money to purchase new uniforms for the firemen, and a great many tickets were sold for the event.

Boroughites have felt a kindly interest in the project and are disposed to assist their fire laddies. The amount received last evening was appreciated by the members and will assist materially in the object for which it was secured. The committee having charge of the affair consisted of David C. Allen, chairman; David Bodine, George H. Fairchild, S. B. Joseph, J. J. Stahl. In the near future another opportunity will be given the people to give to this object.

During the evening there was a cake walk and Miss Mamie DeNise won the cake. The $5 gold piece given as a prize to the one holding the ticket with the lucky number was won by Miss Annie Hart.

Found a Tie on the Trolley Track.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, Nov. 11.—What was very probably an effort to wreck a trolley car on the New Brunswick-Metuchen line of the Brunswick Traction Company was made election night. A tie was placed across the rails and wired down. A car bound for Metuchen struck the tie, but the motorman had seen the obstruction in time to slow up. The passengers received a shaking up, but no one was hurt. It is thought that some discharged employe placed the tie on the rails.

The Pivotal Link.

A public hearing will be held November 22d before the borough council of Bound Brook for the right of way from the Middlesex county line through East Main street in Bound Brook, by the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company. This link is necessary to complete the line to New Brunswick as originally proposed.

VAIL CLEARS HIMSELF.

PROVES THAT HE DID NOT STEAL MILK BOTTLES.

It is Alleged That a Norwegian, Employed by Vail, Was the Guilty One, and He Has Left This Section.

Compton Vail, a South Plainfield milkman, who was arrested a couple of weeks ago on a charge of stealing milk bottles from a number of milkmen in town, had a hearing yesterday afternoon before Justice Wm. Newcorn. Through the efforts of his lawyer, Wm. G. DeMeza, who brought evidence enough in court to clear Vail, the prisoner was declared innocent and discharged.

Vail was first arraigned before the City Court, but when the day for trial came, the City Judge decided not to entertain the complaint and so the case was taken to a justice of the peace.

The alleged theft occurred two weeks ago. Witnesses were sworn who declared that they saw Vail go up to Lewis G. Timpson's house, on East Sixth street, and to Mrs. Sterling's, next door, and take away several milk bottles belonging to other milkmen. The complaining witnesses in the case were Milkmen Darty, Highland, Gavin and Mellick.

Vail claimed that his hired man, a Norwegian, who went by the name of "Eick" was the guilty one. He said that Eick took the bottles unknown to him and sold them. Eick left town the night that Vail was first arrested and has not been seen since.

CHEERFUL VIEW OF SPAIN

GARRET P. SERVISS CALLS IT THE LAND OF SUNSHINE.

A Description of its Picturesque Scenery Given—What Would Have Happened if France Had Lost a Battle Once

It was a beautiful country that Garret P. Serviss, the lecturer, led his hearers through last night at the Casino—picturesque Spain. He called it the land of sunshine, of ruins, of stately palaces and famous cathedrals, a land rich in romance and legend. Above all it is a land of sunshine, for an estimate carefully taken shows that in one year Spain is blessed with 3,000 hours of sunshine against Italy's 2,300; Germany's 1,700, and England's 1,400.

As so much interest has been taken in Spain and everything that pertains to it lately, the audience last night was a good-sized one. The lecture was illustrated with stereopticon views.

Mr. Serviss said that Spain cut no important figure in history until after the fall of Rome, and the lecturer last night confined himself to facts and incidents that occurred after the expulsion of the Moors from Spain. These people conquered Spain and until 1492 were in possession of the land. They poured across the Straits of Gibraltar and rushed in a mighty horde all over Spain, from east and west, climbed the snowy peaks of the Pyrennes, and would have over run France, too, had it not been for a defeat they received at the hand of the French king.

Mr. Serviss drew a startling picture of what would have been the result of this contemplated victory, and remarked that had the Moors conquered France, they might have continued their work until all of the northern Europe was at their feet. And now instead of the Christian Bible, the Koran would be used in our churches, and instead of praying to God, the prevailing religion would be Mohammedanism.

In the fifteenth century the Christians, who had been driven to the fastnesses in the Asturia range of mountains, grew bold, and organizing for battle, swooped down on the Moorish cities and in a few years had driven the invaders from the land, so that in 1492 Ferdinand and Isabella mounted the Spanish throne.

Mr. Serviss led his listeners from cities in the northern part of the kingdom to the far south. He stopped some time in Madrid, and took the audience, by aid of pictures, to witness a Spanish bull fight. The fight was well described, and the scenes, from the time the bull entered the arena until he was killed, were realistic.

King to Exhibit Himself.

William King, the colored man in Plainfield, who is credited with having two hearts, will give a lecture at Mt. Olive Baptist church next Tuesday evening, and will prove to all how the world was made, and that the Sunday we observe is not the right Sunday. All are invited.

GAME PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION TO OPPOSE METROPOLITAN GUNNERS

Best Hunting Grounds of the State Posted to Keep Out Strangers—Rain Could Not Keep all of the Hunters Home—No Shooting is Allowed in the City Limits—Many Out Today.

The weather man was not kind to the hunters of New Jersey. Yesterday the open season for hare, rabbit, quail and squirrels began and the rain simply came down in torrents. Some of the particularly enthusiastic gunners ventured out despite the rain and the roar of the shot gun was heard all over the land. If poor Bunny, and his friends, the squirrels and quail, had any idea that the pour-down might postpone their troubles until another day, they were greviously disappointed.

Plainfield was not largely represented among the hunters who went forth after the elusive "cotton-tail" There is usually a host of sportsmen who march out of this city early in the morning when the season opens. There were a few who turned out yesterday. At an early hour, they found that the rain was not falling heavily and the shooting was fairly good. But the rain increased in force as the morning grew and the wet and bedraggled huntsmen waded through the Jersey mud while their faithful dogs trailed along behind mournfully vowing that such a day was never seen. The hunters returned each with a tale of the quantities that they saw but with few victims.

The gunners watched the clouds with anxious eyes all the morning but there wasn't the slightest suggestion of a cessation of the rain. Reports from this section made before the season opened are to the effect that the "cotton tail" is numerous.

The absence of any severe floods last spring or any other natural cause to wreck havoc among the young rabbits has made them numerous. In the Passaic valley and farming lands in the Watchung mountains, always a favorite run for the little rodents, they are unusually prolific and residents of that section have reported seeing many during the summer and fall.

In the past many of the local hunters spent most of the day in the fields just inside the city limits. The rabbits abounded there and the boom of the guns could be heard all over the city. For the past few years, however, the passage of an ordinance prohibiting the shooting of firearms in the city limits has kept them away and poor bunny, who made his home in Plainfield, is nearly free from the troubles that annually come to his race at this season of the year. The police have been instructed to arrest any one hunting in the city limits. Last year there were several arrests. So far this year, however, none have been reported.

The Game and Fish Protectivie and Propogative Assaciation of Union, Middlesex and Somerset counties has prepared for an active season. One of its chief objects will be to protect the game on the property of its members from the hosts of invading gunners that come out from New York and vicinity. All through Washington and Passaic valleys, one of the best shooting grounds in the State, the lands are posted wth notices warning trespassers and hunters off them. The game wardens will be particularly watchful for all violaters of the law that allows property owners to protect their own game. Other parts of the three counties have been posted in a similar manner and the out-of town hunter will fill countless notices staring him in the face if he wanders through this section. The members and their friends, however, will thus be able to enjoy good shooting.

New Brunswick, N. J., Nov. 10.—Loren Staten, a colored boy of Princeton, armed himself with a gun this morning and started out to enjoy the first day of the hunting season. It is supposed there was an old charge in the gun and that the boy put another on top of it. The gun exploded. The colored lad was brought here at noon by train, and in the Wells Memorial Hospital Dr. Clark took off his left hand at the wrist and picked many grains of powder out of this face.

Harrison Good, of Monmouth Junction, and a friend started out hunting this morning. He lagged behind while his friend walked along the Pennsylvania tracks with the trackwalker, and was struck by a train. He was not instantly killed and was brought to his home, where he died.

RUSHING NAVAL WORK

France Will Hastily Fit Out All Available Ships.

ADMIRALS HOLD A COUNCIL

The French Press However Has Adopted a More Moderate Tone as the Result of Lord Salisbury's Utterances. Uneasy Feeling on London Stock Exchange.

Paris, Nov. 11.—The Matin says that at a council of the admirals, held yesterday, it was decided to fit out all the French war vessels available and thirty reserve ships have been ordered into commission.

The newspapers of this city, notably the Gaulois and Figaro, express satisfaction at the Marquis of Salisbury's speech, delivered at the Guildhall banquet, which they consider as tending towards a peaceful solution of a misunderstanding and as replacing the Fashoda question on its proper ground.

London, Nov. 11.—Though operators on the stock exchange yesterday were absorbed in the settlement there was an uneasy feeling regarding the allusions made by the Marquis of Salisbury at the lord mayor's banquet, to the necessity for preparedness against possible trouble. His reference to the United States and Spain was also looked upon as foreshadowing trouble in that direction. Consols opened with a slight reduction, but improved, and investment securities were generally in sympathy with consols.

The St. James Gazette, commenting upon the Marquis of Salisbury's speech in which he alluded to the United States, says:

"American imperialism promptly landed the United States in a war with Spain, and it may easily land them in other complications in the far East, but even if their policy is not pacific, it is for the benefit of humanity at large."

Continuing, the St. James Gazette points out that it would be in the interest of Great Britain under all circumstances to have the United States possess the Philippine islands, saying:

"Supposing them (the United States) as is now out of the question, to be unfriendly to us, they would have responsibilities over the sea. Or, on the other hand, being our best friend, we should have their co-operation in resisting a closing of the markets and an unfair division of decaying countries."

GOLD FROM SEA WATER.

Report of the Electrolytic Marine Salts Company Tells of Tests.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 11.—The committee appointed by the stockholders of the Electrolytic Marine Salts Company has issued its report. Its first test of the Jernegan process showed no commercial value, but did show that there is gold in sea water. The second experiment showed better results than the first, but no more experiments will be made until some action is taken by the stockholders looking to the settlement of the company's affairs.

With a view to making further expert examination of the process and to protect the stockholders, the appointment is recommended of a new committee as follows: Winslow Warren, E. P. Dodge, Arthur Lyman, James S. Russell and Joseph O. Burdett.

The stockholders are recommended to deposit their stock certificates with the State Street Trust Company and get transferable receips. The present assets of the company are said to be $313,000, sufficient to pay 30 cents on outstanding stock. There is a report that Jernegan may return to this country, in which case more than 30 cents may be paid.

THE SIMPLEST CURE FOR INDIGESTION,

As Well as the Safest and Cheapest.

The new medical discovery, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, digest the food instead of making the worn out stomach do all the work, give it a much needed rest, and a cure of dyspepsia is the natural result.

You get nourishment and rest at the same time because these Tablets will thoroughly digest all wholesome food taken into the stomach whether the stomach works or not. A cure is certain to result because the digestive organs are given a chance to rest and recover their natural vigor and tone. The Tablets are then no longer required.

To show the manner in which the remedy acts on different people and how quickly and effectually it cures stomach troubles we present a few recent cases.

Mr. J. O. Wondly, of Peoria, Ill., writes: I was unable to eat anything but the plainest food and even that often distressed me, but since using one box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets I can eat anything and everything I want.

Mrs. Samuel Kepple, of Girty, P., writes: I have been entirely relieved of my stomach troubles by your Tablets. I suffered three years with sour stomach and gas at night. I am thankful for them.

Mrs. A. E. Bowen, Barnard, Vt., writes: I think Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the best thing for dyspepsia I ever took. I will recommend them to anyone troubled as bad as I was.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will not disappoint because they cure Dyspepsia surely and lastingly by causing the food to be properly assimilated, and cure constipation by producing the proper quantity of bile. Sold by all druggists at 50 cents per package. Send for free book on stomach diseases to Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich.

PARIS PAPERS PREDICT RUPTURE.

Americans Persist in Demanding the Philippines and Spain Will Refuse.

Paris, Nov. 11.—The Paris papers, after Wednesday's meeting of the peace commissions, seemed to have gathered from some source or other the impression that the Spanish commissioners have cause for complaint against the Americans, because the latter presented their replies to the Spanish proposals in English and without a Spanish translation of the document.

There is no basis for complaint on the subject. The president of the Spanish commission, Senor Montero Rios, and Judge Day, the president of the American commission, agreed that, owing to the length of the document, all concerned might be spared the reading of matter which is usually translated in writing into Spanish for the benefit of Senor Montero Rios and two other members of the Spanish commission who do not understand English.

Each side, up to the present, has made its own written translations, but the Americans alone have supplied an interpreter for the joint sessions, the Spaniards relying on the American interpreter instead of furnishing an interpreter for their side, as they might have been expected to do.

The American interpreter is Mr. Arthur Ferguson, and the Spaniards have marvelled at the facility with which he did his work. They have never once checked him or corrected him in the slightest degree.

In view of the facts in the case some of the references of the Paris newspapers are interesting.

The Figaro says: "The American commissioners contented themselves with producing a long memorandum, written in English. After having deposited this upon the table, they left the task of translating it to the Spanish commissioners, apologizing courteously for its length and the difficulties of translation. They then retired. The situation then at present is as follows: The Americans persist in refusing to take over the Cuban debt and exact the cession of the Philippines. The Spaniards, on their side, refuse to cede the archipelago."

The Petit Bleu says: "All diplomatic forms were outraged by the Americans at yesterday's sitting. It is customary in such cases to read the memorandum presented to the other side. The Americans, however, contented themselves with throwing it, written in English, upon the table.

"A member of the Spanish commission has remarked that his colleagues can never admit the claims of America in regard to the Philippine archipelago."

The Petit Bleu then expresses its belief in an early rupture of the negotiations.

The Rappel says: "A Spanish commissioner has declared that the Spaniards will yield only to force in the question of the possession of the Philippine islands."

SLAYER OF EMPRESS ELIZABETH.

Trial of the Anarchist Luccheni. Sentenced to Life Imprisonment.

Geneva, Switzerland, Nov. 11.—The Italian Anarchist, Luigi Luccheni, who stabbed and killed the Empress Elizabeth of Austria on September 10 last in this city, was placed on trial here yesterday.

The court was crowded and the prisoner was strongly guarded, but there was no excitement.

The public prosecutor, in reciting the circumstances of the crime, said there was no clear evidence that Luccheni had accomplices, except in the fact of the prisoner's own silence on certain points, which, as he in his declarations, had not spared himself, could only be intended to shield accomplices.

The testimony of an electrician, a boatman, and a cabman, who assisted in the capture of Luccheni, was then taken.

Luccheni admitted that he came to Geneva to kill the Duke of Orleans; but he arrived too late. He said that the duke would be killed within a year.

Luccheni was sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for life.

A Solid South a Mistake.

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 11.—The Lexington Morning Herald, a Democratic newspaper, edited by Colonel W. C. P. Breckinridge, an ex-Confederate, prints this significant paragraph in summing up the result of Tuesday's election:

"The unpleasant picture is again presented of an almost solid South against an almost solid North, to which is to be added the Pacific slope and a majority of the new West. The electoral vote is overwhelmingly Republican. The solid South is a mistake—a dangerous mistake for the South and her future. She is not now, and in this generation she cannot become the major portion of the country. Her true policy, her highest wisdom, is to march forward in the van of human progress and human thought, instead of lagging in the rear."

Brooklyn Elevated Sold.

New York, Nov. 11.—The Brooklyn Elevated Railroad Company was sold under coreclosure proceedings at the Brooklyn Real Estate Exchange on Montague street yesterday afternoon. Chairman F. B. Olcott of the Reorganization company bid the property in for $5,507,500.

There was no opposition. The new company will organize next week.

The Infanta Maria Teresa.

Nassau, New Providence, Nov. 11.—The steamer ashore off Cat island, supposed to be the abandoned cruiser Infanta Maria Teresa, is now described as being a disarmed warship flying the American flag, showing signs of having been on fire and leaking slightly. She stranded in an exposed position on Thursday night last.

Troops for San Francisco.

San Francisco, Nov. 11.—There is an unconfirmed story here that the war department will order seven regiments of volunteers here from the east to spend the winter.

General Merriam says he believes the story probable in view of the fact that the administration intends to hold the Philippines and will need a large garrison there.

WAR OF THE RACES

The Whites Burn a Negro Newspaper Office in Wilmington.

MANY NEGROES SHOT DOWN

Culmination of the Troubles at Wilmington. A Conflict in Which Several Persons Were Killed. Great Excitement Among the Whites and Blacks.

Wilmington, N. C., Nov. 11.—Events moved quietly in Wilmington yesterday but the white people have made good their threats to take vengeance upon the negro newspaper, which published the editorial derogatory to white women.

At 7.30 o'clock, the negroes not having responded to the demand for the removal of the press of the Record (the negro newspaper), ex-Representative Waddell, the chairman of the white committee of twenty-five, repaired to the Light Infantry armory, where he was to meet the citizens by appointment.

Eight o'clock was the last hour of grace for the negroes to reply, and that hour passed without an answer being received.

The citizens then waited half an hour for reinforcements.

In the meantime armed men had begun to gather in the wide street in front of the armory. They carried rifles, riot guns and ammunition, and the assemblage included some of the most respectable citizens of the town.

At 8.30 o'clock the procession, headed by ex-Representative Waddell and the committee of twenty-five, moved in the direction of Seventh and Nunn streets, where the Record printing shop is located. All along the line of march the procession was joined by armed citizens, and when the negro quarter was reached the negroes could be seen a few blocks away, running into their houses.

When the crowd arrived in front of the Record office, a two-story frame building, picket lines were thrown out across the street and squads of men sent to squares in the neighborhood. Leader Waddell, with a rifle on his shoulder, went to the door of the building and knocked, but, there being no response, the door was soon burst open, commenced the work of destruction. The furniture was smashed and thrown into the street and the building was fired and destroyed.

Some one turned in a fire alarm, and when the engines responded the crowd discharged their weapons and a fusillade of gun and pistol shots, cheers and shouts filled the air.

The affair was soon over, however, and no one was hurt.

The publishing house was destroyed but the neighboring property was saved.

The colored editor, Manly, his brother, and their associates, have fled, and could not be found by the citizens.

After destroying the printing house the marchers returned to the armory, where they had left a rapid fire machine mounted in a wagon ready to be dispatched to the scene if a battle should take place.

The leaders of the crowd said subsequently that it was not the intention to burn the Record building; that it was the work of some rash person or by accident, and did not have the concurrence of the committee of twenty-five.

Yesterday's action of the whites was the sequel of Wednesday's meeting at the county court house, and that of the committee of twenty-five in the afternoon as a result of which the negroes were given until morning to return an answer to the demand for the removal of the press and the cessation of the publication of the Record.

Wednesday night was an ominous one for the citizens in the residence section.

About eight o'clock a street car came into the business section and reported that the negroes had fired into it and that the passengers had returned the fire.

A car loaded with armed men was soon speeding towards the scene of the trouble, but the offenders escaped.

All night long the whites kept guard about the business and residence sections, but no incident occurred to disturb the night.

At 10.30 o'clock the scene shifted to another section of the city. Scarcely had the marchers disbanded at the armory before word passed along that the three hundred or four hundred negro laborers of the great cotton compress had quitted their work and were assembling.

The armed men hurried to the river front and took position at the head of the streets leading to the docks. The negroes gathered in groups of fifteen or twenty, and huddled together, apparently very much excited. They were soon in a state of panic.

The preservation of order is practically vested in the committee of twenty-five, who are now trying to restore order, quiet the situation and hold in check the reckless element among the whites.

The rapid fire machine gun on a wagon, manned by a crew armed with Winchesters, was brought down in front of the postoffice, but on the advice of the leaders was halted at that place.

Soon after eleven o'clock word was brought that reinforcements were needed in the negro section of Brooklyn. The men were sent.

Twenty minutes later news came that there had been a collision between the whites and blacks and that blood had been shed.

As a result of the trouble at Brooklyn it is believed that the negroes who have been killed will number four. A white man named Mayo who was shot in the stomach, has since died.

Another white man was hurt.

The situation is quiet at the scene of the trouble now. The negroes have gone into their houses.

JOINT COMMISSION CONVENES.

Anglo-Canadian-American Commissioners Reconvene in Washington.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 11.—Nearly all of the members of the Anglo-Canadian-American joint high commission reassembled here yesterday pursuant to adjournment taken at Quebec last month.

Lord Herschel, chairman of the commission, and Senator Fairbanks of Indiana, chairman of the American commissioners, came on together in the senator's private car from Indianapolis, where Lord Herschel spent Monday and Tuesday as the guest of the senator and ex-President Harrison.

He accompanied Senator Fairbanks to the latter's voting place on Tuesday, and at the invitation of the election officers, accompanied the senator into a booth and witnessed the operation, somewhat complex in the Hoosier state, of an American freeman exercising his right of suffrage.

His lordship was deeply interested and gained a fairly comprehensive and intelligent idea of the Indiana election law and practice under it.

The commissioners met at the state department at 11 o'clock, Sir Louis Davies and Sir Wilfred Laurier of Canada being absent, and were formally presented to Mr. Hay, secretary of state.

Thence they proceeded to the White House and were received by the president.

A brief session of the commission was held at the Arlington Hotel.

Quarters have been engaged for the members in the old Charles Sumner residence. They occupy the library in which Mr. Sumner died.

After adjournment the American commissioners held a short session for consultation.

Sir Louis Davies is expected to reach Washington to-day, while Sir Wilfrid Laurier will be detained until about the 15th inst.

COTTON CROP REPORT.

Reports Indicate an Average Yield of 219 Pounds Per Acre.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 11.—Preliminary reports to the statistician of the department of agriculture indicate an average yield of 219 pounds of cotton per acre.

The principal state averages are as follows:

North Carolina 227, South Carolina 245, Georgia 183, Alabama 195, Mississippi 229, Louisiana 272, Texas 212, Arkansas 290, Tennessee 181, Oklahoma 249 and Indian Territory 325.

In the determination of these preliminary figures reference has been made, not merely to the estimated number of pounds per acre reported by correspondents, but also to the quantitative comparison made by correspondents with last year's crop and other criterion.

An increase of about one hundred and fifty thousand acres has been made by the department to its preliminary estimate of the acreage in Oklahoma and in the Indian Territory.

The indications point to a total cotton crop not far from ten million bales.

REWARDS FOR NAVY CONSTRUCTOR.

Assistant Constructors to Be Advanced for War Services.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 11.—Secretary Long has decided to reward three officers in the naval construction corps for their faithful services during the war at the different navy yards where they bore the brunt of the immense amount of work consequent upon fitting out the auxiliary fleet.

These three officers are Assistant Constructors Ruhm, Spear and Zahm, who have been ordered to examination for promotion, Ruhm at Mare island, and the others at Newport News, this week.

The promotion of these three officers will leave places at the bottom of the list, which are to be filled next June from cadets now being educated for the construction corps.

It is Constructor Hichborn's purpose to gradually increase the number in this corps until the needs of the service are supplied. There is no limit to the corps by law.

Lake Michigan Storm-swept

Chicago, Nov. 11.—Lake Michigan is being swept by a northeast gale, and is tearing great holes in the sea wall and the paved beach along the lake front.

The Lincoln Park commissioners have just gotten well under way repairing the serious damage done by the storm of October 25, but the heavy breakers have now put the whole shore line in a worse shape than ever.

The action of the waves has undermined the outer driveway in Lincoln Park after washing over and displacing the heavy granite blocks with which the beach is paved.

Several vessels are overdue in Chicago and some apprehensions are felt for their safety.

Fighting in Indian Territory.

Eufaula, I. T., Nov. 1.—It is known here that there has been fighting at Okmulgee, the capital of the Creek nation, where the council met Tuesday. For over forty-eight hours rumors of trouble have been drifting in from Okmulgee, which is forty miles away from telephone service.

It is known, however, that the full bloods have made an attack upon the treaty leaders, at Okmulgee, and that at least one man has been killed and seven or eight wounded.

All the Indian police at Agent Wisdom's disposal have been ordered to Okmulgee and soldiers will follow.

The white people feel able to take care of themselves. The only fear is for the half breeds, who voted for the treaty.

Hooley Estates Sold.

London, Nov. 11.--The estate of Ernest I. Hooley, the bankrupt speculator and promoter, was sold for ninety-eight thousand pounds to Sir Christopher Furness, the shipowner and shipbuilder of West Hartlepool. Hooley's Essex estate brought 39,650 pounds.

Montojo in Madrid.

Madrid, Nov. 11.—Admiral Montojo who commanded the Spanish squadron destroyed by Admiral Dewey's ships in Manila bay, has arrived in Madrid.

LATE ELECTION NEWS

The Fifty-sixth Congress Surely Republican.

THE CORRECTED RETURNS

Control of the House Retained by a Margin of About Nineteen Votes. The Overthrow of Populism in the West. Kentuckians Will Contest Because of the New Election Law.

New York, Nov. 11.—The latest returns of Tuesday's election throughout the country make changes chiefly in congressional districts, the figures showing the House to be Republican by a majority of about nineteen, with several doubtful districts to be heard from.

The Senate in the next Congress will probably have a Republican majority of twenty.

The returns from the states are chiefly remarkable for the overthrow of silverite and Populist power in the West, the Republican plurality in Kansas being about thirteen thousand, and Nebraska having apparently gone against the Democratic-Populist fusion candidates.

Indiana has elected a Republican governor by more than fifteen thousand plurality, and a Republican legislature, which will retire Senator Turpie, Democrat.

In California the plurality of Gage, Republican, for governor, is about thirty thousand, and the Republicans will have a large majority on joint ballot in the legislature, insuring the election of a Republican senator in place of Senator White, Democrat.

Other Estimates Concerning the House.

Washington Nov. 11.—Chairman Babcock of the Republican congressional committee believes that the Republican majority in the next house of Representatives will reach 20.

Mr. Babcock is now convinced that the manifest drift in the West when the returns are all in, will show that enough districts, now doubtful, have been carried to swell the majority to twenty.

He says that the gains in the West are due to the desire of the people to indorse the administration and to express their satisfaction over the return of prosperity.

The Republicans carried five districts west of the Missouri which they hardly hoped for, but these were offset by the loss of four districts in New York and one in Massachusetts, so that Mr. Babcock's original calculations as to the result proved approximately correct.

Mr. Babcock says that the public hardly realizes the full extent of the Republican victory of Tuesday.

Even more important, he says, than the fact that the next House will be Republican, is the sweeping change in the Senate, where the fruits of Tuesday's election will give the Republicans 18 majority.

"That majority cannot possibly be overcome for eight years," said Mr. Babcock yesterday, "and for at least that period the business interests of the country are safe. Republican policies must prevail for that length of time. Even if the next House and the next president should be for free silver a Republican Senate would block their path.

"Besides the majority in the Senate will give us a clean working majority there for the enactment of our policies without the embarrassment that comes from narrow and unstable majorities. There need be no deals with the kickers.

"We will have a Republican majority sufficient to work freely, and what we do can be done with the knowledge that our legislation will have ample time to vindicate itself before a hostile Senate can be elected to upset it."

At Democratic congressional headquarters there are no new figures. They did not concede the House yesterday, claiming that the returns from many districts were yet too meagre definitely to determine the result.

Fraud and corruption was charged against the Republican management by the Democratic managers.

LATE REPORTS FROM MANY STATES

Washington.

Portland, Nov. 11.—Practically complete returns from twenty-four out of the thirty-four counties in the state of Washington give the following for congressmen:

Jones, Republican, 28,001; Cushman, Republican, 27,750; Lewis, fusion, 25,388; Jones, fusion, 22,925.

The Republican majority in the legislature on joint ballot will be about twenty.

The Republicans, according to the returns received thus far, have a majority of twenty on joint ballot in the legislature, with the Senate uncertain.

Senator Gray of Stevens county was elected on the citizens' ticket, a fusion of Republicans, silver Republicans and Democrats.

It is claimed by both parties that he will act with them. His vote will become important in deciding which party shall control the Senate in case the Republicans elect the senator yet undecided.

West Virginia.

Parkersburg, W. Va., Nov. 11.—A. B. White, secretary of the Republican state committee, says:

"The West Virginia legislature is Republican in both branches—the senate by ten, and the House by three. This insures a Republican United States senator."

The senator will surely be Internal Revenue Commissioner Scott.

Oklahoma.

Guthrie, Nov. 11.—Dennis T. Flynn, Republican, is elected delegate to Congress by probably six thousand plurality.

Both branches of the territorial legislature are safely Republican and the Republicans claim to have elected their local tickets in a majority of the counties.

Nevada.

Carson, Nov. 11.—The vote for governor is very close. Sadler, silver, claims his re-election by eight hundred majority over McMillan, Republican congressman.

Newlands silver Democrat, is re-elected by three thousand majority over Wren, Populist.

The rest of the state ticket is conceded to the silver party with the exception of the superintendent of public instruction.

In the next legislature four-fifths of the members will belong to the silver party. Some are pledged to Senator Stewart for re-election, and those who are not may join with the Republicans, Democrats and Independents in the organization.

California.

San Francisco, Nov. 11.—The indications are that the majority for Henry T. Gage, Republican candidate for governor, will be nearly thirty thousand.

The next legislature will have a large Republican majority on joint ballot, insuring the election of a Republican United States senator.

James D. Phelan, Democrat, has been re-elected mayor of San Francisco after a contest of extraordinary keenness.

Colorado.

Denver, Nov. 11.—Almost complete returns received by the Republican from all counties in the state show that Wolcott, Republican candidate for governor, has carried ten counties, his plurality over Thomas, the fusion candidate, aggregating 3,750, while Thomas's pluralities in the other counties amount to 42,877.

The entire fusion ticket is elected by about the same plurality as Thomas received.

Kentucky.

Louisville, Nov. 11.—Five Republican congressional nominees—Fowler in the Second, Creel of the Third, Bainford of the Fourth, Davison of the Eighth and Seitz of the Tenth district, wired the Louisville Commercial last night that they would contest the election on account of the Goebel election law.

Pugh, in the Ninth district, has signified his intention of contesting if an investigation satisfies him he is elected.

Massachusetts.

Worcester, Nov. 11.—The Republican state committee has telegraphed to each town and city committee in the Third congressional district directing that a recount be asked.

Yesterday morning the petitions were placed in circulation.

Congressman Walker did not ask for a recount, and has little hope to overcome the majority of 131 polled by John R. Thayer, Gold Democrat.

Utah.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Nov. 11.—Returns from about seven-eighths of the precincts in the state give Roberts, Republican, 27,108; Baskin, Democrat, for supreme judge, 31,669; Zane, Republican, 28,472.

According to the latest returns the legislature will stand forty-one Democrats, eighteen Republicans and four fusion.

Fusion Governor for Nebraska.

Omaha, Nov. 11.—Chairman Schneider of the Republican state committee conceded at noon yesterday the election of Poynter, Fusion, for governor, by 1,000.

The rest of the fusion ticket was elected by about the same plurality. The Republicans will have a majority of four in the legislature on joint ballot.

Roosevelt's Plurality 17,579.

New York, Nov. 11.—Corrected returns from all counties in New York state show that Colonel Roosevelt has been elected governor by a plurality of 17,579, only a slight change from the figures announced yesterday.

The soldier vote cannot materially affect the result.

Ohio.

Springfield, Nov. 11.—The plurality for Weaver, Republican, for Congress, in the seventh district, is 284 in Clarke county and 405 in the district.

The Loss of the Mohegan.

London, Nov. 11.—The board of trade inquiry into the loss of the British steamship Mohegan of the Atlantic Transport line, which was totally destroyed during the evening of October 14 near the Lizard light, while on a voyage from London to New York, resulting in the drowning of about one hundred persons, passengers and crew, was opened yesterday.

Considerable interest was taken in the proceedings, and the court room was crowded.

The evidence was chiefly technical and nothing new developed.

Counsel read the company's instructions to its commanders enjoining the utmost caere, especially in the British channel.

Harris May be Court-martialed.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 11.—Lieutenant Commander Ira Harris, who commanded the Maria Teresa up to the time of her abandonment, has been detached from the repair ship Vulcan and ordered to the receiving ship Franklin at Norfolk.

It is regarded as certain in naval circles that a court martial will follow if the Maria Teresa be found afloat or stranded on a beach anywhere.

A court of inquiry will surely be held even if the cruiser is not found.

The detail of the court has already been arranged and the time and place of meeting decided in anticipation of a report from the officers sent to search for the Maria Teresa.

Chicago Capital for Honolulu.

Chicago, Nov. 11.—Chicago capitalists will open a bank in Honolulu on January 1. It will have a capital stock of $800,000, with power to increase to $3,000,000 and will be organized under the laws of Hawaii.

Statue of Washington in Paris.

Paris, Nov. 11.—The statue of Washington, the gift of American ladies, will probably be erected in the Place d'Iona, in Parc du Trocadero.

COMING EVENTS.

November 13—William Hauptman, of the Twenty-second Regiment, New York Volunteers, will speak at the Y. M. C. A. meeting at 4:15 p. m.

The Commuter Vote.

Among the reasons assigned by Elvin W. Crane for his defeat for the Governorship, he says that the commuter vote was almost wholly against him. His idea of the commuter, of whom there are over 1 000 in Plainfield, is contained in the following:

These men take no interest in the affairs of the State, and when the time comes to vote they usually can be found with the Republicans, just wherever they think their business interests lie. Instead of voting the ticket of their home State they vote the ticket of the State where they have their business.

The Newark News, which probably did more than any other paper or person to bring about the defeat of Mr. Crane, makes this comment on the defeated candidate's opinion of the commuters:

All the evidence shows that the men who live in New Jersey and go to their work each day in New York take a very decided interest in State affairs. In the smaller towns and country places their influence has been particularly marked. It has been exerted for good schools, good roads, good government and progress. In New Jersey cities, too, the residents who do their daily work outside the State are not behind other citizens in interest in State and municipal affairs.

Patents and Trademarks.

Nearly all the civilized countries in the world, Germany, Russia and Austria-Hungary having refused co-operation, were represented in an important convention in Paris in 1883. Its object was to establish a common ground on which international patent laws could be based. Another congress was held in Brussels last year to adopt certain protocols on this great subject as a guide for special legislation by the governments which agreed to act together. The American commission appointed by President McKinley to examine the whole field as far as the interests of this country are concerned and to recommend the form of legislation needed will lay its report before congress in December. It is not probable that all the reforms which might be desired for the protection of American ingenuity and invention abroad will be covered, but something will be done and a start made toward justice in intellectual property as an issue between nations. This new awakening of the world's conscience is of course on a line with the international copyright law.

The arbitrary and unjust laws under which the American in times past has been obliged to trust for protection to his inventive genius have robbed him of many of the finest fruits of his labors. Hundreds of valuable inventions are today common property on the continent of Europe for which manufacturers have never paid a dollar. Law was expressly planned to encourage and defend international robbery. Even when patent legislation pretends to the semblance of equity its cunning restrictions have made it almost useless to the foreigner invoking its help. It was this which helped Germany, Belgium and France to trick Sir Henry Bessemer out of every penny of his royalties. For it is well known that the United States is the only foreign country which ever yielded the great steel inventor any considerable emolument for the use of his discoveries.

The movement for a common understanding between nations as to the regulation of this form of property having begun, perhaps its operation will become adequate in time. But as long as Germany and Russia stand outside it will be in vain to expect any fullness of advantage.

No appeal made by those who look after the needs of that noble institution, the Muhlenberg Hospital, should go unanswered by the citizens of Plainfield. The hospital is worthy of more than it gets. Every person should contribute his or her share to the financial resources of the hospital, no matter how small the amount may be. Through the Common Council the city does not contribute one cent to the institution, though a great many patients are received, treated and cured at the hospital during the year that would, if it was not in existence, become city charges. If the city should make a liberal appropriation for the hospital each year it would be but proper. No taxpayer would complain of such a course.

SERIOUS SITUATION IN FRANCE.

It is not a novel statement to say that France is facing something akin to a crisis; she is never long without something of the sort on hand. The new ministry, with M. Dupuy at its head, has an exceptionally difficult situation to handle. Anti-Semitic disturbances are of daily occurrence and may become serious at any time.

The residents of Prideville are in a complaining mood, and justly so. Two letter-carriers are allowed for the borough, while there are eleven carriers in the city. This apportionment is considered unfair, and it is believed that if the needs of the borough are properly presented to the postal authorities better facilities could be secured. A sub-station is also needed in the borough where postage stamps, postal cards, etc., can be purchased without a trip to the postoffice.

The minute a man is elected to any kind of a State office in New York he is considered as a Presidential possibility. It was a race on the part of some newspapers to see which could make such an announcement first, but so far as we are able to determine the Trenton Times leads the procession in naming Col. Roosevelt for the Republican standard bearer in 1900.

One of the strange things in politics will be that Foster Voorhees will not only have had the gratification of defeating Elvin W. Crane for Governor, but that with the victory will go the power to appoint a Republican to the Essex county prosecutorship which the defeated Democratic nominee holds.

In the event of a straight Democratic ticket in the municipal election, what will those Republicans do who want to oust the present administration by being elected to fill offices themselves? It would be worse than nothing to have both a Citizens' and Democratic ticket in the field.

The open game season is here. We await with considerable anxiety to see who is going to be the first human being to be shot for a deer or some other festive game. Perhaps the safest way for hunters to do is to carry a banner aloft proclaiming, "I am a man. Don't shoot."

In a long editorial the Somerville Unionist-Gazette this week lays the blame for the defeat of VanDoren, the Republican candidate for Sheriff in Somerset county, to disgruntled Republicans. The Gazette says that all the leaders worked for his election.

While Elizabeth is about it may as well have Senator Cross elected president of the Upper House, and then everyone in Elizabeth will be satisfied because they will know there is nothing else worth having.

Joseph C. Blimm, the East Third street grocery merchant, is being mentioned as a possible candidate for Councilman in the First ward on the Democratic ticket this year.

Davy Watkins will no doubt be the next Speaker of the Assembly, thereby dropping down several pegs in his official position from the present place of Acting-Governor.

The loyalty that the Plainfield Republicans showed to their party ticket Tuesday night ought to strengthen any claims of local aspirants for nominations next year.

The New York Tribune quotes The Daily Press as Democratic. The Daily Press is and always has been independent.

—Just notice the changes in J. Fred MacDonald's new ad in The Daily Press today.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

"This time I'll escape or die." With these words Jack Morton makes a thrilling escape from Sing Sing. This realistic picture, with many others, will be seen in "The Sleeping City," at Music Hall tonight. New York has supplied many an author with a theme for a play but never in the extreme of realism which is shown in "The Sleeping City." Incident to the action will be seen a faithful reproduction of Battery Park, exterior of Sing Sing prison, and others. The play is one of the most original and amusing ever presented, and is staged with the closest attention to detail. It not only deals with the tenderest emotions, but also with the strongest passions, blending the most exciting incidents with the most laughable and enjoyable situations. The company is a strong one, and the specialties first class. In fact, everything connected with this attraction is all that money, science, art and genius can produce.

* * * * *

Henry Chanfrau, in the role of "Kit, the Arkansas Traveler," which will be at Music Hall next Tuesday, is the son of the original in that strong character, sustaining the fame of his progenitor, and his shoulders seem to be well formed to hold the mantle which his father left behind him as the heritage to a worthy son. Speaking of the humor of the play, the two characters, the judge and the major, are two comedians that are rarities to the stage. They ask no odds of the plot, their only concern being the satisfaction of an impecunious thirst, which asserts itself at all times. The major and the judge are living temperance lessons and their career points one of the morals of the play. They have traveled in the show for a generation or so, and as prodigal drunkards are an intoxicated success. They are prototypes of many on the stage today, but the great number of descendants only shows that imitation is a high form of flattery.

Next week Viola Allen in "The Christian" plays the sixth and the last week of her engagement at the Knickerbocker Theater, commencing Monday evening and will be followed by William H. Crane in his new comedy, "Worth a Million," the 21st inst. Miss Allen's New York run will practically not be interrupted. She plays the week of the 21st at the Columbia Theatre in Brooklyn borough, and Monday evening, the 28th inst., she returns to Manhattan and begins an engagement at the Garden Theatre, which will probably continue until the end of the present season. Miss Allen's receipts have proved a most substantial endorsement of her art and the merit of her play, which is undoubtedly the greatest drama for the people in general, without regard to social standing, class or creed, that has ever been presented on the American stage. The merit of a pure production of this kind is most substantially established by the box office returns. Up to last Saturday evening "The Christian" had played to $ 0,341 50, the largest receipts ever realized by a drama in four consecutive weeks in any theatre in America.

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Dunellen, Nov. 11—The chair factory will not be ready for business now until the first of next month, owing to delays in getting the machinery in position.

Adam Dealaman and Alfred Randolph went to Lebanon yesterday gunning. It rained all the morning, and the hunters sat in the hotel nursing their impatience until a train left for home, which they took minus any game.

More Riots at Pana.

Pana, Ill., Nov. 11.—William Lynch who was employed by the Pana Coal Company up to the time of the strike, has been shot at by negroes. Then they shot through the house of a widow, Mrs. McIntyre. The negroes in the Flat Hall district came running out and began to shoot in all directions. They kept shooting until the militia arrived on the scene.

When the shooting began many women and children ran to Captain Butler of Company B for protection. As far as known, no person was struck by the bullets.

Things are in such a state that it is dangerous for anyone to go out in the mining districts at night.

The citizens say if something is not done before long there will be an outbreak and every negro and operator will be killed. It was impossible to arrest any of the negroes.

THE SUNDAY LESSON.

INTERNATIONAL SERIES, WITH COMMENTARY BY DR. STEARNS.

Golden Text.—God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in time of trouble.—Ps. xlvi: 1. Nov. 13, 1898.

20. "Thus saith the Lord God of Israel. That which thus hast prayed to me against Sennacherib, king of Assyria, I have heard." In the fourteenth year of Hezekiah the King of Assyria came against Judah and greatly blasphemed the Lord both by word and by letter. Hezekiah, when he had read the letter, spread it before the Lord and prayed (verses 14-19). Many times have I followed Hezekiah's plan and always found rest. If we ask anything according to his will he heareth us (I John v, 14), and it is His will that we tell him everything and have careful anxiety about nothing. See in verse 19 that the great desire of the king in asking for the overthrow of Sennacherib was that all the earth might know that the God of Israel was the only true God.

21. "This is the word that the Lord hath spoken concerning him, the virgin, the daughter of Zion, hath despised thee and laughed thee to scorn." The people of God in Judah called the daughter of Zion, the daughter of Jerusalem (compare Lam. ii, 13), having God as their defender and avenger, need fear no enemy. In such strength Moses and Joshua lived; Gideon also, and David when he went fearlessly against Goliath. When we seek only the honor and glory of God He will not fail us.

22. "Whom hast thou reproached and blasphemed, the Holy One of Israel?" As in the next verse, "By thy messengers thou hast reproached the Lord." They spake against the God of Jerusalem as against the gods of the people of the earth, the works of the hands of man and for this cause Hezekiah, the king, and the prophet Isaiah, the son of Amoz, prayed and cried to heaven (II Chron. xxxii, 19, 22). God heard their prayer and now we will see how He answered it.

28. "I will turn thee back by the way which thou camest." This is a part of the word of the Lord concerning Sennacherib. See also verse 28, "I know thy abode and thy going out and thy coming in and thy rage against me." He who created all things can set bounds that none can pass. We can only go here and there, or do this or that if the Lord will (Jas. iv, 15). Man does not stop to consider that all his words and even his thoughts are known to the Lord (Ps. cxxxix, 1-4), and that it is impossible to hide anything from Him. Even Adam, blinded by satan, thought he could hide from God among the trees (Gen. iii, 8). Happy are those who live as in the sight of the Lord.

29. "And this shall be a sign unto thee." By comparing this verse with Lev. xxv, 21, 22, the sign seems to have been the special blessing of God upon the Sabbath year, or, in other words, the blessing of God on His obedient people. What but the hand of God could cause land to produce a three years' crop in one year? In the R. V. margin of Prov. x, 22, we read that the blessing of the Lord maketh rich and toil addeth nothing thereto.

30. "The remnant that is escaped of the house of Judah shall yet again take root downward and bear fruit upward." The doctrine that it is ever the few out of the many who are really the Lord's and who glorify Him, is found in all Scripture. The stories of Noah, of Lot in Sodom, of Elijah and such statements as "Few there be that find it," "An afflicted and poor people who shall trust in the Lord," indicate that which God sees to be ever true. See Math. vii, 14; Zeph. iii, 12.

31. "Out of Jerusalem shall go forth a remnant; the zeal of the Lord of Hosts shall do this. The zeal of the Lord of Hosts shall also bring the kingdom of peace on earth which shall have no end (Isa. ix, 7). All shall be accomplished in and through the son of David, our Lord Jesus Christ, of whom it is written, "The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up" (Ps. lxix, 9; John ii, 17). It is nothing with the Lord to work with many or with few; nothing is too hard for him (II Chron. xiv, 11; Jer. xxxii, 17).

32. "Therefore thus saith the Lord concerning the king of Assyria." Our Lord doeth according to His will in the army of heaven and among the inhabitants of the earth (Dan. iv, 25). His thoughts and purposes are as good as accomplished (Isa. xiv, 24; Jer. ii, 29).

33. "By the way that he came by the same shall he return and shall not come into this city, saith the Lord." This was the decision of Him who had all the hosts of heaven under His control and all power to carry out His purposes. He could say, "Hitherto shalt thou come, but no farther." (Job xxxviii, 11). Even the great adversary must stop when God shall say so, and he shall go to the pit for a thousand years, and to the lake of fire forever.

34. "For I will defend this city to save it for mine own sake, and for my servant David's sake." See also chapter xx, 6, and compare Isa. xxxi, 5, Zech. xii, 8. The "I wills" of Jehovah are a study of greatest possible benefit. They often occur in sevens and in connection with the statement "I am Jehovah."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 13. Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

TOPIC.—"Christian recreation."—Isa. xxxv, 1-10.

Recreation is becoming more and more a necessity as the world advances. We live faster, we do more in a shorter space of time than our forefathers ever did, and in so living and doing we wear heavily on our mental and physical systems. This constant wear and tear demands times of resting for recuperation. God realized that man would need rest amid the laborious duties of life. He gave us night in which the mind and body may receive new strength and vigor. He gave us one day in seven as a rest day and for a day of worship. In these days it is being almost universally conceded that more time even than this should be used for rest and recreation. Holidays and half holidays are used for this purpose, and wherever possible, special seasons of the year are used for vacations. All are necessary. The constant nervous strain to which the average man today is subjected is very wearing. It makes the hands weak and they need to be strengthened; it makes the knees feeble and they need to be confirmed. One of the best ways to do this is to rest and recreate. The Christian must realize this and act accordingly.

The result of this rest and recreation will be increased ability to labor. Thus we shall gather increased strength to open the eyes of the blind, to unstop the ears of the deaf, to make the lame man leap as the hart and the tongue of the dumb to sing. It's a false economy that provides no place for recreation. All work and no play not only makes Jack a dull boy, but weakens and shortens the life work of many a man and woman.

In Christian recreation there should be nothing un-Christian. Recreation times are times of temptation. Relieved from active work, we may feel sometimes relieved of moral obligation. But this is certainly not the case. We should never do at a time of recreation what we could not do in the moments of the most laborious work for Christ. Nor should opportunities to do good be neglected at such times. Christ, resting on the well curb in Samaria, did not lose the opportunity to speak to a sinful woman about the water of eternal life. Rest times often bring to us splendid opportunities to speak a word for Christ. Let us do it as He did it.

Bible Readings.—Ex. xxxi, 17; xxxiii, 14; II Sam. xvi, 11-14; Ps. lv, 6; lxxxiv, 1-10; Isa. xl, 28-31; lv, 1-3; Jer. vi, 16; Job. xi, 18, 19; Math. xi, 28, 29; John iv, 1-10; II Tim. i, 16-18.

Christian Endeavor Societies.

There are now within the borders of the United States 41,222 societies. These figures do not include the junior, intermediate and other societies. The total enrollment of worldwide Christian Endeavor is 54,191 societies, with an individual membership of more than 3,250,000. South Africa is entitled to the banner for the greatest proportionate increase in the number of societies. The junior societies continue to increase rapidly. There are now nearly 14,000 societies in the world. One thousand of these are to be found in foreign lands.

Russia is the only country in the world without a Christian Endeavor society.

There are 77 mothers' societies, 45 senior or graduate, societies, 17 societies in the United States army and in volunteers' camps, 119 societies in the United States navy and on board merchant ships. During the last year 27,686 juniors have become members of the church. From the intermediate societies 1,518 have joined their home churches and 196,550 from the young people's societies, making a total re-enforcement of church membership during the year amounting to 225,754.—Secretary Baer.

At the Present Line.

At this time of public excitement and upheaving, when all are thinking and talking almost constantly of the war and its results, we must not forget that there is a God upon the throne, whose right and province it is to direct and determine the destiny of nations as well as of individuals. He rules in the armies of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth, using this and that nationality for the accomplishment of His purposes. All events somehow further the establishment and extension of His kingdom. He has permitted the present crisis for some wise end and Christians ought to beseech Him to bring out of it such results as will be most for His glory and for the good of humanity.—Presbyterian.

Is Reverence Declining?

Is reverence declining? Yes, reverence for stocks and stones and senseless things. Let us rejoice, not lament, in consequence. Let us exult that we are advancing sufficiently to distinguish between reverence and superstition. The full fruitage will fall to a later age, but it cannot be long delayed.—Jewish Messenger.

Just as Near.

This is the beginning of all gospels—that the kingdom of heaven is just where we are. It is just as near us as our work is, for the gate of heaven for each soul lies in the endeavor to do that work perfectly.—Churchman.

Watch.

Watch, ye saints, with eyelids waking!
Lo, the powers of heaven are shaking!
Keep your lamps all trimmed and burning,
Ready for your Lord's returning.

Kingdoms at their base are crumbling.
Hark! His chariot wheels are rumbling!
Tell, oh, tell, of grace abounding
While the seventh trump is sounding!

Nations wane, though proud and stately;
Christ his kingdom hasteneth greatly;
Earth her latest pangs is summing.
Shout, ye saints; your Lord is coming!

Lamb of God, Thou meek and lowly;
Judah's lion, high and holy!
Lo, thy bride comes forth to meet thee,
All in blood washed robes to greet thee!

—Phœbe Palmer.

Lesson For the Week Beginning Nov. 13. Comment by Rev. W. J. Yates, A. M. Topic, Waiting Harvests.

SCRIPTURE READING.—Matth. ix, 35-38.—"The harvest truly is plentiful, but the laborers are few."

The great incentive to work for others is not because they appreciate the help given or greatly desire it, but because they need it, and we are able to give it. Few sick people relish the medicine given or appreciate the surgeon's skill and nurse's care, but they need them all the more because they are in no condition to appreciate the attention given them. The wounded soldier on the field of battle appeals to our helpfulness by his very helplessness. The sicker the child the more carefully we watch and tend. So in all spiritual concerns. It is not the whole but the sick who need the physician.

Christ came not to call the righteous but sinners to repentance. The heathen world calls us today most loudly by its necessities and appalling degradation. It would be false to figure the nations of heathenism as eager and hungry for the gospel. Rather they are antagonistic to it and prefer their old forms of error and debasement. But the greater their indifference and opposition the greater need that we call them to repentance and faith. They faint because of wickedness, and our hearts should feel compassion and our hands feed them.

All lands are opening to the Christian religion as never before. This century above all other centuries has seen the spread of the gospel. There have been other ages when missionaries performed great deeds. It was notable when the northern nations of Europe were evangelized. The story of Patrick and Bridget of Ireland reads like romance, but the thrilling tale of the conversion of Tonga and Fiji and Hawaii, of the missions of China, India, Japan and Africa is most fascinating also and is yet in the writing. We have the privilege of adding a chapter or paragraph. This movement of our own land and age and church should have our careful thought and most prayerful help.

Wider Horizons.

A few short months have vastly changed the ideas and ideals of the greater part of the American people. To preserve this continent from the interference and complications with European nations was the extreme limit of the foreign policy of our nation. The Cuban question had long clamored for solution, and conviction was growing that some change for the better must soon come. Peaceful means seemed likely to effect all that was desirable till the unfortunate destruction of the Maine forced the issue, and in a few days the traditional policy of the nation vanished before the rapid march of events. The necessities of defense of our Pacific coast sends Dewey to Manila and the destruction of the Spanish fleet lays the Philippines open to our arms and forces responsibility upon us never before assumed. Long time have we hesitated to acquire even a coaling station in the West Indies. Now we possess ourselves of Hawaii in the Pacific and Porto Rico in the Caribbean and assume governmental powers in Cuba and say that Spain must vacate the western hemisphere. All this means more than the gratification of a lust for conquest. It is not even done at the dictation of politicians and a dominant plutocracy. Under all is the hand of Divine Providence, shaping destiny, opening and shutting doors, setting up judges and putting down princes, and through all broadening the horizons of human vision.

The church must see her opportunity in all this. These lands need a pure gospel and Christian enlightenment. Never was the teaching of God more manifest in the movements of the nations than in these recent developments.

Learn to Walk.

It is a great day when baby takes the first step alone. It is more important than when the first tooth comes or the first word is spoken. Learning to walk is both a science and an art. Knowledge of what to do and how to do it must be mastered, and then skill must be acquired to make muscles, sinews and bones obey the will and move according to plan. How great a feat it is to walk few grown people realize until a time of sickness obliges them to begin it all over and learn in adult years what they once learned in babyhood.

It is no less a feat to learn to walk upright in the moral and religious life. What is the right way must be first found, and then by repeated efforts the affections, desires, will and all bodily powers must be made to go in the right direction. It needs patience. Many stumble and fall, but if they give it up all the rest of life is one long crawling in the dust. There is much need to strengthen the weak knees and to seek the straight paths and to gather all stones of stumbling out of the way.

Every evil passion indulged, every bad appetite and unholy desire gratified weakens the spiritual force and brings danger. Many a young man has stumbled over a cigarette and glass of wine into a pit from which he could not rise. Many young ladies find that after they have learned to dance they have lost the habit of walking safely and uprightly. By all means learn how to walk.

The Student Movement.

At the beginning of the century the colleges of the land were schools of infidelity in great measure. Now a great change has come over them. A great body of the most scholarly have offered for the foreign missionary work. Multitudes are earnest Christians in the home field, and the influence of the universities in the main is on the side of vital godliness. Not a few of those who have taken high honors in scholarship and in athletics have also entered most heartily into the leadership of the Christian forces. Learning and piety are well united.

Lokal-Nachrichten aus der alten Heimath.

Sachsen.

Dresden. Im letzten Vierteljahr wurden aus dem hiesigen Bezirk nach den Ver. Staaten Waaren im Werthe von $211,105 ausgeführt. Gegen die gleiche Zeit des Vorjahres ist das eine Steigerung von $29,148.—Die Stadtverordneten beschlossen eine Umsatzsteuer auf die Detailgeschäfte für alle Gebrauchsartikel. Die Steuer beginnt bei 200,000 Mark Umsatz mit einem halben Prozent und steigt bei 1,000,000 Mark Umsatz auf den Hochstsatz von zwei Prozent.

Freiberg. Das Komite zur Hebung des Flachsbaues für das Königreich Sachsen hat beschlossen, hier eine Flachsausstellung zu veranstalten.

Leipzig. Der Fehlbetrag der vorjährigen sächsisch-thüringischen Industrie- und Gewerbeausstellung beziffert sich auf rund 619,000 Mark. Der Rath hat nach einer den Stadtverordneten zugegangenen Vorlage beschlossen, zur Deckung dieses Fehlbetrages aus städtischen Mitteln eine Beihilfe von 400,000 Mark zu gewähren. Freilich dürfte es im Stadtverordneten-Kollegium noch Kämpfe geben, ehe der Rathsbeschluß sanktionirt wird. Die Garantiefondszeichner haben dann noch 15 Prozent zu leisten. Das Defizit ist im Wesentlichen entstanden durch dreifache Ueberschreitungen des Baubudgets—dafür tauscht die Stadt aber bei der Zahlung von 400,000 Mark schöne Anlagen ein, welche vom Baubureau geschaffen wurden.

Reinsdorf. In dem zur Zeit außer Betrieb befindlichen und mit Wasser angefüllten Steinbruche des Gutsbesitzers Bretschneider hierselbst wurde die Leiche des 13 Jahre alten Schulknaben Leistner aus Friedrichsgrün gefunden. Der Knabe ist zweifellos freiwillig in den Tod gegangen. Als Ursache hierfür nimmt man Schamgefühl und Furcht vor Strafe wegen eines unbedeutenden Diebstahls an.

Zwickau. In den Filialen der Mohr'schen Margarinfabrik hierselbst wurden kürzlich sämmtliche zum Kauf ausliegenden Fleischwaaren beschlagnahmt. Diese behördliche Maßnahme stützt sich auf eine ortsstatutarische Bestimmung, nach der nur Fleischer der Stadt in offenen Läden Fleisch verkaufen dürfen. Die Inhaber der betreffenen Geschäfte haben Beschwerde eingereicht.

Thüringische Staaten.

Apolda. Baumeister Becker in Berlin und die Berliner Bank haben der Stadt Apolda das Anerbieten gemacht, Apolda mit Jena durch eine elektrische Bahn zu verbinden und in Apolda eine Centrale zu der Abgabe von Licht und Kraft zu errichten, doch muß die Stadt die jetzt in Privatbesitz befindliche Gasanstalt erwerben und an die Berliner Bank abtreten. Der Gemeinderath hat sich im Prinzip damit einverstanden erklärt, so daß die Ausführung gesichert ist.

Saalfeld. Die Wiederwahl des hiesigen Ersten Bürgermeisters Liebscher scheint nicht so ganz glatt abgelaufen zu sein. Wie verlautet, hatte der Gemeinderath den Beschluß gefaßt, den Ersten Bürgermeister zu ersuchen, die Bureaustunden pünktlicher einzuhalten, welchem Wunsch der Wiedergewählte nachkommen will.

Weimar. Die großartig eingerichtete Sophien Heilstätte für Lungenkranke bei Tannroda wurde unter Theilnahme des Großherzogs und des Erbgroßherzogs, sowie zahlreicher geladener Gäste und der einziehenden 40 Kranken feierlich eröffnet.

Freie Städte.

Hamburg. Die Verhandlungen mit Preußen über die Bahnhofsfrage haben nunmehr ihren Abschluß gefunden. Die Hoheitsrechte bleiben, soweit die Bahn das Hamburger Gebiet berührt, Hamburg vorbehalten. Das Terrain für den neuen Bahnhof werden die alten St. Georger Friedhöfe bilden, doch werden auch größere Straßenveränderungen erforderlich sein, wovon namentlich Ernst Merck-Straße, Holzdamm und Kirchenallee betreffen werden. Mit den erforderlichen Vorarbeiten soll nunmehr in nächster Zeit begonnen werden.—Frau Embden, die hier wohnende Schwester Heinrich Heines, vollendete dieser Tage ihr 98. Lebensjahr in seltener geistiger und körperlicher Frische und Rüstigkeit.

Bremen. Der Deserteur der französischen Fremdenlegion, Schumacher aus Königstein, der im Juni aus Algier desertirte und durch die deutsche Gesandtschaft in Tanger hierher geschickt wurde, ist bei seiner Ankunft der Militärbehörde als unsicherer Heerespflichtiger überwiesen worden.

Lübeck. In ruchloser Weise ist das Hünengrab in Waldhusen theilweise zerstört worden. Der Schlußdeckel des Grabeseinganges in einem Gewichte von 600 bis 700 Kilogramm ist abgehoben und in den Zugang geworfen, sowie sämmtliche Keilsteine, welche den oberen Schlußdeckel befestigten, sind herausgebrochen und größtentheils zerstückelt worden. Auch sonst sind noch allerlei Verwüstungen angerichtet. Die Behörde hat eine hohe Belohnung auf die Ermittelung der Thäter ausgesetzt.

BEATRIX HARCOURT.

"Whom do you think I saw driving with Gerald Morton this morning?" asked Mrs. Morris of her great friend, the doctor's wife, as the two ladies were enjoying 5 o'clock tea and the general gossip of the parish together one afternoon.

"Beatrix Harcourt," Mrs. Maynard answered promptly.

"Ah, you saw her, too, then. I must say I was astonished. It is well known that young Morton bears the character of being the fastest man in the neighborhood."

"I have long ceased to be surprised at anything Beatrix Harcourt does," the other lady answered significantly. "If Mr. Kenrick does not mind, I do not see why any one else should trouble their heads about her eccentricities."

"Certainly not," Mrs. Morris agreed. "But, really, Rose, she was laughing and talking in the most giddy manner, and Gerald was bending toward her until his face nearly touched hers."

"And that is our future vicar's wife! Well, I shall take care my daughters do not see much of her." And Mrs. Maynard drew herself up with a kind of lofty indignation, as some fresh visitors were shown into the room.

Poor Beatrix! Her numerous delinquencies were the subject of many afternoon tea gossips, and had been ever since she came to Hillchester, four years ago. She certainly was unlike other girls; for, in addition to being a "blue stocking," and having taken her degree at Oxford, she had a most unreasonable interest in the working classes—not a mere ladylike interest, which contented itself with calling at their cottages with a few words of good advice and a tract. Ah, no! she had always some plan, or "craze," as the good people of Hillchester called it, for their benefit on hand—classes for the young girls, ambulance lectures, concerts, teas, what not?

For the conventionalities of society she cared not at all. She never attended the afternoon teas, therefore she heard no gossip.

She had been known even to take the broom off the lame old crossing sweeper at the corner of the road and work away in earnest until there was a passage fit for a queen to walk over.

And in spite of all, the vicar of Hillchester had asked Beatrix Harcourt to be his wife. Well, as the leaders of society in Hillchester remarked with ominous sighs, wonders never cease!

Nevertheless, it must be confessed that Rev. John Kenrick was in no very enviable frame of mind, as a week later he wended his way somewhat slowly toward his lady love's abode.

The gossip which had begun in Mrs. Maynard's drawing room had spread all over the parish, until a version of it, highly exaggerated and colored, had reached the vicar's ears.

Beatrix was leaning over the drive gate which led to her father's house, watching for him as usual, and as he saw the glad look of welcome brighten and sweeten all her face at his approach, he said to himself that his darling was as pure and sweet as the wild roses she fastened in her belt.

But Beatrix soon discovered that something was amiss, and after the first greetings were over she asked, almost anxiously, "What is the matter, John? You do not look well."

For a full minute Mr. Kenrick did not answer; instead he looked down at her as she stood with one small hand resting upon his black coat sleeve; the sunlight falling with loving touch upon her hair, which was cut short (another point which met with the disfavor of the Hillchester matrons), and curled naturally all over her head like a child's. Her lover sometimes laughingly told her that she had a baby face still, and he was not far wrong, for her expression was singularly untroubled and childlike, and yet there was a depth of feeling in the honest blue eyes which told both of strength of character and purpose.

"Trix, it is silly, perhaps, but something I have heard to-day has troubled me greatly."

"About me?" Trix asked gayly. "Of what fresh enormity am I accused, John?" and a sudden gravity crept into the sweet voice; "I thought you said you minded none of these things?"

"I do not," the vicar answered quickly; "indeed," gently stroking the soft, yet strong looking hand, "I love you all the better for them, but—it is better to speak out. Trix, have you been driving about with Gerald Morton lately?"

The next moment Mr. Kenrick would have given much never to have asked the question, for Trix turned to him quickly, a world of scorn shining in her blue eyes.

"And so, John, this means that you cannot trust me, and you choose rather to believe any idle story people may tell."

"Tell me there is no truth in it, Trix." Mr. Kendrick said quietly, though his eyes had clouded with a deep look of pain beneath her implied rebuke, "and I promise you I will believe it."

But Beatrix had removed her hand, and all the sunshine had died out of her bonny face as she said wearily: "Mr. Morton has driven me over to Castlefields twice this week. Is there anything else you want to ask me?"

No, there was nothing else. Mr. Kenrick felt it was almost sacrilege with those pure eyes looking into his to breathe the doubts which now seemed to him so unworthy.

But, alas! for the "little rift." Beatrix tried to talk of other things, tried hard to be her own, bright, merry self, and yet was conscious of an unwonted sense of absolute grief, when at last the vicar told her he was obliged to go.

It was a month later, and Beatrix Harcourt was walking swiftly along the dusty road leading to Castlefields, carrying a small basket containing some delicacy for the sick woman she was going to see. The sound of wheels made her turn her head, and the next moment a deep, musical voice said pleasantly: "Miss Harcourt, are you again bound on the same journey? Now, do let me have the pleasure of giving you a lift."

Beatrix hesitated one moment, then she answered frankly, "Thank you so much. You know Jennie, that poor crippled child I told you about? Well, I have had a note from her this morning to say her mother is very ill and there is no one to do anything for her."

Gerald Morton looked admiringly down at the fair face beside him. It was the young man of Hillchester who had given Beatrix Harcourt the name of "the fair philanthropist," and it spoke well for the girl that even in the fastest circles her name was never mentioned but with respect.

When Beatrix reached the little cottage, which lay close to a wood five miles from Hillchester, she found everything in a state of confusion. One glance at the poor woman showed her to be in a high state of fever and slightly delirious, while an ominous crimson rash was beginning to make its appearance on her face and neck.

"Why, Jenne, your mother has the fever," Beatrix exclaimed, rapidly. "Haven't you sent for a doctor, child, and is there no neighbor who would come and help to nurse her?"

"I wrote to the doctor, miss, when I sent your note, but he has not been yet, and as to neighbors, miss, there are none for a mile or more."

All the morning Beatrix waited, doing all she could for the poor sick woman, and the afternoon was well on its way when the welcome rap, which surely told of the doctor's appearance, sounded at the door.

Beatrix literally flew to open it, and found herself face to face not with the doctor, but the vicar.

For the last month, ever since the gossip about Gerald Morton, in fact, matters had been rather strained between the vicar and his fiancee, but all was forgotten now, as, in the impulse of the moment, Beatrix exclaimed, "You must not come in here, John, or touch me, either. Mrs. Carr has the fever."

For a moment a look of keen anxiety darkened his grave blue eyes, and the next Mr. Kendrick had folded the slight form close in his arms, as he murmured brokenly: "Trixie, my own brave darling, would you have me a greater coward than yourself?"

With his arms still about her, she told him how Gerald Morton had driven her to the cottage in the morning, adding: "It was well he did, for I should have been an hour later, and Jennie and her mother were quite alone."

"Trix, will you forgive me for letting that horrid scandal trouble me, even for one moment? Dear heart, I feel I shall never forgive myself."

"Yes, I will forgive you," Trix answered, gayly, the last shadow gone from her honest blue eyes; "only you must never do it again, as the children say."

The vicar's low-breathed answer sounded like a blessing, and then Beatrix hurried him off to see what further means they could devise for the poor woman's comfort during the night.

A fortnight later all Hillchester was thrown into a state of dire consternation by the news that Beatrix Harcourt had scarlet fever, and was, moreover, so dangerously ill that the doctor almost despaired of her life. Truly, a universal calamity might have befallen the place, for Beatrix's illness and its cause formed the perpetual topic of conversation, both in the homes of the rich and poor.

It happened during one of the worst day's of Beatrix's illness that Mrs. Morris and her friend, Mrs. Maynard, were walking by the drive gate leading to Beatrix's home. To their astonishment they saw a large crowd of people waiting just outside the door—women with babies in their arms, girls who had stolen a few minutes out of their dinner hour, even one or two tall youths and laboring men.

In a moment the door opened and a maidservant spoke a few words to the anxious watchers. Evidently it was not good news, for with one accord they slowly and silently turned to go away, and as they passed the two ladies one woman exclaimed in a broken voice which showed tears were not far off: "Ah, well, if we lose her our best friend is gone, and that's certain. There ain't many in this world like our Miss Beatrix. Bless her sweet face!"

Mrs. Maynard and Mrs. Morris walked on in silence. The scene had touched them deeply, and the eyes of the doctor's wife were full of tears, while her companion had an unwonted and most unpleasant choking sensation in her throat. The lesson was learned, though it was bitter, for each felt "what would these good people have cared had I been in Beatrix Harcourt's place?"

But Beatrix, dangerous as her illness was, did not die, and six months later Hillchester was the scene of a greater rejoicing than had been known for many a long year, while the wonderful arches, with their various devices, the glad faces of the people, the children with their flower-laden baskets and the church bells ringing out their sweet messages far and wide, all combined to show the love and respect with which their vicar and his bride had so deservedly gained in the hearts of their people.—Ethel Beatrice Wadlow, in Madame.

JUST MY LUCK.

By Mary F. Haynes.

"It's just my luck!" said Reuben Starbird. "Just my luck! Never knew it to fail. It's always just so."

"What is your luck?" asked Melissa Bird, to whom this speech was addressed. "What do you mean by luck, any way?"

"Why, just what I say," responded Reuben, his chin a trifle less in the air than it had been during his first speech. The crisp, impatient way in which Melissa had spoken was not without its influence. Her voice was pleasant, her smile was pleasant; yet they made him feel that she meant a good deal.

"I mean—why, I mean just this," continued Reuben, making another beginning, since the first did not seem to amount to much. "I mean that, whatever I try to do, things seem to go against me, somehow. I don't see why it is, but I never seem to have no luck," he concluded. This seemed, even to himself, to be rather a lame conclusion, but he did not see his way towards making it any better.

He stood rather awkwardly before her yet much inclined to hold his own, even against his sweetheart.

"What have you been trying to do?" Melissa went on, with the most exasperating coolness and precision.

"Well," said Reuben, desperately, after a considerable pause, during which Melissa stood composedly surveying him with her shapely hands quietly folded over each other. "Well, f' instance, now, I started this morning to get on that seven-thirty train for New York. There's the whistle, and here'm I, a good half mile away."

"Luck!" said Melissa. "I shouldn't think luck had much to do with that. If you had managed to get up half an hour earlier, say, or had walked a little faster"—here she stopped, and blushed in spite of all her efforts.

"If I had not stopped to see you, that is," interposed Reuben, eager to seize the first advantage which he had been able to get in the whole conversation.

"You shouldn't have stopped for anything," retorted Melissa, severely. "If it was really your business to get to that train this morning, you should have been there without any regard to anything else. Did Mr. Travis send you to buy goods?"

"No, no; I'm going on other business. Fact is, Melissa," he said, endeavoring to put on an air of superior smartness and elevating his chin in air, in that aspiring, ineffectual fashion which was as characteristic of him as the pretty air of decision with which Melissa held her well-shaped, softy rounded chin slightly inclined downward was of her; "the fact is, I'm tired of a country store. You never get ahead any; drudge all your life, and never get anywhere. Now, in New York just see what luck a fellow gets into sometimes. Look at all those rich old chaps who went there from the country without a dollar and just see what luck some of 'em dropped into!"

Up went Reub's chin, higher and higher, as he felt himself lifted upon the tide of his own eloquence and ambition.

"They had pluck, and you haven't," said Melissa, with that horrible, relentless directness of speech which always made Reuben tremble in his shoes; "they had what some folks call stickativeness, and you haven't; they——"

"Now look here, hold on, Melissa!" cried Reuben, immensely aggrieved. "Here are you and I, that have been what you may call courting these two years, and this is the way you talk to me, just as I'm really starting out to do something at last. And it's for you as much as for myself that I want to try and be somebody, and get money, and all that."

"Then why don't you go back and attend to the business that you know how to do and can do well, if you only choose to give your mind to it, instead of mooning off after things you can never get?"

Melissa's own heart was sore; but she dared not give way to weakness now. She felt that the critical moment had come for both of them. It was now or never.

"If you take that view of it," said Reuben slowly, "perhaps——"

"I'm trying to take a common-sense view of it," returned Melissa, resolutely choking down a rising sob. "Common sense is the surest thing to depend on in this world. You have a good place here, Reuben, and you will not lose it, unless you lose it by your own fault. Mr. Travis has a good trade, and he is growing old and getting tired of the business. You might just as well have it as anybody. But who is there that you know in New York? Where could you get a place? Do you know anything about the way people do things there?"

"I suppose I'm not such a fool but that I could learn," said Reuben, with much dignity.

He lifted his hat; he turned away. Melissa's heart felt like lead within her breast. But she had done her duty; she had delivered her soul. The issue lay in the hands of Providence. She was a devout believer in Providence; she trusted that "Providence would overrule everything for good." But in spite of all her faith, a horrible secret unbelief kept hinting, "But suppose Reub should be let to go, after all!"

She was very miserable as she sat down on a green bank beside the path through the fields. She could not go any further. The tears began to come thick and fast into the gray eyes. All the fire was gone out of them now.

Would Reuben go, or would he not? That was the only thing which made any distinct impression upon her mind. On that question hung her whole future. She had set her foot down, and she must be firm. Long enough had she endured Reuben's shilly-shallying; either he must change, or she must. Oh, if she could but make him change! Reuben was so kind, so pleasant, so full of fun, so nice, so agreeable; she was so fond of him.

But on the other hand, he was so irresolute, so easily disastisfied with things about him. If he did not stop pretty soon and turn square round and try to stick to something, he would come to be just nothing at all. He would be just like his father, old Isril Starbird!

Melissa could not bear the prick of that thought. She sprang up and walked on fast until she got into the orchard. She paused to wipe away all traces of her tears before she went up the little path, half hidden in the tall grass, up to the back door. Poor girl! She thought it was all for Reuben that she was crying, because he was letting himself down, because he was not going to be the man he might have been. But some of it, too, was for her own pride, for the loss of that secretly longed for, that comfortable and dignified position as the wife of the village storekeeper who always wore a silk dress on a Sunday, and had her bonnets from the city. She, too, had had her fine little air-castles, though they were built upon more solid foundations than Reuben's. It was partly for these that she wept; but more—how much!—for her life which was going to be wasted on account of Reuben's folly, for the home and the happiness which were never to be.

Yet she could not yield. She could not even go to him and say, "If you love me, Reuben." No; she must put it on the solid footing of reason and common sense. If these prevailed, there was hope that Reuben might yet be a man worth loving and marrying. But if they failed, why, then, perhaps it was better——

Here she broke down utterly. She could not help it. Melissa was a heroine in her way; but heroines are human, after all. She meant to be a heroine; but she suffered just like any other woman.

She stole in noiselessly, and shut herself up in her own room. "She had a headache," and that was the last of her for that day. The night was long and sleepless. Next morning she came down stairs, and tried to take up the burdens of life again.

"Melissa," said her mother, "you must go down to the store before breakfast, and see if those things came yesterday; spices an' things, you know. I want 'em to cook with the first thing this forenoon."

"I can't go!" faltered Melissa. "I never slept at all, and I have such a headache. I don't believe I can!"

She shivered at the very thought.

"But you must go. Your father says just ask Mr. Travis which mower's the best."

She stood still for a moment; then she took down her hat and went out. Once on her way, she walked with feverish haste. It would soon be over now. The first glance behind the counter would tell the story for her.

Oh, sight of joy! There stood Reuben, in his blue overalls, briskly opening a cask of molasses, and drawing off two gallons for old Miss Symonds, who stood by, with a Shaker on, intently inspecting the operation.

The sudden relief was too much for her. She felt as if she should have to sit down on the steps of the store. She put her hand on one of the wooden pillars which supported the piazza, to steady herself. Everything was swaying about her eyes; old Jacob Parkins, in the tilted-back chair by the rusty, fireless stove, was dancing up and down, and the hollows and ridges of the uneven floor kept coming up to meet her like the deck of a ship.

Mr. Travis came down from his perch and got the spices for her himself, chuckling, and saying that as Reuben was so busy he didn't suppose she would want to disturb him!

Melissa smiled sweetly, and said,—

"Oh, no! certainly not!"

And she never spoke to Reuben at all. But as she came back across the floor their eyes met, and he colored very red, while she grew pale. But they understood each other, though they did not speak; to say the truth, she could not.

It was all that she could do to walk steadily along the road, and answer the ignorant, unconscious people who addressed her. They did not know that anything had happened. They did not dream that she had lived her life all through since yesterday morning—lived her life all through and given up everything in it that ever she wanted; but now here it was, all before her again, to do just as she pleased with it.

And there was Reuben, back again in his place, with his blue overalls on, just as if nothing had happened. It was nothing to the rest of the world, but it was a great deal to them.

Got It Right at Last.

A farmer who had lost a son in the war, employed the village poet to write an obituary, which ran as follows:

"He for his country fit an' fout Until Death blowed his candle out."

"That won't do," said the bereaved parent, "kaze they don't use candles now. Take another whirl at it."

The poet squared his jaws and presently produced the following:

"He fit and fout with gun and knife,
Till Death blowed out the gas of life."

"That's better now," exclaimed the farmer. "I've blowed out the gas myself many a time."—Atlanta Constitution.

Belief in the Regiment That It Will Be Mustered Out and Not Taken South.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Pompton Plains, Nov. 11—The Third New Jersey Volunteers did not leave yesterday for Athens, Ga., as was expected. The regiment was ordered there some time ago by the War Department.

No cars were on hand to transport the men yesterday, and it is reported that the orders for the command to go south will be countermanded. Col. Lee, it is said, has been unable to ascertain whether his command will remain at the powder works, doing garrison duty, or be mustered out.

As far as known, no arrangements have been made to send the Third Regiment south. It was reported that orders would be issued in a few days for the regiment to be mustered out.

Gossip and Points About Those Who Seek the Gridiron to Have Their Sport at This Time of the Year.

The Alis second had a game arranged with the second eleven of Pingry's School, of Elizabeth, for last Tuesday morning, but the visitors wrote at the last moment that they would be unable to come.

Captain Phillips, of the Alis team, has decided to continue the Alis team for the remainder of the season. Saturday there will be no game as most of the players are going to Princeton to see the annual contest between Yale and Princeton. For the week after the Alis boys expect to play Scotch Plains.

It has been definitely decided by the management of the Plainfield team that the eleven will meet the San Remo's again on Martine Field Thanksgiving Day. It is not yet decided whether the game will be played in the morning or afternoon, but most of the players prefer the morning so that it will not interfere with their Thanksgiving dinner.

L. L. de Casanova, who refereed the game between the Plainfield boys and San Remo team Tuesday afternoon, was the regular quarter back on the visiting team. He has played here in each of the former games. Last Saturday he played quarter against the Riverside Athletic Club and had his head cut, which prevented him from playing Tuesday. His place was filled by Fred Wenck, the former full back, now captain of the Twenty-second Regiment team.

A word of commendation should be spoken for Thomas A Cuming, who played centre on the Plainfield team. While there was not one of the team who did not try to do his best, Cuming played a remarkable game. He was in every play and tackled the runner time after time for a loss. Cuming, Cathcart and Hallock did brilliant work at tackling. Smith was promptly on hand, but tackled a trifle too high, and on several occasions was dragged some distance before he downed his man.

Considering the fact that the Plainfield team made its first appearance of the season on the gridiron Tuesday and that the only practice had been by electric lights during the two weeks preceding the game, the showing they made against the San Remo was very good. The visitors played rather loosely or else they would have rolled up a much higher score. In the second half, they put in a number of new men while the Plainfield team had the same makeup with one exception throughout the game.

In the great Yale-Princeton game that is to be played on Brokaw Field, Princeton, tomorrow afternoon, there will be one Plainfield boy. He will not, in all probability, line up at the start but he will be on the side lines ready at any time to take his place in the game. Charles Dupee, of Washington Park, is substitute full-back on the Yale 'varsity eleven and as the regular man for that position, McBride, is suffering from a weak ankle, it is possible that Charlie may have the honor so coveted by all football players of taking part in the game.

The San Remo boys were well pleased with their reception in Plainfield Tuesday and want to come here again. L. L. deCasanova, the manager, was very anxious to arrange a game for Thanksgiving Day. While there is no team that Plainfield would rather play, it has not yet been decided whether a game will be played on that date. It is rather difficult to train and practice for one game only, and some of the players are in favor of giving up entirely any attempt to play any more this year. Several others have engagements for Thanksgiving and cannot play.

GOLF.

The finals for the Chapman cup will be played tomorrow afternoon on the course of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club.

There will be play on the Park Golf course tomorrow if the weather is favorable. A tea will be given in the clubhouse in the afternoon which will be in charge of Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen, assisted by some other lady members of the club.

Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers followed up her victory election day at the Park Glub, by lowering the ladies' record for the eighteen-hole course of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club, from 117 to 108 on the following day. The old record was made by Miss Maud VanBoskerck.

The first golf tournament of the Middlebrook Country Club was held on the links of the club, near Bound Brook, Tuesday in the presence of over a hundred members. Mrs. L S. Cook won the ladies' prizes for both hole and medal play. Townsend Mason won the gentlemen's prize for hole play, and William A. Fisher was the winner of the prize for medal play. Golf is fast becoming popular with the Bound Brookites.

AN EXEMPLARY WOMAN.

Christian Character of the Late Mrs. M. M. Cock.

Many warm and devotedly attached friends have been gathering up recollections of the life and saintly character of Mrs. Cock. They have been speaking, one to another, of some of the many graces which adorned her walk and conversation. A Christian life, extending over the unusually long period of ninety-six years, must of necessity come to abound in most precious and valuable experience of God's goodness and providential care. As she has so long been sitting at the feet of her Savior, seeking to learn of Him, she had gotten many lessons by heart and has been daily exemplifying them. It has been well said that every Christian should be the personification at least of some one grace of the Holy Spirit of God, of faith, of love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, or patience, so as to fulfill the Apostle's exhortation and be "a living epistle, read of all men."

Mr. Cock manifested many of these graces in her quiet, retired life, which she has been living during the last ten or fifteen years that she has been called to pass in her home and a large part of them in her home. Three things must have struck every one who knew her and they were the unfailing strength of her faith in God, her Father, her patient endurance and determination to do His will, and her heart-felt gratitude for her many blesings. She never spoke of her ailments and infirmities, without quickly adding—"but I have many things to be thankful for," and then would delight to account some of them.

Let us thank God for the grace, given to this, His aged servant, and pray for His help that we may follow the example of her steadfastness in the faith and obedience to God's Holy commandments. R.

TO CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY.

The Christian Endeavor Society of Seventh-Day Baptists' to Hold Exercises.

The regular monthly business meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventh-Day Baptist church was held in the church parlors Wednesday evening. After the routine business a committee, composed of Miss Louise Clawson, Mrs. O. S. Rogers and Miss Ida Spicer, was appointed to make the necessary arrangements for the anniversary service in the church Saturday morning, December 10th. The envelope system was adopted for the payment of the dues.

It was decided that a girls' mission band should be organized under the auspices of the society and the missionary committee was given charge of it. The delegate to the yearly meeting of the Seventh-Day Baptist church was selected to be Miss Ernestine Smith.

Men's Meetings.

As one result of the revival in the Seventh Day Baptist church last year, a men's meeting was organized, and held Sunday nights until the summer vacation. The purpose of these men is to work, in and through the church, for one another's good, and to help other men, whom they may reach by their influence, to lead better and happier lives. The meetings have now begun for the new year, and Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis will give an address next Sunday night. Subject—"The Broader Education for Business Men." Men are cordially invited.

PROFITS FROM STREET PLAYING.

Considerable Amounts of Money Gathered by Strolling Italians.

When an Italian "goes broke," which isn't very often by the way, he does not run to the selectmen with a long tale of poverty and woe, neither does he land at the poor house and settle down for the rest of his days. Not at all. The unfortunate son of the land of sunny skies, penniless though he may be, always has three good stand-bys, which will put him on his feet and turn the tide his way—bananas, peanuts and pianos.

There are six street pianos in daily use in New Haven. Four of these are owned by an Italian saloon keeper on Union street and the others by the individuals who operate them. The first mentioned rents pianos to his countrymen, who call for them every morning and return them at night. The men who drag the piano about the streets all day divide their receipts with the owner every evening on returning. When the money taken in during the day is less than $5, the trip is considered poor. On the other hand, receipts average about $6 or $7 per day, and sometimes go as high as $9 or $10. Routes where this harvest is gathered are carefully watched, and kept as secret as possible from competitors in the field.

One of these pianos costs $250 in New York, and they are made most substantially in order to stand the wear and tear of street service. The owners each year contract for a new "barrel" of tunes, ten in number, which is supplied by the dealer at a cost of $55. So, following the original investment, this is the only yearly expense.—New Haven Register.

HAS THE MAKING OF A FINANCIER.

He Accepted His Uncle's Offer and Pitched In on His Own Hook.

A certain wealthy man has set his nephew up in business three times, but the young man lacks something essential to success in the mercantile line and failed with each effort. When he came with the fourth request for financial backing, the uncle demurred.

"You must learn to lean on yourself," he said. "I can't carry you all your life. It would be an unkindness in me to keep supplying you with money to carry on enterprises that invariably end in assignment. I'll tell you what I'll do. You owe a good deal as the result of that last failure. Pitch in on your own hook and go it alone till you pay those debts off. When you've done that I'll give you a check for all the amount due. Such an experience would do you more good than all the money I could give you now."

Three months later the nephew walked in with every claim receipted in full, and the uncle was delighted as he gave the promised check.

"That's something like it now, and I warrant you feel all the better for the hard training. How did you manage, Tom?"

"I borrowed the money, uncle."

The old gentleman is telling that there is the making of a financier in his nephew.

JAMES KELLEY'S DEAD BODY IN A BOX CAR.

Mysterious Death of a Plainfield Young Man.

CHAS. FROELICH ARRESTED.

HE HAD POSSESSION OF THE DEAD MAN'S REVOLVER.

Apprised Kelley's Family of the Finding of the Body and was Subsequently Taken Into Custody to Await Developments—Kelley Left Home Wednesday Morning With $60 in His Pockets.

Apparently the victim of a murderous shot, the lifeless body of James J. Kelley, of this city, was found lying face downward in an empty freight car at the Waverley yards of the Pennsylvania railroad early yesterday morning. A further investigation showed that the wound in the head was caused by a fall while a quantity of poison was discovered in the stomach of the dead man. Until late last evening, the identity of the body remained undiscovered. Then James Kelly, of 602 East Third street, this city, arpeared at the morgue in company with Sergeant Kiely of the local police force and identified the body as Mr Kelley's son, James.

Young Kelley is eigtheen years old. Off and on for two years he has been in the employ of the street department of the city. He hard charge of a horse and cart, belonging to his father that was used in the street cleaning department. For the services of man, horse and cart, the city paid $2.50 a day.

Early Wednesday morning Kelley went to City Treasurer Arnold and drew the money coming to him. It amounted to about $60. Then he went home and his mother remembers distinctly the fact that he had the money with him. At 10 o'clock young Kelley left home and said he was going to Newark. He did not name any definite purpose for his trip, but his mother supposed that it was for pleasure. That was the last he was seen alive in Plainfield.

There is no clue as to his whereabouts until 4 o'clock that afternoon when Charles Froelich, of 374 Market street, Newark, met him at the corner of Broad and Market streets. Froelich says that he seemed intoxicated at the time. Froelich is a lad of seventeen years. He lives with his father. They formerly lived at 768 East Third street, this city. Six weeks ago they moved to Newark, where the elder Froelich started a machine shop. Froelich and Kelley were well acquainted in Plainfield.

Froelich left Kelley at 9:30 o'clock Wednesday evening. What happened in the interval the police refuse to tell. It is known, however, that Froelich has not told of any important happenings then. The young men probably wandered about together.

Froelich's story of his own movements after that hour is rather vague. He says that when he went home he found the door locked and so went back to the rooms of a club that he frequents and spent the night there. The police declare that the regular habitues say that Froelich was not there.

The elder Kelley is sexton of St. Mary's cemetery. He is a faithful, steady worker, and is well known and highly respected by the community in which he lives. Young Kelley had an excellent record in the street department as a hard and reliable worker. Once last summer, however, he went to New York with a friend after having drawn about $60 of his wages, and returned after spending it all.

There was no uneasiness felt in the Kelley family for the son was supposed to be abundantly able to take care of himself. Mrs. Kelley says that her son never became intoxicated although he partook of a friendly glass once in a while. She is certain that he was not intoxicated when Froelich met him.

Yesterday afternoon Froelich came to Plainfield and went to the home of the Kelley's. There he turned over a revolver that he said he had taken from young Kelley for fear that he might do something desperate. He told the story of meeting with young Kelley and how the latter was drunk. He gave the impression that Kelley was inclined to be violent. He asked if they had heard anything of Kelley since and on receiving a negative reply, produced a newspaper with an account of the finding of the unknown body in the Waverly yards.

The description of the supposed murdered man answered to that of young Kelley and the father immediately prepared to investigate. He also notified the police of the facts.

When Froelich went to the North avenue station at 7 o'clock, he was met by Sergeant Kiely who placed him under arrest and locked him up as a witness in the case. He is still in the city jail awaiting developments in the case. While it is not believed that he was implicated in the death of his friend, the police believe that he can throw some light on the mystery.

Later last evening the elder Kelley and Sergeant Kiely took the train for Newark where they went to the morgue and identified the body as that of James J. Kelley. No money was found in the dead man's clothes. When Froelich was arrested, he was searched but no money or anything to throw light on the mystery was found about him.

This afternoon it was learned that last Tuesday morning Kelley and Fredelich met at Joseph Carbone's fruit store on North avenue. The former produced a letter which he had, from all appearances, received from a Newark girl. He read it and the two boys laughed at intervals. At this time Kelley told Carbone that he was going to Newark to buy a fruit stand. The next morning, Wednesday, Kelley stopped at Carbone's place about 8 o'clock and purchased a glass of milk. He then told the proprietor that he was going to Newark. He went down town and about 10 o'clock in the same morning Carbone saw Kelley running up North avenue toward the station to catch a trian. That was the last time Carbone saw Kelley.

Thursday morning Mr. Carbone went to the station to take the 7:27 train to New York. At the station he met Froelich. The latter asked him if he had seen Kelley. Carbone replied by telling Froelich that he had gone to Newark. The boy's reply was "Jim is foolish."

When Froelich saw Kelley's parents yesterday afternoon he told them that he had left their son at the corner of Broad and Grand streets at about 10 o'clock Wednesday night, but he declined to say what had transpired in the meantime except the incident of his securing control of the revolver.

The elder Kelley was seen by a Press reporter and the former said that he believed that his son had been murdered for his money. He thought the poison found in his body had been administered while taking a drink.

When the body was discovered by William Terry, a watchman of the railroad company, the right arm was bent at the elbow, and the left arm extended, the fingers of that hand being bent, as if the man had died in great pain. The left leg was slightly drawn up and the whole body was twisted toward the right.

The clothing consisted of a light brown mixed goods suit, evidently of custom make and good quality; patent leather shoes, and of size "6 F;" blue and white checked neglige shirt, four-in-hand purple necktie, with fine gold polka dots, ready made and having on it the tag "Woodull & Martin, Plainfield, N. J;" two new flannel undershirts, with double breasted shield fronts; cotton drawers and grey cotton socks. Near the body in the frieght car was found a black alpine hat of good quality, of size 7, but with no identifying mark. The body and everything on it indicated a person who took care of himself.

In the pockets of the clothing were found a cigar, part of a package of cigarettes, a button, a clean white silk handkerchief and a white linen handkerchief, neither of which bears any mark. In fact, there was nothing on the body which could lead to its identification, except, possibly, the necktie.

When Terry, the watchman, saw the body in the car by the light from his lantern he thought it was a man asleep—a not uncommon occurrence. Failing to arouse him Terry climbed into the car and caught hold of him. As he did so he saw blood on the floor and what was apparently a bullet wound in the back of the man's head. The man was dead. Terry promptly notified the Newark police authorities, declaring the case to be another murder. The body was taken to Newark and the police went to work on the case, having in mind the recent murder of Frank Woods, a young Baltimore lad, near the same place by tramps; the later shooting of Thomas Ponder, a Jersey City colored lad, and the even more reeent killing of one man and dangerous wounding of another near Trenton by tramps.

Superficial examinations of the head of Kelly by police officials, newspaper men and the attaches of the morgue left no doubt that the wound almost in the middle of the back of the head had been caused by a bullet. In the hat found near the body was a hole, evidently made by a bullet, and corresponding to the location of the wound in the head.

When County Physician Washington began an autopsy yesterday afternoon he discovered almost instantly that the wound in the back of the

THE THIRD GOES SOUTH.

VOLUNTEERS ON THEIR WAY TO GARRISON DUTY IN CUBA.

Left Pompton Plains Yesterday to go to Athens, Ga., From Where They Will go to the Scenes of the Late Conflict.

The Third New Jersey Volunteer regiment started from Pompton Plains yesterday for Athens, Ga When the news reached the men last night that they were to go South there were many disappointed, for they thought that, as the regiment did not move Thursday, the time selected for the departure, it was the intention of the War Department to muster out the command.

Its last night near the powder works in Pompton was a very disagreeable one, for the rain came down in torrents and formed pools outside the lines.

The boys were up at daybreak, and at once began the work of taking down their tents and packing up their traps. These were loaded on the trains in waiting, and the section trains, with thirteen hundred men of the regiment started during the forenoon. The command went to Jersey City over the Greenwood Lake railroad, and in Jersey City the trains were switched to the Pennsylvania tracks and the run to Athens was over the Pennsylvania system. The men had fifteen days' rations with them. They expect to do garrison duty in Cuba.

In the Third Regiment are about twenty Plainfielders. The majority of them are young fellows, unmarried, who did not give up lucrative positions to enlist, and it is not considered as great a hardship for them to leave the country for garrison duty as it might be under different circumstances. There were none of them, however, that were anxious to go to Cuba, but as long as they were to be retained in the service they were glad to get away from the camp they have been quartered in since last summer.

A THANKSGIVING SOCIABLE.

Decorations Were Suitable to the Season of the Year.

Another of those unique sociables given at intervals at the Congregational church was held last night, and it was called a Thanksgiving sociable. The name was not so odd, but the decorations and the refreshments furnished were the interesting features.

The sociable was held in the Sunday-school room which was decorated in a real old-fashioned way. Pumpkins, peppers, apples, corn, and other autumn fruits and vegetables were placed about the room and bunches of autumn flowers stood on tables, making a homelike appearance. At first the only light was that given by Jack-o-lanterns hung from the ceiling. The gas was turned down very low until Rev. C. L Goodrich started to read a Thanksgiving story by Hezekiah Butterworth, entitled "The Courting Stick."

The refreshments consisted of pumpkin pies, crullers and coffee, which were served by the young men. The sociable was under the auspices of the Women' Association, the ladies being immediately concerned being Mrs. A C. LaBoyteaux and Mrs. E. Messersmith. The fruit and vegetables left, after the sociable was over, were distributed to the poor.
